His Eloquence in the Cause of Free Coinage Lends Hope to the Bimetallists—Other Speeches Made—Proceedings of the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—The financial discussion in the house took on a deeper interest today than on any occasion since the opening day of the silver debate. William J. Bryan, the eloquent young congressman from Nebraska, added greater laurels to his reputation as an orator and made a free coinage speech which, in the opinion of many, surpassed the great tariff speech which gave him his name two years ago. For nearly three hours he held the interested attention of the house, and every interruption of which he was subjected only gave opportunity for those brilliant repartees for which he is so famous.

The silver discussion today was opened by Mr. McCall of Massachusetts, who made an elaborate argument on the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act, and concluded that such action could be justly construed as an admission that the silver standard was a failure. Mr. McCall, speaking for repeal, highly commended the president's message, which, in his opinion, had never been surpassed since any before. "It is a condition and not a theory that confronts us."

In opening his argument against the unconditional repeal of the Sherman law, Mr. Bryan said: "Upon the action of this congress might depend not only the welfare of the south and west, but not only the welfare of the United States, but the welfare of the world itself. Some outside of this hall had assumed the recommendation of the president imposed obligations on members to do as he directed, and some had even been harried enough to suggest a failure to do as he said would subject the dissenter to administrative discipline."

Under No Obligations. "The only law making any provision for the increased use of silver money is the Sherman law. The president recommended its unconditional repeal. The members are under no obligation to adopt recommendations since they are responsible to their constituents and not to the president."

Mr. Bryan's speech was highly commended by the press and the public. It was regarded as one of the best ever delivered in congress. Bryan's speech was highly commended by the press and the public. It was regarded as one of the best ever delivered in congress.

Houses and Barns Knocked to Pieces and Several Persons Injured—Miraculous Escape of a Baby—Details of the Tornado.

Pawnee City, Neb., Aug. 16.—[Special Telegram to The Bee.]—The Bee correspondent at this place today visited the scene of yesterday's cyclone and followed its path for over six miles to the west line of Richardson county.

The house and barn of A. Craig were worse than destroyed. Mr. Craig says he first heard a rumbling sound resembling the roar of a train, and upon looking out saw the cyclone about to descend upon him.

Mr. Craig was struck with a piece of flying timber and severely injured. All of Craig's farm implements, wagons, buggies and plows were broken and twisted into every conceivable shape.

Another mile further on the farm of Amos Habka was destroyed, and beyond Richardson city the stone house of Mr. Hunker was demolished.
