ABOUT ELECTRIC RAILWAYS

Already They Lead All Other Street System in This Country.

THEIR GROWTH WITHOUT PRECEDENT

Multipiled with Wonderful Rapidity, for Outstripping Steam Railways in the Matter of Extension-Statistics Recently Gathered on the Topic.

The multiplication of electric street railways in the United States has com-pletely thrown into the shade the growth of steam railways and is without precedent in road building, says the New York Sun. After the successful intro-duction of the first railway in 1830, connecting Savannah, Ga., and Charleston, S. C., other lines in New York state, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts were operated. Many obstacles had at first to be overcome and many dangers to be provided against. Improvements were cautiously introduced. Capital was gin-gerly invested. Accidents were many and discouragements almost incessant. Government help was sought, and was found necessary. Otherwise lines could not be built and equipped.

In New York state the legislature, in granting a charter to the Eric railway granting a charter to the Erie railway to construct a line from New York City to Buffalo, allowed the projectors ten years from the date of the grant of the franchise to finish one-quarter of the-road, fifteen years for half, and twenty years for the whole line. The state also loaned its credit to the company to the extent of $3,000,000, to be raid back in extent of $3,000,000, to be paid back in installments as the road was completed, the state reserving the right to take the road with its fixtures on paying the cost and accrued interest at 14 per cent to the projectors if they proved unable to carry on the business successfully.

Notwithstanding such aid, the good interest paid, the lands granted to the companies and the contributions of cities, counties and private individuals, the increase in extent of American rail ways was very slow at first. In 1830 there were twenty-three miles in operation. In 1832 the total was 229 miles. In 1835 it reached 1,098, in 1840 2,818, in 1845 4,633, and in 1848 5,997. In no single year was the increase in mileage, which now averages 5,000 miles a year, as high as 1,000. From 1849 to the beginning of the civil war in 1861, the extension of American railroads was rapid, the total mileage in that year reaching 31,000. Then railroad building languished until 1870, when 7,000 miles were added, and now the total is 215,000 miles.

With the electric railway companies the case is entirely different. They have increased, it would seem, almost by magic. They are limited to no section of the country. At the beginning of 1890, when the plan of electric road building first began to be popular, there were 200 companies in operation, covering 1,641 miles of track and using 2,346 cars. Today, so rapid has been the mul-tiplication of lines and so general the use of electricity as a means of traction. that there are more than 7,000 miles of electric street railroads, divided among the states as follows: 818 Kentucky.... 724 Montana... 596 Oregon.... 408 Virginia... 370 Rhode Island 826 Connecticut... New York...... Three years ago the mileage of horse car roads was 5,713, of electric roads 1,641, of steam roads 554, and of cable roads 527. Now the electric roads lead all others, with a total in excess of 7,000 miles, while the horse car roads have fallen below 5,000, the cable roads have reached 1,000, and the steam lines in cities have not materially increased. The cost of building a mile of cable road in a big city is put usually by engineers at $60,000. An electric road costs about $18,000 a mile. The cost of operating horse car and steam street railways is about the same per mlle. The cost of operating cable and electric roads is about one-half of it. Electric roads are 10 per cent cheaper to operate than cable roads, and their construction is 60 per

New York has, in proportion to its population, the least number of electric roads, the trolleys being excluded from Manhattan island except that small bankside corner of it which faces the Third avenue bridge across the Harlem. In the annexed district, however, there are three lines of electric roads and the promise of others by the Union Railway company, which has all the franchises necessary for the employment of its $2,000,000 capital. In Brooklyn electricity has generally superseded horse power on street car lines, and in other cities the change of power is going on so rapidly that the mileage of electric roads may reach 10,000 by January, a total larger than the steam railroads attained in the twenty-one years following their introduction.

CONGRESS OF ENGINEERS.

Every Civilized Country to Be Represented in Chicago.

Not the least in importance and general interest among the nineteen departments of the World's Congress auxiliary in connection with the Columbian exposition at Chicago is that to be known as the International Engineering congress. From a paper devoted to its program, contributed by Mr. J. K. Freitag to the Engineering Magazine, it appears that invitations to participate in the engineering congress have been sent to all prominent foreign and American societies, institutes, colleges and schools of engineering, as well as to distinguished engineers in all parts of the world. Correspondence has been established with seventy-five societies in twenty-seven countries. This large foreign representation insures the intenational character of the movement, and as this is the first international engineering congress in the history of the world, the result will be without doubt a successful representation of subjects of living interest to every edgineer. There will be original papers and discussions by leaders in the profession in every branch, describing new processes, inventions, works recently constructed or in process of construction—in short, the advancement of engineering in the nineteenth century, At the same time with the engineering congress, an international confer-ence on aerial navigation will be held. The practical and partially successful experiments that have been made in the past few years on this still rudimentary subject have awakened the interest of the scientific and engineering world. Such names as Elisha Gray, E. L. Corthell and Octave Chanute as a committee insure a scientific and practical treatment of a subject, which for years has attracted only visionary inventors. The papers and discussions will deal with the scientific problems involved—aviation, ballooning, mechanical difficulties, etc. They will summarize the latest researches, and call for an exchange of ideas and concentration of action among men at work on this subject.

Another congress which will be held at the same time, and which will be of special importance to engineers, is the water commerce congress. This is one of direct international importance, dealing as it does with that great economic question, the cost of transportation between states and nations. ness of water transportation, as com-pared to that by rail, accounts for the steady increase of the former. In 1890 the entire cost of lake transportation in the United States was something over $23,000,000, while the cost of the same freight by rail would have been over $143,000,000. The subjects of this meet-ing will include building of ca-nals, deepening of rivers, excavation of harbors, building of docks, improve-ments in steamers, proposed canals in the United States, and all relative topics, the discussions to be confined to the economic feature of water commerce The congress of art and architecture will very fittingly convene in the same week with the engineering congress. Special efforts have been made to afford visiting engineers every opportunity to examine American works of enginee r ing. A complete list of such works of note has been obtained from some 200 cities in the United States, and letters of introduction to any of these cities may be obtained from headquarters.

"Layout," A lot of gambling men were on trial before Magistrate Bradwell yesterday morning at the Harrison Street police station, the result of a raid on H. C. McGuire's place on East Monroe street, says the Chicago Times. The judge's desk was covered with a full faro layout-board, cards, box, chips, markers, case keeper and coppers.

"This layout, your honor," began Detective Williams, "was found in Me-

Guire's gambling house and-" "What do you mean by a layout?" in-nocently inquired the court. "Is it with these tools that so many so-called suckers are laid out?"

"That's as good a definition of the word as could be given by the oldest faro expert in the United States," smilingly responded the officer. "For the better understanding of the court I will state that that silver box in your honor's right hand, and in which the court is now placing the deck of-cards, is called a faro box. The cards are dealt from the top and placed in two separate piles by the side of the box, just as your honor is now doing, and bets made with these chips are won or lost by their turn. Now, for instance, I will place a stack of these chips on the king and you make a deal. There, you see, I would have won, because—"

"No, you wouldn't. You put your money on the corner of the king and it took in the jack; it's a stand off, for the jack showed on top; but—er—ah, go on, Mr. Officer." "This little square piece of ivory is called a marker, and when a player puts it on a card like this he-" "Markers don't go, Williams," re-marked the court, as he shoved the ivory block off the board. "I thought the court desired some information regarding-" "I do; but you know the rules of the house about markers." "I guess I'll not explain further about the game," laughed the detective. "These men around me were sitting bout the faro table when I came into the place."

"Were they playing?"
"No, sir."

"Then they are dismissed and on petition the case of the proprietor is con-tinued to the 15th in $ 00 bonds. Call the next case, Mr. Clerk."

Were it not for a decided difference in the color of the water you would never know when the Atlantic is left and the Rio de la Plata is entered, says a writer to the Philadelphia Record. The highrolling, whitecapped billows are the same, and no land is visible, for the great river which James Diaz de Solis discovered is 125 miles wide at its mouth, though with an average depth of only fifty feet. Sebastian Cabot, who arrived in the year 1520, soon after the natives had murdered poor Don Solis, dubbed it River of Silver, not on account of its color, which might have won for it the more appropriate name of Golden River or River of Chocolate, but because he had wrested quantities of silver from the Indians who swarmed its banks, and naturally imagined that an abundance of precious metal remained in the vicinity. In point of fact the terms Argentina and Rio de la Piata (both meaning the same thing with ref-erence to silver) are misnomers, for no metals of any sort, precious or otherwise, are found along the banks of the mighty stream, or anywhere near it, and the scanty argentiferous deposits in the hills of the interior have never been worked. The Indians aforesaid probably obtained the silver which so excited Spanish cupidity from Peru and Bolivia, by some primitive system of internal commerce known only to them-selves. To this day metals do not figure in the exports of the adjacent countries -Uruguay, Paraguny and Argentina, but such prosaic articles as hides and tallow, horns, wools, preserved and re-frigerated meat, etc.—for their wealth lies solely in grazing facilities and fertile soil. Named Him After the Lord.

ON THE BANK OF ENGLAND

Some Interesting Facts Regarding a Great Financial Institution.

IT IS NOW TWO HUNDRED YEARS OLD

Started in 1694 to Ald the King in Hir Difficulty With France-Magnitude of Its Business How it Handles Enormous Sums.

Providence Journal: The Bank of England is the most noted financial in-stitution in the world. On January 1, 1895, it will celebrate the second centennial anniversary of its establishment. It was established in 1694, having been projected in 1692 by a Scotch merchant, William Patterson, to relieve King William III from the difficulties experienced in raising supplies to prosecute the war against France.

The terms of the charter granted July 27, 1694, were that the sums of £1,000,000 ($6,000,000) should be raised and that the subscribers should form themselves into a corporation styled "The Governor and Company of the Bank of England." The bank was also to have the privilege of keeping the accounts of the public debt, paying dividends, issuing notes, etc., for which an allowance of £4,000 a year was granted. The whole of the capital was to be loaned to the government at 8 per cent. This interest, together with the £4,000 allowance, gave the bank a revenue of £100,000 per annum. At its very outset the bank was a servant of the government, and it has retained that character, but in somewhat diminished degree, throughout all the ages of its subsequent history. The Bank of England first issued notes in 1695, which were of the denomination of £20. The £10 notes were issued in 1759 and the £5 notes in 1793. At one time during the early years of the present century notes of £1 and £2 were issued, but in 1844 they were all withdrawn from circulation, and no notes are issued for less than £5 and none higher than £1,000. These notes may be said to be the safest pieces of paper in the world, as under any circumstances the bank could pay with gold every one in circulation with-out one pound of the capital of the institution being touched. They are a legal tender everywhere in the United Kingdom, except at the bank itself, where they must be paid in gold. These notes are all made in the bank building, and when once paid back into the bank are nover again issued out. After going through a process of cancellation, they are kept for ten years and then totally destroyed. Large quantities of gold coin and bullion are being constantly handled and pass in and out of the bank. On an average 45,000 sovereigns pass over the counters every day.

By the bank charter of 1844 the bank was divided into two departments, the issue and the banking. By the same act the debt then due to the bank from the government was stated to be due the issue department, and against this they were allowed to issue notes without holding gold. The bank started with a capital, as stated, of £1,200,000. In two years this was increased to £2,201,000. In 1710 it was again increased to £5,560,000. On June 29, 1816, it was raised to its present sum of £14,553,000, equal to about $72,700,000. No reports of the bank are made beyond the regular weekly statement, of which the following is a copy for May 3, 1893, the figures representing pounds sterling, each being worth about $5 of American money. ISSUE DEPARTMENT. Notes issued.....

The deposits in the Bank of France amount to about $113,100,000, and in the Imperial bank of Germany to $106,710,000.

TEETH OF THE BEAVER.

and Are Very Powerful. As in every "gnawer," the beaver's skull is armed with two long, chisel-like teeth in each jaw.

These teeth are exceedingly powerful, and are to a beaver what an ax is to a woodsman. One such tooth taken from the lower jaw of a medium-sized skull (they can be removed without difficulty, unlike the most of ours) is bent into nearly a semi-circle, and measures five inches along its outer curve. Only one inch of this length projects from the skull. The corresponding one from the upper jaw is bent into more than a com-plete half circle, and measures from its outer face four inches, of which less than an inch protrudes from its bone easing.
In width each tooth is five-eighths of reveals the secret of how a beaver can perform such feats as chopping down a birch tree sixteen inches in diameter, not to speak of softer woods, like the basswood, of much greater size. The tooth is composed of two ma-terials. Along the outer face or front of the tooth is a thin plate of exceedingly hard enamel; on the inner, forman inch. Examination of one of them

ing the body of the tooth, is a substance called dentine. The dentine, being softer, wears away with use; the thin enamel remains com-paratively unworn, so that the tooth assumes the shape of a keen chisel that never grows dull. The tooth is hollow at its base for half its length and is filled with a nourishing substance which keeps it constantly growing. Thus, not only is the natural wearing away provided against, but a certain amount of wear becomes an actual necessity. With such instruments the beaver is admirably fitted for obtaining its natural food, the bark of should and trees. shrubs and trees.
