

FEBRUARY TERM CLOSED

District Court Judges Wind Up the Day Ends of Justice.

PEOPLE WHO WANT TO BE DIVORCED

They Find the Matrimonial Yoke Too Heavy and Sigh for Single Blessedness Once More—Setting Two Estates.

The air of jubilation that pervaded the district court rooms yesterday was in striking contrast to the somber and active activity of the term of court just closed. During the day Judge Ogden presided and heard a few motions for new trials, after which he called it a day and then engaged in giving some of his friends some pointers on the color of the hair of the man who would succeed Ben S. Baker as United States attorney.

Judge Ferguson took time to dispose of an ex parte matter and then announced that on either Wednesday or Thursday he would decide the union depot injunction case that was argued before him some days ago and then taken under advisement.

Judge Scott was on hand at an early hour to raise the appearance of his court room and to continue the matter of taking up a new carpet and a coat of paint cannot retard the dealing out of justice, even if it does cost the county a few dollars. While looking at the ceiling Judge Scott told the lawyers that he had just returned from Long Pine, to which place he went last week to land a mess of fish. He declared that in his efforts he had succeeded admirably and that for the next month he would live on brain producing diet, the result of a catch by his own hand. The facts are, though, told in the quiet, that the judge did bring home a fine string of fish, but they were bought at a Sixth-street market and after he had reached his home.

Judge Keyser sat upon the bench in the large court room for a time and announced that on Thursday morning he would take up and dispose of a number of cases which sundry persons are charged with having violated the city ordinance. During his attention to other cases were confined to the reading of the report of the bar committee, which recommended that some young lawyers be turned forth to prey upon the fat of the land. The report set forth the fact that the following named young gentlemen had been examined in legal lore and that none of them had been found wanting: E. J. Moran, K. A. Jones, T. L. McNeill, L. E. Whittey, L. A. Fath, Sherman Wilcox and George M. Cooper. All these hold up their hands, swear that they would support the constitution of the United States, well and truly try the cases which might be placed with them and do their duty as lawyers.

Two Miserable Marriages. Copies Who Want the Courts to Make Them Two Again.

Albert E. Dickinson and his wife Lizzie have just learned that they are the parties to a misadventure and they have appealed to the court for a legal separation.

In this particular case the husband is the one who has come to the front with the tale of woe. He avers that as long ago as 1886 he led the wife to the altar and that for a number of years she was a kind and industrious helpmeet, though possessed with a temper of her own. Getting down to the merits in the case, he alleges not very long ago, when they lived in the seaside town of Atlantic City, N. J., Mrs. Dickinson hit him a violent blow and then spit in his face. He did not complain, but last February he did, for at that time he alleges that the wife threw knives at his head and told him that she was nearly ready to kill him. He says she never killed him, he swears that at one time, not very long ago, and since their residence in this city, he said, and that in the presence of some of the neighbors, that he was a lazy loafer and that which would disgrace him until he would be willing to go out and commit suicide.

This kind of treatment Mr. Dickinson says he stood until last Thursday, when Mrs. Dickinson added the straw that broke the camel's back, as it were. Upon that occasion he alleges that she threw a cup of coffee in his face, and then threw out the playful remark, "I'll kill you." Dickinson could stand knives and such kinds of things, but he drew the line on hot coffee, and now he is in the divorce divisions of the district court.

Sarah J. Keen and her husband James are two people who have just discovered that marriage is a mockery, a delusion and a snare and they have asked the court to step in and take a hand in the separation act. In this case the wife appears as the complaining party, and in addition to asking the decree, she wants the restoration of her maiden name, which in the days of long ago was Sarah J. Moore.

The woman in the case avers that she united her fortunes with Mr. Keen at Marysville, Mo., just two years ago, and that ever since that time she has been a pure, chaste, loving, faithful and obedient wife, while the husband has been the otherwise. The particular wicked thing of which she complains is that one year ago last March, in the presence of company, James got mad and told her to go to the place alleged to be too hot for angels' visits.

Setting Two Estates. The probate court is engaged in an attempt to unravel a tangle that ties up some of the property of the estates of Clark Woodman and Hugh G. Clark, both deceased.

Prior to the death of these two gentlemen there was a large herd of cattle being grazed in the western part of the state, which were supposed to belong to the late partner-ship. When Woodman died Clark, in partnership, claiming that there had been a loss of some $15,000, and he was entitled to the amount, as he claimed. The late Mrs. Clark was the widow of the late Mr. Clark, and she was claiming that she was partner and that the Clark estate should share one-half of this loss.

Used Shot Gun Argument. George J. Kleffner and the other heirs of the estate of George Kleffner, deceased, were before Judge Scott at an early hour yesterday morning, where they secured an injunction restraining the Union Ferry Railway company from laying a track over lot S, block 365, of the original city plat.

It seems that the Union Ferry people wanted this lot and Sunday they put a lot of men at work laying tracks and switches. Kleffner discovered the plot, and, without in hand, stood the entire day until morning, when he went into the courts.

Will Make a Fight. "We went through just such a fight as this in Cleveland years and years ago and as a result we came out the winner," said Mr. Clark, a representative of the Smead system of heating and ventilation, to a Bee reporter yesterday. "We shall convince Dr. Somers and other members of the Board of Health before we get through that the horrible things that they have heard about the Smead system being a disease breeder is all a humbug started and circulated by rival companies. Mr. Smead has telegraphed me to employ the best attorney in Omaha and fight the matter through, for we know what the result is sure to be when the truth is once established."

FEEDING IOWA PAUPERS.

One of Them Has Swindled Douglas County for seven years. For the past seven years Miss Minnie Geyini of Council Bluffs has been drawing a weekly stipend from the Douglas county poor fund and she might have continued to swindle the county for seven years more had not County Agent Burr taken a notion to investigate the case.

Just before noon this woman applied at the county office as has been her weekly custom and asked for the allowance, which in the past had been given without asking any questions. The county agent had his doubts, and in looking over his books he noticed that she was booked as one of the bottom dwellers and that for seven years she had been drawing her weekly allowance.

Mr. Geyini would have nothing of the kind, and while the agent was busy with other matters she slipped out of the door and was gone. Then Burr showed his skill as a detective, for he followed her and made his catch in the rear of the city hall, where he broke down and confessed all. She admitted that she resided in Council Bluffs, and that by lying to the different county agents had succeeded in getting food and clothes from Douglas county for years. After making this confession she was released, but with the understanding that she will be prosecuted if she ever again shows her face upon this side of the river.

Has a Guaranty, But No License. Mike Wallanz, who invested $125 in a World-Herald guaranty, last fall to secure a license, is in trouble and a complaint filed in police court by license inspector Hurd tells the story.

Wallanz failed to secure his license because he had advertised the notice of his application in the World-Herald, and since that time has been conducting a temperance drink establishment at Fourteenth and Leavenworth streets. He had a combination faucet, and by turning one way beer could be drawn and the other cider. The license inspector dropped onto the racket and Wallanz will answer to the charge of selling liquor without a license.

Grading Bonds for Sale. City Treasurer Boll will on Monday, May 15, sell district grading bonds in the sum of $97,400.

These bonds are of the issue made last fall and were not disposed of for the reason that the limit under the charter had been reached, and the city could not legally issue or sell any more bonds until the charter amendments were secured by the legislature. They are what are known as short-time bonds, in the sum of $500 each, and run from one to nine years and are issued against the property in the grading districts.

NEW SEWERS IN PROSPECTIVE

City Council Decides Where They Will Be Constructed.

ENGINEER ROSEWATER'S REPORT ADOPTED

Manderson Street and Dundee Place Sewers Will Have to Wait—Street Commissioner Squabbles With Come Up Tonight.

The city council last evening definitely decided upon the main sewers to be constructed this year and instructed the Board of Public Works to take the steps necessary to award the contracts and get the work under way. This action was taken by the adoption of a concurrent resolution, which will require Mayor Bonits' signature before it becomes operative.

As soon as the roll was called, the council went into a recess, while the Union Pacific City Engineer Rosewater submitted his report of a list of sewers which he deemed advisable to construct out of the proceeds of available bonds issued for main sewers during the present year. The report was as follows:

Main line sewer on Valley street, from Fifth to Eighteenth street, $21,137
Tenth, Twelfth, Fourteenth, Sixteenth, and Eighteenth streets, 13,945
Dundee Place, Ninth street, and the main extension from Twelfth to Twenty-first street, 9,420
Main line Grand street district, already recommended and agreed upon, 3,000
Sprague street, from First to Fourth street, 450
Chicago street extension to Fifth street, 4,000
North Omaha main sewer, 49,948

Balance remaining, $100,000. The amount absorbs all but the premiums on the bonds, which, if the same as last year, will exceed $5,000 and will doubtless be needed for extras in the construction of the work thus provided for. The amount named on the North Omaha sewer and the property complete that sewer from its present northern terminus on Twenty-seventh street to Sprague street and on Sprague to some point west of Twelfth street, depending upon the bids submitted. The report says it would have been desirable to build the Twenty-second street sewer south of Manderson street, but as stated in a special report on that case it would require $30,000 to complete it, and without completion to its northern terminus at Twelfth street would not subsolve the purpose, and as $30,000 is not at present available for sewers other than those named in these estimates, this work cannot now be undertaken.

Mr. Rosewater, in speaking of his report, said that the city had committed itself to the Valley street sewer at the time the bonds were voted to the river, as it had been condemned by the Board of Health as being unwholesome, especially the Union Pacific people and the smelting works. The additions adding Dundee Place want a sewer, out Saddle creek cannot be used as a sewer, and the Chicago street sewer would cost $30,000 to build a sewer regardless of the cost.

Hurd's counsel, upon the judgment of the engineer and made a motion to the effect that the estimate be approved and that the Board of Public Works be instructed to advertise for bids. Mr. Parker talked for Saddle creek and wanted it turned into an open sewer.

Mr. Murray said that Manderson street was in need of a sewer, but he did not think it necessary to name him in the resolutions.

Mr. Hasall said that the judiciary committee would have a report ready at Tuesday evening's meeting, regarding the question of street commissioner, and he suggested that the resolutions be held until the resolutions were returned to Mr. Steel and he will introduce them again this evening.
