

STUCK IN APPRETTI MESS

Lincoln's Unpleasant Experience in Quest of a Viaduct on O Street.

HER EFFORTS PRODUCE EMBARRASSMENT

Statement of the Tangle as it Has Proceeded—Latest Surprise Afforded by the Union Pacific—Traffic Hindered by the Blockade.

LINCOLN, Neb., Aug. 15.—[Special to THE BEE.]—The city of Lincoln is still deeply embarrassed in its project to construct a viaduct across the Burlington and Union Pacific tracks on O street. The whole trouble results from an effort to construct an expensive viaduct with no money in the city treasury with which to pay the contractor. The history of the effort of the city to compel the railroad companies to construct the viaduct is a long and tedious one, but after several years of tiresome controversy the railroad and the city council were able to come to terms last spring. An agreement was made in which it was popularly supposed that the railroad company would contribute to the funds from time to time of money to pay the damages to the abutting property. This money was to be advanced in the nature of a loan. Under the arrangement the mayor has to appoint appraisers to assess the damages to the abutting property. The mayor carried out his part of the agreement, the appraisers were appointed and the damages assessed at some $100,000.

Brought on Another Tangle. The awards, however, did not prove satisfactory to the property owners, and they stopped work after considerable progress had been made, and secured an injunction from the district court on the grounds that all such assessment of damages should be made by appraisers appointed by the judge of the county court. With this decision in mind appraisers were appointed in county court, and in due course of time they made their report, the details of which were fully reported in these columns some weeks ago. Then a new cause for controversy arose. The mayor insisted that the appraisers should be paid, and he threatened to do all in his power to defeat the payment. The city council either neglected or refused to pay the appraisers. The city attorney to appeal from the judgment of the appraisers.

This matter stands. The city either must pay the amount of the damages assessed with the work, or it can leave the work at a standstill, as it is at present, and take an appeal without depositing the damages or giving bond for payment. Or the railroad companies can, in pursuance of their original contract, advance the money for the payment of the damages and permit the work to go ahead.

Repetition by the Union Pacific. Council O'Shea visited Omaha yesterday in order to get the city officials in regard to securing an advance of the money necessary to enable the city to take advantage of one of the several courses open to it. The council has already been given assurances from the Burlington people that they were ready and willing to advance the money, but the council and therefore it was believed that the Union Pacific only was to be consulted. Mr. O'Shea called upon Judge Kelly of the legal department of the Union Pacific and expressed his surprise that the Union Pacific knew nothing whatever about the willingness of the Burlington people to advance the money. Judge Kelly admitted that the matter might have been referred to the general manager, Mr. Dickinson, who is just now absent from the state, but he declined to advise the council of the Burlington's intentions himself.

Then another surprise awaited the councilman from the city. It was ascertained that the delay and candor for which the affable Judge Kelly has long been noted that the Union Pacific has no idea of advancing any money with which to enable the city to pay damages to the abutting property.

Left in Bad Shape. The affable judge was certain that his company had no funds with which to enrich the property owners whose buildings and lots would be benefited by the viaduct. He was equally positive in his belief that the damages had been placed at too liberal a figure, and that the supreme court would not agree with the district court in holding that the original assessment made by the appraisers appointed by the city was the correct one. Judge Kelly promised, however, to indulge in another conference with the Burlington people and the talk will take place in T. M. Marquette's office in this city next Saturday.

Lively Political Sparring. There are evidences beneath the surface in Lincoln that some pretty pouncing is going on between the rival leaders of at least two political parties. It has been an open secret for some time that the independent leaders were about equally divided between the two parties. The independent party that the result of the committee's action in calling the gathering for September 5 is not entirely satisfactory to all interested parties. The independent party leaders themselves are divided as to the particular choice of the convention for justice of the supreme court and it is not denied that a strong faction exists which will insist upon the nomination of Judge Maxwell. But the men who really want Maxwell nominated are the ones who have the most to lose. It is not so much a matter of politics with them as a matter of securing a good man for the office. On the other hand, one of the most prominent advisers in the independent ranks assert openly that the convention was called early in the year for the purpose of electing a candidate in their favor, but who are willing to sacrifice the interests of the party and place a weak candidate in the field in order to enhance the prospect of men who claim no allegiance to the party. It is openly asserted that several of the independent leaders have sold themselves to the enemy.

On the republican side of the fence it is whispered quietly among the faithful that the state central committee will not be called together until there is no longer any possibility that the date of the independent convention can be changed. This has been expressed by a prominent republican in this city this afternoon, it is to encourage the independent to nominate Maxwell and then the way will be clear for the nomination of a candidate who will be much more acceptable to the men who have always endeavored to manipulate the party for their own interests. The republican contingent that is always pertinaciously active, but which is never active for the best interests of the party, is already showing signs of opposition and anticipation over the prospect of a divided independent party with Judge Maxwell leading one of the factions. It is believed in such a contingency, Maxwell can no longer lay claims to the support of the republicans. Although no one is talking seriously and soberly about the possibility of a great deal of very quiet work has been going on within the past two weeks.

Gioup at the State House. Superintendent Johnson of the Hastings Asylum for Incurable Insane was at the state house this forenoon. He states that the asylum has raised this year twelve acres of as fine sugar beets as can be found in any county in the state. The beets will net the institution at least $30 per acre. The superintendent states that if he was provided with the land he could probably cultivate 100 acres of sugar beets and make for the state from $2,500 to $3,000 per annum. Attorney General Hastings is at Omaha today for a final conference with Hon. J. L. Webster over the injunction proceedings. The State Board of Public Lands and Buildings will hold a session tomorrow for the purpose of awarding the contracts for erecting the new boiler house and laundry
