FAVORS RADICAL MEASURES

Mayor Bemis Threatens to Proceed Against the Street Railway Company.

SAYS IT HAS FORFEITED ITS FRANCHISE

Orders Issued to the Company and Property Owners -- Weather Bureau Promises-How the Dump Dwellers Stood the Blizzard-The Storm Aftermath.

The Omaha Street Railway company stands in a position where the officers of the concern are liable to hear something drop if the lines are not open to travel within a very short time

It is seldom that Mayor Bemis allows himself to become angry, but when he reached his office yesterday morning he was in that condition and frame of mind. He had waded through a foot of snow, along the sidewalks of some of the wealthlest and most prominent citizens of the city, and then when he reached the tracks of the Omaha Street Rail-reached the tracks of the Omaha Street Rail-way company, he found them buried beneath the snow, while hundreds of the residents were plodding along, trying to get down town as best they could. As soon as the mayor closed the door of his office behind him, he sent for City Attorney Connell and a consultation was held. The consultation was over the city charter, the city ordinances and the newer of the mayor consultation was over the city charter, the city ordinances and the power of the mayor. The meeting, or consultation, was satisfac-tory to both of the city officials, and when it was over, the mayor said that two things had been decided upon. One was that he would at once issue an order to the street commis-sioner to hire a force of men and put them at work clearing the snow from the sidewalks. He was sure that this could be done and that Work clearing the show from the sidewalks. He was sure that this could be done and that the expense could be charged against the property and collected the same as any other tax. The order would not apply to the non-residents, but would apply to all property owners, whether they were residents of Omaha or New York.

Too Big for the Neglect. Omaha, the mayor said, had got out of its swaddling clothes and there was no use of allowing the people to think that the town was still an overgrown country town. The thing had gone far enough and if people wanted to own property they would have to comply with the provisions and terms of the ordinances. The ordinances gave the city power to make the citizens do certain things, and, if they did not do those things, the authorities would have to take hold and enforce the laws of the city.

When asked what he proposed to do, the mayor said that he would not wait for the spirit to move the mud-sills who had an idea that they were living in the back woods, but that he had already issued his orders, and that they were for the street commissioner to hire as many men as he could work. The men would be put onto the sidewalks in the heart of the city and that when these walks were cleaned, they would be transferred to the outskirts where they would be employed until all of the sidewalks were cleared of the accumulation of snow. Upon the subject of the negligence of the street railway to open its lines the mayor said that in his opinion the time for action was most opportune. That company had one of the most valuable franchises within the gift of the city and was doing nothing to instant it may be doing mothing to furprotect it, nor was it doing anything to fur-nish the public with the accommodation that it had guaranteed. It was true there had been a bad storm, but it was over and the company was not attempting to turn a wheel.

What Might Have Happened.

"Look at it," continued the mayor. "Last night was a beautiful night, with the moon shining and the weather almost as mild as summer. What did this great corporation do? Absolutely nothing. It simply rested on its cars, apparently waiting for warm weather to melt the snow off its lines. This morning the situation is unchanged.

"At a rough estimate 20,000 people were compelled to walk to their labors or places of business, while the officials of this bonded corporation sat around their fires and watched the people wade through the drifts

"If the company was doing anything today there would not be so much cause for com-plaint, but is is not, nor does it show any ev-idence of possessing any life. It is true that

Bemis has officially proclaimed that coasting may be indulged in on the following streets: St. Mary's avenue, from Ninetcenth to Twenty-fourth streets: Poppleton avenue, from Twenty-sixth to Twenty-ninth streets; Twenty-second street, from Davenport to Webster streets, and on Hamilton street, from Twenty-fifth to Twenty-ninth streets. On the above named streets the boys can coast to their heart's content, without a pocoast to their heart's content, without a po-liceman daring to make them afraid, but if they are caught on any of the other streets of the city they will be liable to arrest.

After the Storm.

After the storm. Sheriff Bennett has published an official announcement that he has decided not to open the Dundee Place motor line. He says that he has no authority to put any money into the plant for the purpose of improving the line or in making extensions. He an-nounces, however, that if the people living along the line of the road will shovel the snow off the track and out of the cuts he will see that the road is operated until the will see that the road is operated until the day of the sale. The street commissioner has acted in accordance with the instructions of the Board of Public Works and has employed a large force of men who have been put to work cleaning the snow from the viaducts. The police have notified all of the resident The police have notified an of the resident property owners to clean the snow from their walks. Violations of the order will result in arrests. In the case of nonresidents the cleaning will be done by the street commis-sioner's gang and the expense charged against the property, to be collected as a special tax. special tax. Sheriff Bennett has invested in two dozen pairs of rubber boots and has set the inmates of the county jail to cleaning the snow from the court house grounds. The sewer contractors who laid off their men yesterday on account of the storm today doubled their forces and went to work with the determination of closing up all of their contracts at the earliest possible date. Today

Some People Say the Colored Evangelist is a Monumental Fraud.

FROM THE GRILL ROOM TO THE PULPIT How a Cook Came to Be a Preacher, Though Opposed by Many of His Race-

Says He Can Stand the Persecution. There is an alleged evangelist new holding neetings at the Zion Baptist church who has attracted to himself a great deal of unwelcome attention. His name is Albert Mack. To this he has added the title of "National King and President of the Colored Young Men's Christian association of the United States." He dresses in the garb of an Episcopalian clergyman and professes to be deeply interested in the salvation of the colored race and in the success of the colored Young Men's Christian association work in the United States in particular. He is a large, robust negro, evidently very ignorant as to book learning, but somewhat skilled in the art of proying upon the credulity of the colored people in such a manner as to secure very satisfactory returns in a financial way. The alleged "king" has recently received several exhaustive exposures in the Louisville Courier-Journal and in the Young Men's Era, published in Chicago, but he keeps right on in his self sacrificing efforts to evangelize the

in his self sacrificing efforts to evangelize the African world. Mr. Mack was formerly a cook in a grill room and saloon in Louisville, but in 1885 he decided to change his occupation and inci-dentally the character of his life. He be-came interested in the colored Young Men's Christian association then being organized in Louisville. A few years after the organized Christian association then being organized in Louisville. A few years after the organ-ization of the Young Men's Christian associa-tion in Louisville Mr. Mack became very prominent in the work, and several of the leading workers, not liking Mr. Mack, drew out of the association and it fell to the ground. But "King" Mack was not to be buried in the fall, for he soon came to the front with a call for a national convention of colored delegates for the purpose of organ-izing a national association. izing a national association.

King Mack's Conquering Course.

There seems to be a difference of opinion There seems to be a difference of opinion as to whether the convention ever really convened. Mr. Mack says it did and that the organization started out with flattering prospects and with him at the head of it. He prospects and with him at the head of it. He has been at the head of it all right ever since. In fact he has been about all there is or ever has been to it. He has gone from town to town representing that he was giv-ing his valuable time and talents to the perfecting of the National Colored Young Men's Christian association with head-quarters at Louisville, and that he was mak-ing a special effort to collect funds with which to put up a fine building that would cost $40,000. In the circular which "King" Mack sends to the brethren where he in-tends to hold meetings he announces that he has collected $0,000, and that he must have a has collected $6,000, and that he must have a great deal more before the national head-quarters building will be commenced. He goes right ahead making collections for the alleged purpose of putting up this imaginary building building. Mack has also been exposed as a fraud by the Memphis Free Lance and his alleged conventions have been declared to exist only in his own imagination. He has operated at Minnenpolis, Evansville, Cincinnatti, St. Louis, Cairo and several other places. the show of an attempt is being made to open the Farnam street line, but who and how many men is the company working? Possibly fifty men and those who are the regu-lar employes of the road. At the rate of speed at which the company is now prosecuting the work the public may expect that the system will be in operation by the middle of next July, but not much before that time. "If the company had worked as street railway companies do in other cities there would have been hundreds of men working all last night, and this morning the lines would have been open and the public would have been accom-modated.

"Look at the injustice of the course that this company has pursued in this matter. There are many hundreds of people who reside in Walnut Hill and those northreside in Walnut Hill and those north-western suburbs. Then there are hundreds of others who work in the South Omaha packing houses who have lost the day simply because they could not get to their work. It is a shame and a disgrace and if the people will stand by me I propose to show the Omaha Street Railway company that it cannot run the city; I propose to show that the Omaha Street Railway company cannot use its own discretion as to when and how it will run its cars."

how it will run its cars." "What will you do?" was asked of the chief executive of the city.

"One thing, and only one thing," an-swered the mayor, "and that will be to take stops to declare the charter forfeited."

"When will you do this?" was next asked. "At once. I have consulted with the city attorney and we have now come to the con clusion that the city has the right to step in and have a say in this matter. Omaha is capable of running a street railway, and if this corporation does not propose to live up to the conditions of the terms of its contract with the city now is the time for the city to demand its rights. We are running a light-ing franchise, and we find that we are doing good work and are doing it at actual cost."

A Street Car Official Talks.

A street car offent rains. When questioned Secretary Goodrich of the Street Railway company said that he had absolutely nothing to say. He thought that the severity of the storm and the condition of the streets was a sufficient explanation. When he was im-formed that there was a good deal of disat-traction because the tracks was not of disatisfaction because the tracks were not cleared last night, he said that their men had been at work all night. In fact, most of the men were nearly worn out. He did not have any idea when the lines would be in operation. The system was an extensive one and it would take some time. "We are just as anxious as anyone to get the tracks clear," he concluded, "for we are losing money every minute while the lines are blockaded."

Mr. Mack was seen yesterday by a re-porter for The BEE. He was at the Progress office, and when the reporter entered the evangelist was reading a two-column roast evangelist was reading a two-column roast of himself—printed a few days ago in the Louisville Courier-Journal. When asked about the apparent unpleasantness of the situation Mr. Mack only laughed. "I can stand it," he said. "This whole matter has come about through the jealousy of a let of adapt folks down in Louisville.

They got jealous because I took the lead on the bear of a lot of colored folks down in Louisville. They got jealous because I took the lead in the local organization, and from the very day I began to organize the national association they began to kick and they have been kicking ever since. Then the international com-mittee of the Young Men's Christian asso-ciation has made a fight against me.

The fact of the matter is just this: When I first began to take an interest in the Young Men's Christian association work the colored men of Louisville had no show at the volored men of Louisville had no show at the Young Men's Christian association at nll. And even today if a colored man should go into the white men's Young Men's Christian as-sociation in Louisville he would either be led out or kleked out. My success in organizing the colored people aroused the jealousy of some of the colored men and the hatred of some of the colored men and the harred of the white men and that is the whole secret of the fight that is being made against me. But let them go ahead. Let them arrest me if they wish to. If they jump onto me once they will get off a good deal quicker than they got on, I can tell you that. I am no thief. If any of these folks who are making such a fies aheat me 1 tell you that. 1 am no thief. If any of these folks who are making such a fuss about me think I am a thief let them have me arrested once. 1 am not going to run out of their way. They can't hurt me and I shall keep right on in my work. The colored people of Omaha believe that I am all right as you will see by reading the Progress tomorrow."
