valley of the Platte to Fort Laramie, thence across the Black Hills and up the South Platte, we toiled on slowly and without any particular incident.

We crossed the Rockies at "South Pass," and shortly came to Pacific spring, the first water flowing westward. We were now in a land of alkali beds, gravel, bottle rock, sand dunes, sage brush, snakes, horned toads, lizards, tarantulas, and everything that goes to make a firstclass desert land.

I should have said that after crossing the Missouri river our company had been joined by other companies, and had become quite strong in numbers.

At Big Sandy creek, where we camped at noon, two Kentuckians, who joined us, and who were partners in the team they drove, had a quarrel over their private affairs. Their names were Colonel Bosley and Major Beal. The war of words between the two being over, we proceeded. Two days brought us to what was called "Lost River." At this place we took a vote of the company, and determined to camp until noon of the next day. The country was full of hostile Indians, and there was some opposition to our delaying so long. Here Bosley, Beal and the writer went fishing. We caught a fine trout, and that evening the Kentuckians invited me to eat supper with them. We divided the trout between us and enjoyed it. The best of feeling seemed to exist all around, and I then little dreamed of the terrible tragedy to which the three of us should be parties in a few brief hours.

Early the next morning I was awakened by loud and angry talk. I got up and found a heated dispute going on about breaking camp at once. I said, "I thought this thing was settled yesterday -that we were to stay here until noon. The talk quieted down. But Bosley was determined to go on. He went out and got his two mules, and with the assistance of another man began to harness the animals. Beal asked, "What are a going to d

"He then made a request of me that I take charge of some letters he would write, and deposit them in the postoflice at Sacramento.

I promised to do so. He then asked me to remain with him through the night. I told him I could not. I was greatly weighed down by the strain of he whole affair and with fatigue, and I told him I would have to have some rest. The next morning I visited him early. I found him dressed in a fine broadcloth suit, white shirt and black cravat. He was a fine looking man in features and physical build. I looked upon him and thought: "Dressed for eternity in this wild and ragged desert land." He gave me three letters and told me that each contained a lock of hair, one to his mother, one to his wife and one to his brother. These were messengers to bear the sad news that would break the hearts of loved ones in Kentucky.

The hour of execution came. Should I live 10,000 years I c uld not forget the scene that then transpired All the teams were ordered to drive on with the women and children, one man only was stationed with each wagon; all the other men were retained. The Oregon captain ordered all present to form in a half circle. A few refused to do so, whereupon they were commanded by the captain to toe the mark or leave the ground. All then formed in line except myself. I waded a slough near by and stood on a high point. I was determined to watch the proceedings, but would not consent to participate in them.

Twelve men were drawn by ballot to act as executioners. One of the party volunteered to load the twelve rifles. He was instructed to retire from observation and load six rifles with powder and ball and six with powder only. After leading the guns the man left them were they were and departed. The prisoner was held under guard out fifty yards distant down the road. Two men were sent to bring the guns, which were placed in the hands of the twelve men, who were then marched into line to the place where the prisoner awaited death. The rest of the party took up places in file on each side of the road. The captain said to Bosley, "What is your distance?" The doomed man re-plied, "Twelve steps." The captain then said, "Step off your ground." "I cannot do it; you do it for me."

ing figures of yesterday. It was estimated that there might be an increase of about 250, 600 bu, in the visible supply, though some par-tics do not look for any increase and possibly a slight reduction. A year ago there was a de-crease of 362,000 bu. After a short buying wave, led by Cudahy and Boyden, the corn crowd were inclined to talk of the big reserves of corn at interior points with some operators contending that stocks at country stations are unusually heavy and pressing for an outlay. No. 3 corn was said to be dull and depressed at the sca-board as well as in the west, and offers to de-liver in Liverpool at a low price were not ac-cepted.

board as well as in the west, and offers to de-liver in Liverpool at a low price were not ac-cepted. The estimated receipts for Monday are 325 rars, and this suggested a liberal movement from first hands next week and started free selling. Orders were largely of that character and the support was feelle at any time. Their support was small. Outside domestic markets were steady to firm. The local out inspection opens shippers expect to move out liberal conntities. Oats opened a shade better, but there was fair realizing by longs and values receded 'se, with but few reactions, and the close was easy at about the lowest figures and a net loss of 'se. About the only support came from shorts. The action in the provision market was good buying of pork for Cudaby. Wright had brokers bidding for stuff also. Hately's bid for lard, but the market opened with a de-cided firmness and a good recovery from the break of yesterday occurred. There was good buying of pork for Cudaby. Wright had brokers bidding for stuff also. Hately's bid for lard, but the market moved away from them on buying by others for July and September. Some of the advance was lost after 11 o'clock and after midday the market took a similar down turn to that of Friday. Local longs resumed the rading and unloading. The outside holdings came out on stop orders and these who bought for a scalp early were quick sellers. The hogs were lost sight of. Beceipts were but 7,000, yet products sold off as if a great run was in sight. Closing prices were at some recovery. Estimated, receipts for Monday: Wheat, 426 cars; corn, 325 cars; oats, 200 cars; hogs, 18,000 head.

EDYSPEPSIAE

"I am going on," was his partner's reply.

'I am not," was Beal's quiet answer. Bosley having hitched his mules to the wagon, drove out of camp, taking the two young men with him, Dave Dye and Steve Deems. Besley and Beal were under contract to take these men to California. Bosley in this manner left Beal with a pair of mules and harness. Beal applied to me and my partner, Mr. Gray. conveyance to California. We took him on condition that he do an equal share of camp duty, and that we have the use of his mules,

There was a feeling of uncasiness in the camp after Bosley had gone, and after talking the matter over we decided to move on. This was about 10 o'clock a. m. About noon we overtook Bosley who had stopped to feed his mules. We passed him, and soon came to a very steep hill. My team was in the lead Beal was driving it, and I was riding a small mule. When we gained the top of the hill I told Beal to wait for the other teams to come up. I dismounted from my mule and Beal got down from the wagon. Just at this time Bosley ap peared at the top of the hill, riding a mare and carrying a double-barreled shotgun on the horn of his saddle. He H rode up quickly, his eyes flashing intense anger, and demanded:

"Major, are you going to leave me in this kind of a way?"

Beal replied firmly: "Yes, sir, I am." Bosley instantly raised his gun, muttering something I could not understand. and fired. Beal received the charge in his left breast. I sprang forward to save the man's life, but not in time. I grasped the muzzle of Bosley's gun and held it down, but the fatal messenger had sped. I commanded Bosley to surrender. Still holding the gun by the barrels, I tried to wrest it from him, and in the effort pulled him out of the saddle. Then ensued a terrible struggle between us for the gun. Bosley retained his hold upon it. He was a large, muscular fellow, and he was in a fronzy. He cocked the lock on the loaded barrel and pushed me backward, all the time endeavoring to bring the gun in range with my body, while I was struggling as desperately hold the muzzle on the ground. In this way he ran me back to some brambles. My feet became entangled and 1 fell en my hands and knees, Bosley covering my head and shoulders with his breast and throwing his arms around me. still held to the gun. I called for help. I shouted murder! No one came to my relief. The rest of the company was not in sight. My legs were crossed. I was powerless. I kept on struggling, and at last got my feet squarely under me. With all my strength I suddenly raised erect, lifting Bosley off his feet, throwing him over my head and wrenching the gun from his hands.

As soon as I was clear from Bosley ! ran to Beal, raised him up and reposed him against a clump of sage brush. He was beyond human aid. His heart was riddled with buckshot. He died without saying a word. Our entire train was soon on the scene, and shortly there ar-rived another ox train of fifty men. We buried Beal and piled up a menument of recks over his grave. Besley was put under guard and we all traveled cu, the Besley was put object being to join another large immigration train, and with this increased number of men to hold a council and determine what should be done with Bosley.

On June 13, 1852, we found a mule train from Pennsylvania, bound for Oregon, and some packers. We met at Hams Fork of the Green river. We now had at least 100 men in the crowd. It did not take long for the leaders of

New York Dry Goods Market. New York, Feb. 25.—There was a very fair Saturday trade in dry goods. Quite a number of buyers were in the market and increased interest was disclosed. Along with the more interest was disclosed. Along with the more general filling in requests there were inquiries and negotiations looking to more important transactions in the near future. Goods are so weak that sellers are more or less indifferent. Wid's sheetings and fine bleached goods are sold months ahead, as are some brown cottons, dress cottons and silks. Leading makes of anything are difficult to get for spot delivery, and there is considerable shipping for substitutes. The whole market tone continues strong and waiting upon de-velopments with disturbers.

Chicago Live Starz Market. CHICAGO, III., Feb. 25.—[Special Telegram to THE BEEL—The cattle trade was quiet with a firm feeling prevailing. Only about 1,500 head were received and they were closed out on a basis of yesterany's quotations. Steers were salable at from $3.40 to $60; stockers and feed-ers at from $3.40 to $60; stockers and feed-ers at from $3.40 to $60; stockers and bulls at from $1.50 to $4 25, and cows and bulls at from $1.50 to $4 25, and cows and bulls at from $1.50 to $4 for poor to extra qualities. Hogs continued to go down. They showed a further decline of about 10c to 15c per 100 Ibs., making a loss for the week of from 45c to 60c. There was only a restricted demand from local packers, and as shipping orders were few the small supply appeared to be ade-quate. Most of the hogs sold Jelow $7.55 and $8.15 was the top of the market. Quotations are from $7.40 to $7.70 for light, from $7.50 to $7.95 for mixed and medium and from $7.50 to $8.15 for heavy. Pigs and culls sold any-where between $4.50 and $7.25. Sheep were principally bought up at fully Fri-day's prices. Good to cholcesorts were salable at from $4.60 to $5.25, and poor to fair grades were quoted at from $3.25 to $4.40. $3.95 of lambs were on a basis of from $4.25 to $6.25, which is an advance.
