Mr. J. A. Roff Receives a Very Agreeable Surprise.

ROFF'S SERVICE HAS BEEN APPRECIATED

He Has Been Promoted to Be Commercia Agent of the Rock Island Company -A Vindication of the Charges Made Against Him.

J. A. Roff, formerly local freight agent of the Rock Island, received a telegram from the headquarters of the company in Chicago yesterday afternoon, the contents of which will be a source of pleasure to all of his friends in this city, as it certainly was to him. The checking up of the books after the shortage in Cashier J. P. Christianson's books was discovered has been completed and the results were telegraphed to Chicago. Yesterday a reply came, stating that Mr. George H. Denton would occupy the position of local freight agent in place of Mr. Roff, and that the latter would be promoted to the position of commercial agent.

The position of commercial agent is a new one, and was created especially for Mr. Roff. the duties will call him out among the business men of the city, instead of keeping him cooped up in the little office in the southern part of the city as before. His business will be to work up trade for the road, and the growth of business the Rock Island has seen during the past few years is a sufficient induring the past few years is a sufficient in-dication of his qualifications for the place. The work is more agreeable and the pay is better, two considerations which are, of course, highly satisfactory. But the best part of the promotion, as he looks at it, is the fact that the company in making it completely exonerates him from all charges of crookedness that have been made against him. Whatever was wrong with the books has been credited up to his underling, where has been credited up to his underling, where it belongs, and the charges which are made by the underling have been fully investigated. The fact of the promotion tells, in a far clearer manner than words could, just what the officials of the company thought of Mr. Koffe, way of dainy business. Mr. Roff's way of doing business.

Beautiful Evening on Manawa. Old timers who have seen Lake Manawa in all of its phases of beauty, when reflecting the smiles of a perfect sky or lashed in fury by a storm, agree that they never saw the lake so beautiful as it was last night just before and after sunset. The surface was as smooth and polished as a mirror, and magnified in reflecting the rich coloring of sky and cloud. The only thing that broke the glassy surface was the ripple of a passing boat or the graceful gliding of a train of stately pelicans that had stopped to refresh themicans that had stopped to refresh themselves on their voyage around the world. There were many people to enjoy the perfect beauty of the scene, and those who had a spark of artistic instinct in their souls felt it stirred as it had never been stirred before. When the shadows grew denser and obscured all but the bolder outlines of the lake shores somes and music outlines of the lake shores, songs and music from a dozen boating parties added a new charm, and there was nothing wanting to make a picture that appealed to the better elements in the human composition.

Raising Insurance Rates. H. Bennett, manager of the office of the Western lowa Insurance Inspection bureau, has issued a circular to all the companies doing business in this vicinity authorizing a raise in fire insurance rates of 20 per cent, commencing immediately. Accompanying the order is a circular giving the reasons for this action. It states that the losses and exthis action. It states that the losses and expenses for the various companies for the last four years ending December 31, 1892, have amounted to $437,496,720, while the gross receipts have only been $482,957,813, which leaves a net loss of $8,536,907 on the four years business. Thus, according to these figures, the fire insurance companies have been doing business at 2 per cent less than the actual cost, which accounts for the failure of one company every week, on the average. Mr. Bennett attributes the increase in the number of fires to the use of electricity, gasoline stoves and other modern improvements, and thinks the increase of risk demands a corresponding increase in risk demands a corresponding increase the rates of insurance.

WHAT EVERY MAN IS WORTH. The Chemical Compounds of an Average

Voter Are Valued at $18,300. An interesting exhibit at the National museum shows the physical ingredients which go to make up the average man. weighing 154 pounds, says the American Analyist. A large glass jar holds the ninety-six pounds of water which his body contains. In other receptacles are three pounds of white of egg, a little less than ten pounds of pure glue-without which it would be impossible to keep body and soul together—43† pounds of fat, 8‡ pounds of phosphate of lime, 1 pound of carbonate of lime, 3 ounces of sugar and starch, 7 ounces of fluoride of calcium, 6 ounces of phosphate of magnesia and a little ordinary table salt. Divided up into his primary chemical elements the same man is found to contain 97 pounds of oxygen-enough to take up, under ordinary atmospheric pressure, the space of a room 10 feet long, 10 feet wide and 10 feet high. His body also holds 15 pounds of hydrogen, which, under the same conditions, would occupy somewhat more than two such rooms as that described. To these must be added 3 pounds and 13 ounces of nitrogen. The carbon in the corpus of the individual referred to is represented by a cubic foot of coal. It ought to be a diamond of the same size, because the stone is pure carbon, but the National museum has not such a one in its possession. A row of bottles contain the other elements going to make up the man. These are 4 ounces of chlorine, 31 ounces of fluorine, 8 ounces of phosphorus, 31 ounces of brimstone, 24 ounces of sodium, 24 ounces of potassium, one-tenth of an ounce of iron, 2 ounces of magnesium, and 3 pounds and 13 ounces of calcium. Calcium at present market rates is worth $300 an ounce, so that the amount of it contained in one ordinary human body has a money value of $18,300. Few of our fellow citizens realize that they are worth so much intrinsically.

THE SOCIAL DEBUT OF HELEN GOULD

A Coming Event in Which New York Society is Interested-The Unassuming Young Woman Whose Fortone is Estimated at $13,000,000.

Among the many social debuts that will take place in New York during the coming winter the one that will excite the most interest is that of Helen M. Gould, only daughter of the great financier and his favorite among all his ehildren. The entrance into society of this young woman is likely to be accompanied by not a little stir and comment. Miss Gould has passed the age when young women are as a rule introduced to the women are as a rule introduced to the social world in a formal way. She is no longer a young girl in the strict sense of the word, for in the matter of years she is very fairly into the twenties and is grave and womanly beyond her years.

She will represent $15,000,000 or more of her over all. of her own, all good hard cash, or, what is as good, railroad securities whose tendency is ever upward, and property that is always increasing in value. She owns the splendid Fifth avenue resi-dence her father so long occupied, and the great mansion at Irvington-on-the-Hudson, where the Gould family spent the summer. These great properties are the exclusive possession of Miss Gould, and they are gorgeously and completely furnished throughout. Together they are worth quite $1,500,000. So, while Jay Gould in his lifetime had many and fierce critics, and although that sometimes nebulous element known as the best society rather looked down on the famous money maker, there is no likelihood that his daughter will be cavilled at unless it be by ambitious matrons with young daughters of their own in the market for disposal to the highest legitimate bidde.

Miss Heien Gould is not strikingly handsome, but she is very sweet and womanly in her manner. She need not fear that she will become a languishing wallflower in the ball and reception rooms that she will figure in during the social season now drawing near. Her recommendations to favor are too many and too weighty.

But as for fortune hunters, they may as well keep their distance. Along with her mother's amiability and sweetness of character she has much of her father's keenness and strong common sense. Hence, while she will be a bud worth the plucking, the man who would perform that feat must look well to himself, for he will have no gushing damsel to deal with.

Few young women who figure or rea soon to figure in New York's social whirl are so little known as is Helen Gould. Even the leaders in the circles where she is to enter do not know the young woman well. They know, to be sure, that she is the daughter of the late Jay Gould, that she is said to be a good and charming girl and that she is enormously rich. Their fund of information runs out at this point, and they are waiting with some curiosity to add to it by means of personal observation.

The social debut of Miss Gould has been delayed considerably beyond the time that it would have been made by the deaths of her father and mother. There was never a daughter more devoted to her mother than was Helen Gould to hers during the latter's de-clining years. The two were very like in temperament, and their constant comterpart of her mother in disposition and manners-a result that was good for the young girl, for while the wife of Jay Gould never figured in society, but always shrank from so doing, she was none the less a superior woman in many

The death of this mother threw the young girl upon her own resources. She could not enter into society, and, indeed, had no wish to do so. Instead she devoted herself to her father, who had be-come partly an invalid, and up to the time of his death she was his mainstay and his solace in his hours of suffering and sickness.

And so it is that Miss Gould will enter into society a comparative stranger to its members.

Those who know Helen Gould give evidence that she is attractive both in appearance and manners. Rather retiring and unassuming, she still has that power to charm that marks some young women of more than ordinarily quiet demeanor. She is not what would be called a beautiful woman, but she is a handsome one taken from either a man's or a woman's point of view.

Of medium height, Miss Gould is a brunette, but not a very pronounced one. Her hair is dark, but not of the inky blackness that marked her father's hair and beard, and her eyes are of the unde-finable shade that is neither dark nor brown, but that seems to change and alternate. Her features are strong without the hard lines that were worn into her father's face, and they are further softened by the sweeter and more amiable traits that came to her from her mother—not strictly beautiful, as has been said, but still a woman whose face would command more than a passing glance no matter where seen. She is of graceful figure and the walk of one used to pedestrian exercise. Such is the greatest heiress in America as she is een today. Miss Gould's name has rarely, if ever appeared in those papers that assume to serve up the small beer of New York society to those who like that sort of thing. Nor do you often see it in the great dailies. But when you do it is always connected with some act of benevolence that has been performed so quietly that even the keen-eyed reporter has stumbled over it by sheer accident. Work among the city poor was Miss Gould's hobby before her parents died, and since their death she has had more time and more, means to continue the

Jay Gould himself never posed as a benevolent man or a philanthropist. He used to say it was of no use—that he would be merely assailed, and would not have his motives questioned. That he was in a way right was shown when about a year before his death there was a meeting held in his house on Fifth ave-nue to further church work in New York. He did not originate the idea. The ministers asked permission to meet in his house. He gave the permission, and he gave in addition his personal check for $10,000 to help the work in hand, and in addition checks for smaller amounts in the name of other members of his family. For this Gould was scarified by the press, religious and secular whice pronounced him an osteniatious hypocrite and several other things be-sides. It was his first and last experi-ment of the kind. According to the New York Herald it was his daughter who had brought the affair about, hoping for a very different verdict on her father's action. After this affair she acted as his almoner and his name never figured in her work, although his check-book was practically at her command. 3 Miss Gould's method of doing good is practical. She does not send a check to this or that charity and then rest in sweet content, her duty done. Her method is more like the parish visiting system that great ladies in England sometimes affect as a fad rather than for a better reason. Jay Gould and his family were attendants at the church of Dr. John R. Paxton, who preaches to more wealth, perhaps, than any other more wealth, perhaps, than any other pastor in New York. Miss Gould when in New York always identifies herself with all the mission and benevolent organizations connected with this church and has always stood as ready to do real work as to contribute in money. She has acted as a Sunday school teacher and, being a sweet-tempered young woman, was a success. As a volunteer parish worker she has been invaluable, for while being generous her strong common sense kept her from being humbugged by chronic

Her favorite home is her late father's summer house at Irvington, upon which he spent a fortune, and to good advan-tage. The house remains her property and Miss Gould spends much of the and Miss Gould spends much of the summer there, to the great satisfaction of the poor of the neighborhood. Much was written during Jay Gould's lifetime of the splendid hothouses connected with his Irvington home, in which almost every known kind of rare plants and flowers is cultivated regardless of cost. It is said that vated regardless of cost. It is said that the famous financier used to smile grimly when complimented upon his skill and taste in floriculture. As a matter of fact the multi-millionaire had very little to do with his conservatories save to foot the bills. He liked flowers in a negative sort of way, as he liked most of the things that his favorite did, but he left the management of the flowers to his daughter and the expert floriculturist whom he employed.

Miss Gould has always been more quiet in her tastes than most young women of large means. It is and has been with them the fad to go in for sports and games of almost all sorts. Yachting and coacning come first and less important methods of enjoyment follow in their order. Miss Gould has not, so far as is known, displayed proficiency in any of those lines. She is a famous pedestrian and a good horse-woman. Her retired life has made of her somewhat of a student and she is a skillful musician. If she ever had literary tendencies, as at one time her father had, she has carefully concealed the fact. She is practically mistress of her vast fortune, but it is not likely to suffer at her hands, for she is said to have as keen a mind for business as even her brother George, now the head of the family and chief conservator of the vast Gould interests.

Artemus Ward and Mark Twain.

Artemus Ward had a favorite trick hat he loved to indulge in, and out of which he appeared to get a good deat of original fun, says the Californian. This was the disbursing of a rigmarole of nonsense in a solemn and impressive manner, as though he was saying something of unusual weight and importance. It was a game of mystification in which he greatly delighted. At a dinner given him by leading Comstockers at the International hotel, Ward played his trick on Mark Twain, all present being let into the secret beforehand. He began an absurd exposition of the word genius, upon the conclusion of which the embarrassed Mark was obliged to acknowledge his inability to comprehend the speaker.

"Indeed!" exclaimed Artemus, and for half a minute he gazed at Mark with a face in which a shade of impatience began to mingle with astonishment and compassion. Then, heaving a sigh, he said: "Well, perhaps I was not sufficiently explicit. What I wished to say was simply that genius is a sort of illuminating quality of the mind inherent in those of constitutionally inflammable natures, and whose conceptions are not of that ambiguous and disputable kind which may be said--"

"Hold on, Artemus," interrupted Mark. "It is uselesss for you to repeat your definition. The wine or the brandy or the whisky or some other thing has gone to my head. Tell it to me some other time, or, better still, write it down for me and I'll study it at my leisure."

"Goodl" cried Artemus, his face beaming with pleasure. "I'll give it to you tomorrow in black and white. I have been much misunderstood in this matter, and it is important, that I should ter, and it is important that I should set myself right. You see that to the eye of a person of a warm and inflammable nature, and in whose self-luminous mind ideas arise that are by no means con-fined to the material which conception furnishes, but may be--"

"For God's sake!" cried Mark, "if you go at that again you'll drive me mad The general burst of laughter which followed this feeling and half angry pro-test made it plain to Mark that Artemus had been set to work on him with malic aforethought, and that all present were in the plot and had been amusing themselves at his expense.

An "Early Settler," Who Came in '56 when Omaha Was a Village of 500 Souls.

Judge John A. Porter, Known and Honored by Thousands of Omaha People, Warmly Commends the Work of Drs. Copeland and

An old-time resident of Omaha, Judge John A. Porter, of Los Angeles, Cal., is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Haney, at 1805 Farnam street. Judge Porter was a prominent and influential factor in the early history of this city. He be-came a resident here in 1856 and was exten-sively en aged in the commission and forwarding business. Omaha, though only a village of 500 people, was then, as it is now, a "Gate City" to a vast domain to the west-ward. At that early day Judge Porter conducted a store at 11th and Farnam, where the Paxton hotel now stands. His store burned in the winter of '56-the first fire in the city's Paxton hotel now stands. His store burned in the winter of 35—the first fire in the city's history. Later on Judge Porter was elected police judge which position he held for about twelve years. He has always been a property owner in Omaha and has about ling faith in the city's future greatness. Some years axo on account of his health, Julign Porter removed to Californie. Recently, while on his way to the World's Fair, he stopped off in Omaha and upon the advice of friends, placed himself under treatment with Dr. Shepard for a catarrhal and bronchial trouble. Regarding this he says:

"My catarrh had existed for a long time, and, added to this, came a bronchial cough, very severe and prostrating. My restantizh was bad y broken, with a soreness of the chest and choking up of the breathing. Finally, my symptoms became so urgent that I could, not delay getting hels. A friend who had personal experience with Dr. Shepard's treatment sent me to the Copeland Medical institute. I am pleased to say that the result-have been very graitfying. My cough and turn trouble was quickly controled and I am freer from my catarrhal trouble than I have been for years. I heartily commond to the public Dr. Shepard and his methods and skill.

"JOHN A. PORTER."

HOME TREATMENT.

A Letter from a Nebraska Lady Showing the Efficacy of Our Mail Treatment.

MRS. SARAH GLICK, RIVERTON, NEB., an estimable lady, writes as follows under date of July 10:

MRS. SARAH GLICK, RIVERTON, NEB., th estimable lady, writes as follows underdate of July 10: "After years of ill health I am pleased to "After years of ill health I am pleased to write you that your treatment is restoring me rapidly. At the time I began with you I could hardly walk. My limbs from my knees to my feet swelled with dropsy. My heart throbbed and beat so hard that it kept me in a tremble all over. Whenever I worsed or exceed a citarrh of the head gave me reat distress as if I was carrying a heavy load on top with a sore and tender scalp. Your mild remedies have almost cured me. I warmly thank you for your efforts and your kind interest in my case."

A BUSINESS MAN.

Mr. Julius T. Festner Does Not Hesitate to Speak Pininly to the Omaha Public. Probably no man in Omaha is better known han Julius T. Festner, the job printer, at 108 S. 14th street. His father, the late Frederick C. Festner, formerly a member of the board of trade, established the printing business in 1874. It is now carried on with great success by the son, who enjoys a large patronge from the business men of Omaha. Mr. Festner says

CURES THAT ARE CURES,

Mr. Leon Boyd, Son of Ex-Sheriff Boyd, Testifies to the Permanent Effects of Treatment Had Nearly Two Years Ago. Leon Boyd, son of the late ex-Sheriff J. F. Boyd, residing at 1202 Park avenue, was formerly a victim of the dreaded disease, catarrh, and after suffering years tells of his treatment and recovery:

in worry way.

'My improvement has made such a change in me that I wish to recommend Drs. Coppland and Shepard to the public. Their treatment in my case was thorough and skillful and relieved me of all my dutressing condition."

Mr. Boyd was treated and the above elatement gives nearly two years ago and his relie has been prominent. This fact was elected last week in an in erview at his residence, 1201 Park av nu. All the words of praise given ab we are as true today as whin first printed—alm ist two years since—and the case of Mr. Boyd adds another preof of the permanent and complete cures effected by Drs. Copstand and Shepard.
