San Francisco Examiner.

There was a man once-Geoffrey Halkett by name-of few failings, but chief among these was the ineradicable conviction that he understood the innermost workings of the mind of a girl.

"A clever beggar I once knew," he explained one night to his old intimate, Paddon-"in fact, about the eleverest beggar I ever did know-once said to me, 'If you know one thing thoroughly, you hold the key to everything.' It didn't strike me particularly at the time. I had no reason for testing it, but it's awfully true, Jim. I can see it now." It was in Jim Paddon's rooms in Grav's in that this sententious remark was uttered. Jim Paddon was at the moment keenly interested in wondering whether the cork of a soda water bottle would come out easily, like a tooth with gas, wrench. The gas gained the day. "Well," he said, content now to dally or would require extracting with a with trivialities, "and what if it is?" "Well, I'll tell you. Sometimes this knowledge is very useful to you, and sometimes—well, it's just amusing. I don't think I'm particularly conceited, but I flatter myself that I have always had a knack of understanding girls. It isn't a thing a man cares to talk about much. In the first place ninety-nine people out of a hundred would put any one down as a fool who said this-possibly, I am rather femininely minded. In any case, I often used to think I could see things from their point of view better than most fellows and argue their cases in their own way. Now, since I have thoroughly understood one girl, I know I can do this. And what is the consequence? Why, they never astonish me now." Paddon took his pipe from his mouth and attempted to realize an old ambition, and blow a second smoke ring through a first.

"My experience," he said, when failure tripped him up remorselessly. "is that they vary too much. No two are alike and they always get mixed up, and to try to put them right is the worst of all. Whether he was alluding to smoke rings or girls was not very clear.

Halkett looked at him pityingly. He might have had doubts about women. but he knew that he understood men. "Look here, old fellow," he said you've either had one whisky too many or too few." Paddon adopted the only course open "Who's the poor girl you've experi-mented on? Do I know her?"

"That's rather a brutal way of putting it, but 1 suppose it's Kate." "Then,"said Paddon, "isn't it almost a pity that you are not going to marry her Halkett smiled. He was not a mar-

When next the two friends met it was at the home of Kate Temple, the maiden who, after being analyzed by one man, had perversely fallen in love with another. Halkett, too philosophical to be jealous, had only found in the cir-cumstance of her preference for his friend a further proof of the well known law that ideals must be lowered halfmast high when science passes by. In short, he liked her still, but his attitude now might be best described as one of slightly contemptuous sympathy. The circumstances under which they ber. The young man might take his lung to Davos Platz or to Colorado, but Halkett, like most people, was at his best in emergencies. The one cheering fact to the Temples on this last depres sing evening was his quiet announce ment to Kate that if Jim liked he would go with him and look after him. He had previously arranged it all with Paddon, who was pleased. This almost reconciled Kate to her lover's going to the further country. Jim Paddon did not feel ill, he said, whereas if he went to a place haunted by invalids he would and Kate's eyes were eloquent when she thanked him. She did not say much, but he was satisfied. It was at that moment that the eminently feminine thought occurred to her: "What a pity Geoffrey should not marry some nice girl!" Then old Mrs. Temple said goodby to all and discreetly left the lovers to settle the rest. This took two hours and three-quarters, during which time Geoffrey leaned against a lamp-pity that Kate's eyes should be wasted on Jim. He was aroused by Jim rushing down the steps, almost knocking him down and swearing at him. They walked to London that night, by way of getting up strength for the journey.

Ruskin, who advocated once a period of lengthened probationary absence for the young man in love, probably foresaw the advantage of taking steps which would cancel 50 per cent of first engage-ments. Paddon was not to be relied upon with impunity. His lung grow lusty and strong in the bracing air of the Rocky mountains, but he fell in love with a set-tler's daughter just before the time when he should have returned to Kate.

Hatkett had noticed this emotion in its incipient stages, but Paddon had not, nor had it even tinged his letters to Kate, when he contracted a prevalent form of fever, and the settler's daughter nursed him through it. As soon as he became convalescent he bestowed on her a new Colorado edition of his old love

Now, Paddon's illness had been Hal-kett's opportunity. Whatever swerved in him, it was never his loyalty to his friends. He wrote to Kate regularly.

all met now were rather depressing. James Paddon had many weaknesses, and one of them had just attained an alarming prominence. Sir McDermott Ballarat, who doubled the parts of eminent specialist and family friend to the Temples (for Kate had one incumbrance -she was garrisoned round about by a maiden aunt with fads), had just dis ered that his dear youg friend Paddon possessed only one lung instead of the

with him and brought home to him very forcibly that he hade a mistake. Sooner or later Kate must learn the truth. It would be better for her to hear it from him now than to have it brutally broken to her later, when it might injure her life more. It was not a pleasant mission, this mission of confession on which he went a short time after his return, but be configured himself with the the thought he confronted himself with the thought that she would at least acknowledge that all he had done was out of consideration for her. Geoffrey Halkett never told any one what happened at that interview. As a matter of fact, the girl heard him all through, and then, white and trembling with indignation, infinitely scornful with herself for having allowed any one to defame her lover while she listened, she turned and left him-not, though, before she had pointedly suggested that he should never enter the house again. 'She had never trusted him from the very beginning," so she said, "and now Halkett took up his hat and went.

This man, who had thought himself never to be astonished again, was an obstinate man, but not too obstinate to acknowledge himself astonished. He wasted no time over useless arguments or letters, but he went abroad and some time subsequently he met Jim Paddon. The interview was short, but satisfactory. All, it appeared, that Halkett re-quired of his former friend was a letter written to Kate, telling her how matters stood. Paddon demurred, and Mrs. Paddon thought Halkett a nuisance.

"I may be a sneak," said Jim; but I'll —— if I'll write myself down one." Halkett declined to enter into the distinction. "You can put it in a gentle-manly way if you can," he said.

A man with only one lung and a bad case is no match for a man with two lungs and a good case and a rapidly de-veloping passion for a woman. In less than a month Halkett was home with the letter.

"Kate is devilish obstinate when she's in a bad temper," he said to himself. "I know what she'll do now; she'll refuse to see me. and I'm not going to trust the letter to the post." Still, he wrote and asked her to make an appointment. She replied by return, naming a day and hour. Halkett gasped a little at this, but went for a walk to think how he should meet her.

He need not have troubled about arranging speeches or lines of conduct. Kate took the initiative at the interview, as he might have known she must. She was very civil, only rather distant, and asked him why he wanted to see

"I have brought you a letter," he said. She held out her hand.

He gave it to her. She looked at the writing, murmured an excuse and left him. When she came back there was little changed about her except a hesitancy in her speech.

"Don't make me apologize," she said, "but, of course, I knew you were right when you told me, only I wasn't going to allow any one but Jim to say such things about himself, was I?"

"Certainly not," said Halkett, too blinded by the sentiment of the sentence to consider its grammar. "It is I who have to apologize."

So they parted good friends and the student of women went home satisfied, and on the whole rather pleased than not with the sensation of astonishment to which he was now becoming quite accustomed.

After a decent interval of these friendly relations he asked her to marry him. Then the friendly intercourse snapped like a pipestem and she told him he had insulted her. "You ought by this time." she said, "to know me too well to imagine that I could ever love again."

This finished off Geoffrey Halkett. He spent a miserable month making up his mind whether to go abroad or to the devil, and had finally decided on a

Geoffrey Halkett read this letter, but not all his experience could make him look as though he had expected it.

After a little while he smiled and lit his pipe, and was happy. He might not un-derstand women, but he understood that letter. On Wednesday morning he spent Queer Facts About Money.

There are 119,900,000 old copper pennies somewhere. Nobody knows what has become of them, except that once in a while a single specimen turns up in change. A few years ago 4,500,000 bronze 2 cent pieces were set alloat.

Three millions of these are still outstanding. Three million 3 cent nickel pieces are scattered over the United States, but it is very rarely that one is seen. Of 800,000 half cents, which correspond in value to English farthings, not one has been returned to the government for recoinage or is held by the treasury. Congress appropriates from $100,000 to $150,000 yearly for recoining the uncurrent silver coins now in pos-session of the treasury. These are mostly half dollars, and are not circulated because there is no demand for them. Not long ago the stock of them amounted to $20,000,000, but it is only about half of that now. The money set aside for recoining is not intended to pay for the cost of the minting, but is required to reimburse the treasury of in weight which the silver pieces have suffered by abrasion. This loss amounts to $30 on every $1,000, and it has to be

HUMORS OF THE CRISIS.

An Eccentric Stranger Causes Quite a Ser sation in a New York Bank.

"Speaking of the financial stringency, said a Wall street broker to the New York Tribune, "I've got a good one to tell you. Saturday morning a tall, sol which I might name, only I promised I wouldn't, and approaching the window of the receiving teller, quietly remarked that he would like to ac-posit $5,000. The teller in courteous ones inquired if he already had an ac count at the bank. The stranger said he hadn't. So the teller hastened outside, escorted him into the president's room and introduced him to the presi dent. The president, on learning his business, smiled kindly, offered him a seat, and remarked that it was a fine new depositor's signature in a big ledger and one of the clerks was directed to provide him with a pass book. Then the receiving teller took him back into the bank and politely asked for his de with the money on the 4th of October

He added that it looked like rain, and that a steady pour for half a day would prove a great blessing to the country. The teller reached for his bronze paper weight, but before he could fire it the
