DAILY BEE NEWS FROM COUNCIL BLUFFS

Member Wells Drops in at the Meeting of the Board of Education.

SOMETHING OF A SENSATION RESULTS

He Charges President Walte with Having Removed a Report on the School Book Question Referred the Matter to a Committee.

Hon. Lucius Wells has a pleasant way of turning up at meetings of the school board Just often enough to stir up a muss with the other members and keep them in a blissful state of uncertainty as to what is about to happen. Last evening, after missing several meetings, he was present, and the hearts of his fellows were filled with a vague unrest and a longing to know how the democratic minority would distinguish itself at this time. The longing was soon gratified,

Mr. Wells stated that a bill had been allowed by the board at a previous meeting which was all wrong. Bids were advertised for putting in a new heating apparatus at the Avenue B school house last May, and the advertisement was answered by two local firms, Shugart & Co., whose bid was $795, and P. C. Devol, whose bid was $475. In spite of the fact that the statutes provide that contracts shall be let to the lowest bidder, the board awarded the contract to Shugart. He then offered a resolution, the sub stance of which was that Singart & Co. be requested to pay to the board $22, that being the amount in excess of the lowest bid. Bridenstein at once arese and was going to say that Devol had admitted on the day when the contract was awarded that his bid had not met the requirements of the adverind not met the requirements of the advertisement, when Stacy called him down by moving that the matter be laid over until the text regular meeting in order that the majority might pest itself up so as to be on a par with the eminerity. Wells seconded the motion, which was manimously carried.

Two or three matters of minor importance were then emisitored such as a minorism the were then considered, such as ordering the secretary to pay off the teachers next Pri### few times, and then there was a storm. One on the President.

He called attention to the fact that the report which he as president of the board, had made at the close of last year, rendered with reference to the school books, was still missing, after repeated requests made by him to President Waite that it be returned, and then asked Waite if he had found it yet.

Waite replied that he had not.
"Then, Mr. President," said Wells, "I demand, in the name of the taxpayers, that it be returned at once to the secretary, who is the only custodian. It has been six months since that report was picked up from that table by you, and it has not yet been re-turned. It is the only record of the school book transaction we have. I move the adoption of this resolution.

The resolution contained the statement of Mr. Wells as above given, and requested President Waite return it to the secretary. "I will second that," said Field, "if you will add the clause, if he has the report in his resolution."

"I hardly think that clause is necessary, "replied Wells. "If he hasn't the report in his possession he can't return it, of course. But he took it from the table, and so he is responsible for its return."

"But you can't prove that I ever had it," said Waite, as he lay back in his chair and glared at Wells. glared at Wells.

This was just what Wells had wanted, for quiek as a flash he jerked a paper from his pocket and commenced to read. It was an affidavit from Ed E. Wright, who was secretary of the board last year, and in it Wright stated that the report had been removed from the table by Waite before he had had time to record it. He had requested Waite several times to return it, and Waite always several times to return it, and Waite always agreed to until one time he became nettled and said he wouldn't return it until he got ready.

"I want that returned," thundered Wells. spring maligned two of the best citizens Council Bluffs has ever had, ever tries to injure my character, the records may show the facts." "so that if the miserable wretch who last

"Oh, well, gentlemen," said the president, "this is all buncombe; there is a copy of the report or record." There is no report on record," replied

Wells. "You took it away before it was en-tered upon the record." "What if it isn't on record?" said Waite; we can get the bookseller's statement and you can make out another report, and if it's all right I'll certify to it again."

After considerable talk and back talk which was not very dignified but rather interesting to the spectators, the question was referred to a special committee with instruc-tions to report at the next regular meeting.

BILGER WAS A FORGER.

He Used His Educated but Unscrupulous Pen Vigorously.

W. W. Bilger has disappeared and numerous friends are looking for him with a sickly. far-away look in their eyes that would change to a flendish glee if he would suddenly present himself to view. He was last seen in Omaha on Friday and since his departure a number of gentlemen have discovered that they are the victims to a too implicit confidence in Mr. Bilger's veracity and to Mr. Bilger's wonderful facility in manipulating the pen. Ben Marks was the first man to find that he had been played for a sucker. He met Bilger in Omaha on Friday and was pre-sented a check for $100 which Bilger wanted him to cash. It bore the signature of J. R. Snyder of this city. Marks did not have the money, but he went with Bilger to William Lineberger who cashed the check on Mark's recommendation. The check was thrown out at the Citizens State bank as a

It was then developed that Bilger had been doing a land office business in the forgery line. A note coming due in six months from date has been sent down to the First National bank for collection from the Waverly bank. The six months expired last Tuesday. When the three days of grace were up it went to protest and notices were sent to all the signers. Among them were F. M. Bilger, the father of W. W. Bilger, and his son-in-law, W. C. Acker of Harlan. They both sent back word that they had signed such a note. The signature of A. F. Cosgrove, Bilger's aunt, is also there, but she claims to have been disabled by paralysis for a long time past, and says it is a forgery, likewise.

Used His Pen Vigorously. A. A. Clark, who runs a chattel loan business, came to the front yesterday with note for $2,000 bearing the names of F. Bilger and A. F. Cosgrove, together with a number of others. He took it as collateral security for a loan of 8550 made about a week ago. The loan was further secured by a chattel mortgage on all of Bilger's household goods, which Clark supposed were worth more than the loan. When Bilger bor-rowed the money he begged Clark not to compel Mrs. Bilger to sign the mortgage on the ground that she was nervous and he did not want her to know that he had been compelled to borrow the money. Yesterday morning, after hearing of Bilger's disap-pearance, he called at the house for the purpose of taking possession of the house-hold goods. Mrs. Bilger would not allow him to take the stuff away, showing a bill of sale that had been executed by Bilger in her favor transferring to her all the household goods. It had not been placed on record, but as the law provides that a bill of sale need not be recorded where it remains in the hands of the mortgagee, Mr. Clark at once saw that he had been swindled out of he whole amount of the loan.

H. J. Chambers also holds a note for $2,000. bearing the signature of Bilger's father. He spent yesterday in Oakland, the residence of Bilger's father, trying to induce the old man #### to make some sort of a settlement. His Business Methods.

Bilger jumped into the real estate business in the spring of 1888, when the boom in real estate was just starting, bought up a large amount of property for speculating purposes and built a number of houses. The lots were mortgaged for a good share of their purchase price, and the houses were plastered with mechanics' liens and mort-gages before they were finished. Several of the houses have been empty for months at a time, and those that were occupied were not a source of revenue to their alleged owner, as the rent was gobbled up on attachments of various kinds by his creditors. In order to keep up his payments and secure money enough to live on he had to borrow. As he had no property that would be taken as security by loan agents he commenced to use the name of his father, who is a comfortably fixed farmer living near Oakland, this state, and whose name was supposed to be good for any moderate amount. That he was a forzer was not suspected by anyone until within the last few days. To add to the uncertainty of his financial condition, it s stated by those who claim to know, that he has been gambling heavily in Omaha lately.

His friends say he was naturally a hustler, and liked to make money hand over fist. The constant demands made upon him by his creditors hurt his feelings, and he resorted to almost every device he could think of to make some money, with the above result. He made considerable money last fall on Chicago wheat, but didn't know enough to mill out at the right time, and consequently. all out at the right time, and consequently st all he had won and a good deal more be inst all he had wer and a good deal more be-sides. It has always been said by those who watched his career that if he could make his real estate schemes work satisfactorily he would come out $15,000 or $100,000 ahead of the game, but if not he would be com-pletely rained.

His attorney, Games W. Hennet

His attorney, George W. Hewett, says he has gone to Mexico, and it is undoubtedly Ben Marks' money that took him there. He is supposed to have started Friday night.
Mrs. Bilger first received word from him stating that he had started for Des Moines.
but later on she received a letter, the contents of which she refuses to divulge.

A trade was made several months ago by which Coyle disposed of his store at Cut-off island to Pyburn and Hodson for a $400 note island to Pyblini and Houson for a $400 note, which, it is alleged. Pyblini and Hodson represented was secured by a mortgage on a house and lot in Omaha. Later, the plaintiff claims, he found that there was no mortgage on the house, no house on the lot and no lot anywhere that answer the de-scription of the one Pyburn and Hodson claimed to sell. The defendants, on the other hand, claim not to have made any representations as to the house, lot and mort gage. The case was not completed at the our of adjournment, but will be resumed

Yesterday was the day set for a trial of the cases of the state against Kimball and Champ, charged with embezzlement. As already stated, a motion for a continuance had been filed by the county attorney, on the ground that George F. Gage, the prosecut-ing witness, could not be induced to come from Boston to prosecute. Judge Smith overruled the motion, whereupon County Attorney Organ stated that he could not try the cases without Gage. They were accordingly dismissed by the court for want of prosecution, and an order was entered upon the record discharging the defendants and exonerating their bondsmen.
