HOW NO. 7'S MEN MET DEATH

Coroner's Inquiry Into the Fatality at the Shiverick Block Fire.

CAPTAIN COX ACTED WITHOUT ORDERS

Testimony Exonerating the Department Officials from Blame for the Death of Their Men-Claim that the Fire Was Not Caused by Lightning.

The inquest on the bodies of Captain Cox and Pipeman Ouray of hose company No. 7. who were killed by the falling walls of the Shiverick building Saturday night, was held in the police court room yesterday afternoon. No verdict was returned, as the jury determined to wait a week or two and see it some of the injured men would not recover in time to add their testimony to that which was available vesterday.

The first witness called was M. J. de Neen. driver of No. 7. His company responded to the general alarm and he assisted in laying a line of hose from the hydrant in front of the Omaha National bank building through the alley to the rear of the Shiverick building. He then went out and laid a second line of hose and coupled it on the water tower on Farnam street after which he returned to the alley. On his return he assisted the No. 5's in running their hose up on the rear of the Maurer building and was standing on the roof about five feet from the rear when the west wall of the Shiverick building fell. Cox, Ouray and Morris of his company, together with two other men who did not belong to the department, were further along on the roof and were caught by the wall. Gray and Morrell of the 5's were on the roof with him but jumped. He stayed where he was and opened up No. 5's hose and turned a stream on the debris in order that if any of the imprisoned men were still alive they might not be burned to death.

Cox Selected His Position.

In reply to a question the witness stated that it was customary for the captains to select their own positions when they arrived at a fire without waiting for orders from the chief. He had apprehended no danger when he went on the roof as the wail seemed per-fectly solid. He considered the roof of the Maurer building as the place where Cox would naturally have gone, as it offered the best point of vantage from which to throw a stream upon the roof of the Shiverick build-ing. The center only of the west wall fell at the time the men were killed. A huge smoke stack which stood at the northwest corner of the building held the wall up at that point and saved the lives of the men who were on the rear.

Acted in Opposition to Orders.

John J. Ormsby, driver of hook and ladder No. 2, arrived in the alley just before Captain Cox went on the roof. He swore positively that he heard Assistant Chief Barnes tell Cox not to go on the roof, but to remain in the alley and play upon the rear shutters of the Shiverick building. This occurred ten or fifteen minutes after the alarm was sent At that time he could see no reason why the wall was likely to fall. Assistant Chief Barnes corroborated the statement of the previous witness. He said that Cox asked him if he should not take a line of hose on the roof of the Maurer building, but he told him to stay where he was and warned him to keep to the north side of the alley so that his men could get out of the way in case the wall fell in. had done this, not because he thought there was any danger, as the walls seemed per-fectly sound, but because he could not see how it would do any good to get on the roof. At this time the floors had not collapsed, but the wall and floors came down together a few minutes later.

"There is a whole lot of stuff brought before United States grand juries, " said one of the members of the recently impanneled federal grand juries to a BEE reporter "that never ought to be permitted to take up the time of busy men or to pile up costs which the government is obliged to bear. At the session last week, for instance, there were several matters that took a deal of time, and when they were all sifted down they amounted to nothing but miserable family quarrels in which some people had acted in a very hateful manner but there was no crime of any serious nature connected with the affairs. # RINGLING'S CIRCUS.

Ringling Brothers' Big Show Surpassed Former Efforts in Every Respect.

People with wild, barbaric blood coursing through their veins are never so happy as when a circus is in town and a parade is on the tapis. Judging from the number of people on the streets yesterday morning the strain of barbaric bloed was predominate in thousands of anatomies for the streets over which Ringling Bros.' big show passed were thronged with citizens and their country cousins bent upon seeing the "elephant and wild kangaroo," with the other features ad nfinitum

Ringling Bros. give a mighty fine parade, and, as a real circus sky added to the pleasure of the morning, there was little that the most surfeited person could desire. Omaha has seen lots of circus parades, but in point of excellence, compactness and new-ness Ringling Bros. excel any similar pa-rade made in this city. One feature of the procession was particularly remark-able, the absence of grotesque features on the tops of the vans, which have detracted from the real merits of parades in the past. Bright new paint and gold leaf have made the yans look like things of enduring beauty, while the heavily carved chariots shine resplendent in a joyous June sun. The absence of cheap and tow dry trappings were also remarked, the whole aggregation of vans, dens, chariots and horses, to say nothing about the riders, being in fine condition, reflecting a broad and liberal-policy on the Messrs, Ringling which in these days of catch-penny features is as delightful as it is surprising.

Whether the circus of these latter century days is just as startling and as meritorious as the circus was in days of boyhood and girlhood, to those who have touched the middle periods of life, is a much mooted question. The old timer talks of Van Am-berg, Robinson and Dan Rice's "aggrega tions" with roseate glow on face as he re-calls the callow days of his circus-going career, but none of these, when all is said, can in anywise compare to Ringling Brothers' show which played to two big houses yesterday at Twentieth and Paul vinced that the company is responsible and will inaugurate the movement. Before introducing the ordinance he paid streets.

There is snap and go about the performance given by these well known showmen, and all the acts are worthy of mention, but where so much is given that is excellent, the only thing to do is to pass upon

He did not see Cox at all during the fire, and as far as he knew, no orders had been given for men to go on the roof. He considered it foolish to go there, as there was no good to be accomplished. The only reason that he could see for Cox to go there was that he might have thought that by getting on the roof his stream could reach the roof of the Shiverick building through which the flames were then bursting.

Says the Building Was Unsafe.

The chief stated that the floor joists on the west side of the Shiverick building were scarcely charred when the walls fell. west wall was sixteen inches thick as far as the second story, and from there to the top was only twelve inches thick. It should have been four inches thicker on the first and second stories. It was his opinion that and second stories. It was his opinion that if the wall had been properly constructed it would not have fallen at all and would have stood for two hours at least after the fire broke out. As it was it was not over twenty ive minutes after the alarm was turned in when the wall went down.

Fire Was Not from Lightning.

1. E. Loomis, driver of hose company No. 5, was called and said that he was ordered to yo on the roof of the Maurer building by Chief Salter. give the company a franchise here. The feelings of the Fifth ward councilman were not contagious and some of the other members were not imbued with the same. They were somewhat dubious and lingered between doubt and certainty. The flattering expressions of what the company could do did not have the desired effect, and they held back. It was then suggested that if the fuel gas was such a good thing the company should pay the expenses and permit Gas Inspector Gilbert to pay a visit to the Mavsville plant and make a test of it. The proposition met with favor at the hands of the officers of the company and the trip was made. Mr. Gilbert arrived there one week ago today and remained until Wednesday. He made the desired test, returned home and prepared his report for the council. It was to have been submitted at special meeting Saturday afteroon, was bu a quorum was not present and that made it impossible. The gas inspector maintained silence as to what he discovered. It was all incorporated in his report, and was not to be known until the report was read to the council. It did not remain silent, however, and fell into the hands of some of the members of the council, and was given away Mr. Gilbert was not at all pleased over the fact, as he had denied any information to the press out of courtesy to the council and would not say anything until this morning. "You may say." said he, "that I did not find what was represented to be the case. The company is not manufacturing the gas as cheaply as it claims to be and it cannot do so, unless you call air gas, and I do not be-lieve that it will burn. They claim to manufacture 1.000 cubic feet of gas with one and a half gailons of oil and fourteen pounds of coal. The first day I was there 50,000 cubic coal. The first day I was there 50,000 cubic feet were manufactured, and it re-quired 69-50 gallons of oil and 28 49-50 pounds of coal for each 1,000 feet. Into this was pumped 39,000 feet of air, ac-cording to my calculations. A root blower delivers eight feet a revolution and there are ninety-four revolutions a minute. From this I took off 16 per cent from the temperature and reduced the amount in that way and reduced the amount in that way. That was the first day's test. The second was far worse, and those figures I will give to the council. I do not care to say more just now, but will fully explain everything when re-quested by the council." The ordinance granting the franchise will probably be up for passage tomorrow night. If it is not reached a special session will probably be held to consider it.

There seems to be something wrong with the manner in which the canteen at Fort McKinney has been conducted and Captain Crowder has gone up there to investigate. Stenographer Lowe accompanied the captain on the trip. The recent decision of the special commit tee appointed to make an examination of the different kinds of rifles manufactured for army use in favor of the Krag-Jorgensen gun will cause a general change of small arms all through the army within the next few years. The old Springfield rifes will be replaced by the new implement of destruc-tion and the Springfields will be stored for cases of emergency. Speaking of the matter today an army officer said: "It will be possible for the state militia com-panies to secure the use of some very good guns, no doubt, within a few years. When the regulars are furnished with the Krag-Jorgensen guns they will lay aside the Springfield rifles they now carry, and these are good guns. The stock of old guns may come in very good play in case we should want to call for a good sized army of recruits at any time. The Springfield gun is a good at any time. The Springfield gun is a good, all round gun, but competent men seem to be convinced that the new Krag-Jorgensen gun is better."
