IS HIGH BIDS ON STATE PRINTING

Comparisons Show that There Was Evidently a Collision Between Those Seeking the Contract—A Pretty Scheme to Rob the State.

LINCOLN, Neb., May 13.—[Special to THE BEE.]—The protest made by the members of the Lincoln Typographical union against the awarding of the state printing contract under the bids now on file with the state printing board, have opened the eyes of the people of this city to the fact that a well laid plan was made by the State Journal company of this city to effect an extraordinary rise in prices.

The following figures are gleaned from the bids now on file with the state printing board, and when thoroughly analyzed show a very large sized colored gentleman concealed somewhere in the interior of the receipt. A marked attempt is being made by the state for several thousand dollars does not come to the surface after the most careful sifting of the affairs of this department of state as far as the record goes. It has been openly charged by the contesting printers that there was a collusion on the part of the bid-der to get extortionate prices for printing, and a casual observer can find a great deal of circumstantial evidence by comparing the prices bid in the house and senate journal and the session laws alone.

Unparalleled Coincidence.

That six men could bid within 2 cents of each other, per page, on a job of this magnitude without all making their figures on the same table is a coincidence that does not have a parallel seven days in the week at least. And when the fact is taken into consideration that the lowest bid of the six was $2.18 per page, higher than the highest bid the same work two years ago, it would appear that they all wanted the job bad enough to take it even under protest. Any man who can take the bids, size them up and make a correct statement as to whether either one of the six bidders is his next best friend.

There is no question that being as liberal a patron of printer's ink as the state of Nebraska is, she pays enough for her printing under the most favorable circumstances; but when it comes to taxing the state from $2.00 to $2.50 per page, that is to say, from 500 per cent more than the work of individuals could get the same work done for, it is time to cry a halt. The object of competitive bidding is it is generally understood, is to get the lowest price for the services needed, but if it falls to do this and raises them, then it would be better to let the state officers buy their own supplies as they would not be so likely to be taken in by either one of the six bidders or his next best friend.

Some Startling Comparisons.

The first of the large items is 1,500 assessment books of four quires each. In 1891 the bid was one-fifth of a cent per page and amounting to $1,800. In 1892 the bid was 2 1/2 cents per page and would amount to $4,500, a difference of $2,700, or nearly four times as much as the books the cost under the 1891 bid.

Another item that shows the enormity of increase is 225 tax books of eight quires each. In 1891 they cost the state one-fifth of a cent per page, and would amount to $2,250. In 1892 the bid was 2 1/2 cents per page and would amount to $4,500, a difference of $2,250, or nearly ten times what they were taken at in 1891. Increase of cost to the state on these two items alone, $6,450. Then, on several other lots of books similar to the above that bear about the same relationship to the 1891 bid.

Treasurers' Receipts Come High.

Then comes 30,000 county treasurers' tax receipts, furnished the previous two years by the State Journal company at one-seventh of a cent per page, or $570. This year if the price is to be the same as the bid, the same firm would get $600 for furnishing the same amount, a slight difference to the state's finances of $30.40.

Prices in a Balloon.

Three hundred books teachers' second grade certificates cost under the 1891 contract one-eighth of a cent per page, or $30. Under this year's bid, at 3 cents per page, they will cost $1,500. Think of it. One hundred and fifty teachers' third grade certificates will cost in the same ratio $750. Last year they cost $15, 1890 courses of study, 1891 $19.30, 1892 $22.50, 1,000 institute manuals, 1891 $50.30, 1892 $59.50, 1,000 elementary directories, printed in January this year for $6.50, a commercial price, are bid for by the lowest bidder at $12.50. Five hundred blank books, printed in January this year, at $15, present bid $50. On eighteen other blank forms in this office the price is $50 more than the same blanks were furnished for by the State Journal company under its present contract.

Small Lots Come High.

A peculiarity of the bid is that on blanks, where only a small quantity is to be furnished, the price should be given for the same nearly the same as when a large quantity is wanted, as for example, on a lot of ten blanks that aggregate $24.00 the price is only a few cents. This is exactly what has happened on a lot of ten that aggregate only 15.00, when, according to all rules, the price should decrease very rapidly as the quantity increases. But this is not an instance when the rule works the other way.

Fair Crop Prospects.

STRAFFORD, Neb., May 13.—[Special to THE BEE.]—The weather is quite warm and favorable for growing crops. About one-half of the corn is planted. Fall wheat is looking fine but rather thin. Spring wheat and oats are just getting a good start. Farmers are feeling good over the good rains of last week that wet the ground from five to nine inches in depth.

Lincoln's Heavy Failure

Crash of Kendall & Smith's Grain Business Very Disastrous.

LINCOLN, Neb., May 13.—[Special to THE BEE.]—There is now but little doubt that the crash of Kendall & Smith, millers and grain men, is a bad one. The firm, as was stated in yesterday's BEE, has been financially embarrassed for some time, and the fact that was made known today that N. S. Harwood, president of the First National bank, is the "company" of Harris Bros. & Co., who purchased Kendall & Smith's elevators only a few days since, coupled with the further fact that only last Monday the firm executed a mortgage on the mill northeast of the city for $25,000 (but which mortgage was kept from the knowledge of the board of directors of the recently defunct Columbia National bank of Chicago, arrived in the city and presented a claim of $25,000. He was informed that the claim could not be met at present, but he insisted on immediate payment. If not, he demanded that ample security be put up. He was told that this would be given, but it is said, on the authority of a well posted gentleman, that while he was arranging for the drawing up of the mortgages Kendall & Smith executed other mortgages which were placed on file shortly before 4 o'clock. The mortgages, in the order of priority, are as follows: Congdon & Co., commission men of Chicago, $40,000; W. Lewis, loan agent of Lincoln, $19,500; the Converse estate, of which Kendall is administrator, $5,500; J. V. D. Smith, $11,000; C. C. Kendall, $1,500; the estate of J. D. Lott, $10,800. These mortgages cover all lands and mills in the county owned by the firm. The first mortgage is for $40,000 and is held by the Lewis loan company for $15,000, given several years ago to secure a loan, and the second mortgage on this property is that of the First National bank. Besides these there is a bill of sale of stock on their farms and about their mills, including their herds of buffalo, elk and deer, on file in the county clerk's office in favor of A. V. D. Smith, for $25,000. Smith in turn executed a chattel mortgage to Kendall & Smith for $25,000 covering the same chattels. Morton, the Chicago agent, however, does not intend to be turned down so easily, and has engaged counsel to force payment of his claim. Several conferences were held today with Kendall & Smith, but it is probable that some lively litigation will follow.

Utterly.

John E. Utt today informed a Bee reporter that he would shortly send his acceptance of the offer made by the Omaha Commercial bank to take the position of freight commissioner for that office one week from next Monday, May 22.

Governor Crouse's Staff.

The governor's staff as finally announced is as follows: Judge advocate general, John C. Watson; Nebraska City; inspector, H. S. Hotchkiss, Lincoln; quartermaster, George E. Jenkins, Fairbury; coroner general, Dr. R. E. Giffen, Lincoln; colonel, C. E. Adams, Superior; W. E. Coffey, North Platte; J. P. Paine, Ainsworth; Lieutenant J. J. Pershing, U. S. A., Lincoln; H. P. Shumway, Wakefield; H. E. Shuford, Omaha; E. M. Corbett, Holdrege; J. H. Lexington.

To Bust the Combines.

During the last session of the legislature of Minnesota a joint resolution passed that by asking an interstate conference of representative men from the different west central states, to be appointed by the governors of the respective states. The object of the conference was to devise ways and means whereby the coal and other combines might be successfully broken up. The resolution of the laws, thereby giving the consulting classes a recourse against trusts and combines.

In Keeping with the Request Forwarded.

In keeping with the request forwarded yesterday by the Nebraska State Journal, Governor Crouse appointed the following as delegates yesterday: Charles H. Van Wyck, Nebraska City; A. E. Bess, St. Paul; Frank York, York; E. Rosewater, Omaha; John D. Howe, Omaha; B. L. Hinman, North Platte; E. McIntyre, Seward; J. H. Powers, Corral; C. C. Burr, Lincoln; C. D. Casper, David City; Ed A. Fry, Niobrara.

John T. Dorgan appeared before Judge Strode this morning and furnished bond for his appearance on the three indictments found against him. The grand jury spent some time looking over the penitentiary yesterday afternoon, but took but little interest in the proceedings. An adjournment was taken this morning till May 23, but no indictments were returned today.

John E. Hussey, the tramp who murdered a fellow prisoner at the Nebraska State Penitentiary, was arraigned before Judge Strode this morning and pleaded not guilty to murder in the first degree. Trial was set for Monday, May 22. A number of minor criminals were arraigned, and all went over to next week. The deputy county attorney, it appears, grew incensed last evening because the jury had for the third successive time returned verdicts of not guilty, and he expressed his opinion of them in no very complimentary terms.

Relief of Hastings' Boom.

HASTINGS, Neb., May 13.—[Special to THE BEE.]—A very interesting and at the same time perplexing case has been before the district court today. A number of years ago during the "boom," James S. Small was the owner of a large amount of land in Thompson's addition, near Hastings college. On this property there was a mortgage amounting with interest to $12,000 to cover money owed by Small. But at this time the property was thought to be so valuable that the mortgage was regarded as an insignificant amount. Small also owed Anthony Koehler, a banker of Geneva, and in order to secure the latter, deeded him the property in question. In this deed was an obligation to assume and pay the existing mortgage. Koehler objected to this clause, and Small struck out all except the latter reading "which said purchaser hereby assumes." Koehler supposed that all was stricken out, and filed the deed.

Several months ago the first mortgage in the foundation was foreclosed, and Small and Koehler being made parties defendant. It was sold under the sheriff's sale, but did not satisfy the claims by $2,018. Small was solvent, and a personal execution was issued against Koehler and his Geneva property levied upon. Now he comes into court to have the sale set aside and the case reopened. A motion to annul the proceedings was overruled on technical grounds, but a petition will be introduced to reopen the case.

FARMBUCK, Neb., May 13.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—John W. Herron, superintendent of the fair grounds, while at work on the track this morning caught his right foot in the grading machine, breaking his leg near the knee and sustaining a severe dislocation of the ankle.

Members of the Women's Club Discuss the Kindergarten System.

FLATTERING PROSPECTS OF THE CLUB

Over 300 Earnest and Enthusiastic Members Organize for Mutual Improvement—Plans of the Various Departments.

To the Lady Readers of THE SUNDAY BEE

Dear Friends: That success which succeeds is surely attending the organization of the Omaha Women's club, as the 300 interested and earnest women who met in Metropolitan hall last Monday witness. Although the streets were well nigh impassable and it looked like rain, nothing daunted, the ladies turned their steps to the club, and the little table back by the door was almost piled full of money, so many paid their annual dues of $3. The treasurer said in despairing tones, "Well, I started to give each one a receipt, but it is simply impossible, so will just write your names and make out the receipts to-morrow 1 o'clock." Over 300 names appear on the book containing the constitution, and nearly all have paid their dues. Mrs. Harris, the recording secretary, who is the busiest woman in Omaha these days, read the minutes of the last meeting, and all preliminaries were hurried as much as possible, that the program might be reached as soon as practicable, it being a somewhat lengthy one.

Mrs. Francis B. (Could answered to her name by reading a paper full of instruction as to the origin of kindergarten, its author, and the causes which led to its promulgation by the eminent Froebel. She said:

Born into spiritual unconsciousness, surrounded by the chaos of the eternal world, the cover of the child's mind is lifted, and his highest conscious action by using its spontaneously developed senses as organs of the soul, not merely as sensual pleasures. Froebel follows the course nature herself has designated for the unfolding of the child's mind, and his system presents to the child a beautifully organized series of material which, correctly understood, is destined to help him to see and to do, and to do so in a way that is both simple and clear, profoundly and lovingly. The child's mind is thus developed in its mind and soul unfold, each faculty instinctively demanding the qualifications for its full nature and growth.

Directing Natural Impulses.

A happy child is a good child, and a child is happy when absorbed in some environment or activity which is in accordance with his needs. Now every child, whatever, naturally begins to play, as a first form of outward activity, and this spontaneous play is not only to be guided and directed in consonance with the child's own development, but is truly educational. For play is really the first means of development of the human faculties. Froebel says: "Nothing can come forth from the conscious human being that did not lie germinating in the unconscious soul of the child."

The paper was read in a very pleasing manner and was warmly applauded. The applause that burst forth when Miss Hickox read the address, the warm reception which she is held, and the eager attention paid to her paper, "The Kindergarten as Part of the Public School System," would prove to the most careless observer that the meeting was a success. The words of wisdom, among other good things she said:

Our public schools are perhaps our most characteristic institutions. Our ancestors began to think of the school as a necessary part of their lives, and with greater pride, no gift has been held more sacred. This followed a brief sketch of the evolution of the school from the early days of the three R's constituted a practical education. It was formerly believed that anybody could teach school, hence the crowding of the numbers into the schools, and the pupils to a teacher and you have every condition necessary to produce those miserable, stultifying, mechanical methods and that dreary routine which will curse our schools for fifty years to come.

The schools have received the impress of every generation, and we have failed to discard many of the usages, habits and customs of the earlier days. We have not been brave enough to arrange our schools to suit the needs of the present, but still go patching on to our grandfather's plans, until today instead of a consistent system we have a hodge-podge, and much venerated educational crazy-patch work. We are not to be blamed for this, as yet know not of what such an education should consist. As a people, Americans understand only financial prosperity, material success and in consequence expect the schools to turn out boys and girls capable of securing this sort of success. When they do not the system is criticized. This world needs children developed to a high standard of manhood and womanhood, and the model school is directed. It is here that the kindergarten meets the needs of the present, and it is here that the most philosophical of students, the uninitiated means, have a great work to do. How the wonderful work of a perfect man, his beauty, his mystic music and unrevealed treasures of truth, and the truth that through its agency the individual might know himself and his true relations to all things.

Kindergartens Induce Enthusiasm.

Resting thus upon the broadest and deepest scientific principles, the kindergarten presents the child the exact conditions which shall assist to his complete development. The kindergarten will bring into the world a priceless gift of enthusiasm. Kindergartners are always enthusiastic because they are bestowing and enjoying a great work, unfolding the possibilities of an individual. Public teachers, as a matter of fact, are not enthusiastic because they have outgrown the line when more intellectual dexterity satisfies, and the system makes it difficult to realize any other ambition.

The present public school presents a poor place for the child to come into the world, where people live and do not hold any intercourse with each other. It is well enough for details for the child, who is yet in the semi-barbaric state, for the mother to be indulged, so also does the child. It is an unnatural forcing process and brings into being selfishness, conceit and avarice. There is no indication that "man's inhumanity to man" grows greater as the man grows old, but man's inhumanity to his fellow man grows greater as the child grows older. These children as men and women will have many social questions to answer, and if they are not properly adjusted in their own relations, it is then so easy to crush back the naturally dominant life and to discourage fraternal, even in its germ stages. When once the child has the value of the kindergarten they will plant them everywhere, for they are schools of the people, by the people and for the people. They are loved by them and will be cherished by them.

The paper closed with "not one of us who has secured his equipment at their hands, and felt the powerful, ineffable influences of their noble instructors; not one of us who has labored year after year patiently, or at times impatiently, in the ranks as teachers, but are confident that our school system is a giant in strength and believe in it as we believe in the flag that over us unfurls its tri-colored message of freedom to all men. I believe in the public schools of a glorious past, but more in those of a glorious present—and I believe most of all in schools of a better future, and they will rest upon the kindergarten as a foundation.

Miss Shields' Earnest Address.

Prolonged and hearty clapping of hands followed until the voice of the president was drowned, but finally order was restored and short discussions and queries followed in quiet succession, after which the program, Miss Shields' address, Miss Shields' address, Miss Shields' address, came forward as her name was announced and read in a clear and readable voice. The theme, "The Kindergarten and the Home," Miss Shields' strong point in reading is her earnestness and apparent sincerity. "There should be more use of sacred music," she said.

Next to the influence of music comes gesture and expression, the earliest of all language, and therefore this is to be taught readily to the children. Gesture is the direct expression of the soul. In all the teachings of the great teacher, Froebel, there is an ever present emphasis placed upon the two great factors in woman's life and destiny, namely, inherited tendencies which are the work of nature; and habits and environment, which are the work of man and education. Can you trace the boundary line which separates the conscious from the unconscious soul? In the low world, just because it is God's world, the law of all things is continuity. No abrupt transitions, no today which is not based upon yesterday.

The distant stars

The distant stars were shining long before they rays reach the earth. The good germination in darkness, and its growing long before we see its growth, so the depths of the infant soul are a process, gone on which is hidden from our eyes, yet which brings more than we can dream of good of evil, of happiness or misery.

The most spirited discussion of the day followed this paper, and questions as to the effect of the kindergarten on vicious children, the use of the system in South America, and so on were asked and answered by the exponents in a very happy and exhaustive style.

Plans for the Future.

Mrs. Haller invited the club to meet with her at Livingston's gallery on Monday, May 22, and intimated that it would be proper for each lady to bring with her a cup and spoon, as light refreshments might be served. This idea seemed to meet the unqualified approval of all the ladies, and the first election of officers will be held mid the mild indulgence of that cup so dear to the heart of woman, good old-fashioned tea. The department of literature, Mrs. M. E. Coyell superintendent, met at the Young Men's Christian association hall on Friday afternoon and decided to begin work with the study of Goodell. This department will have one more meeting on May 30. The department of political science called out over thirty ladies at the same place on Saturday afternoon. It was then determined, after a great deal of spirited conversation, to begin the year's work with papers by four ladies on "Law," "Trade," "Government" and "Money," and to study during the summer a list of recommended books and Mrs. Fawcett's primer on "Political Economy." This department will devote one of the most interesting of any in the club, as the ladies seem determined to give the subject very careful consideration. A MEMBER.
