cross-examination witness was asked what the penalty for disobedience of orders was and he answered, "Discharge." He did not know whether it was Galligan or Salter who ordered the line laid in, but he was sure that there was a man with a torch up foot, which was by far the lowest bid made, the committee claims. It is added that the there before he started.

The chief then asked the witness if it was slates supplied are of excellent quality and not customary for the truckmen to go through a building and search for sparks after a fire was supposed to be out. Witness large size, Morris Morrison, chairman of the committee on buildings and property, in speaking of the matter of the blackboards, said : answered in the affirmative.

Samuel Macieou testified that he was familiar with the building from the time the "I do not see how any one can find fault with those slates or with the committee for buying them. True enough, they are foundations had been laid and that he had always thought the walls upsafe. 'filled' as Mr. Macleod says, but what of that? It is an established fact that slate, so

Then came Frank P. Froom, who lives at 4215 Burdette street and works for the Pacific Express company. He knew Jerome personally; heard the order for the men to go up the ladder. Saw some one up there with a torch before the order was given.

D. A. Burnhill said that he was standing on the west side of Fifteenth street when the order was given to ascend. He didn't know whether Galligan had on a black or a white rubber coat, but he told the jury a lot of his experiences while serving with the Red Oak, Ia., volunteer fire department. In speaking about the orders issued witness claimed that the chief said, "Get up there,

Galligan's Alleged Prejudice.

Peter M. Back then took the stand. He said that Jerome had told him that Galligan didn't like him and that they were not on good terms, and that he expected Galligan would get him killed before long. Witness also said that scrowe had complained that the chief always put him in places where he was likely to get hurt, and cited the Wake-field fire as an instance. Charles Peterson, a brother-in-law of the dead man, then went on the stand. He said that Jerome had often complained because Chief Galligan would not transfer him to some other engine house. The chief, accord-ing to the witness, had refused to transfer him because he was the best climber in the department and was needed on the big truck. Witness then offered in evidence an affidavit drawn on June 19 of this year and sworn to by Jerome on the 14th of July before W. C. Kelly, a notrary public. In this document he swears that on or about the 19th of June Chief Galligan called at engine house No. 3 and abused him before the other men, and among other things saying: "I have it in for you. I will get you and some more in this house sooner or later." Peter-son testified that the signature to this paper was that of his bother in law went up into the building, along with Jerome, to loss for fire. We had a torch. We went up in pursuance with our usual duties as truckmen. After I ascended and looked around I found quite a blaze among the rubbish and called down for a line of hose. While waiting for the hose line Jerome took a torch and went into the building I cautioned him two or three times about going too far. I looked at the wall about going too far. I looked at the wall before I went up and considered it safe. I did not have any orders to go up and I know that Jerome did not. When the floor feil we were all a little bit mixed up. I heard Jerome say, "Weil, now, that's lucky." Before we could get out the wall fell. How I was rescued I can't remember." remember.

the statements made by Mr. Morrison as to the relative merits of the two kinds of

Mrs. Fred Lilligren, sister-in-law of the dead man, said: "Hilmer has not been at work lately, and I have allowed him to sleep as late as he desired in the morning. He generally got up about 9 or 10 o'clock, but dressed, is far superior to the undressed article, and that it will hold its finish and give far better satisfaction in every way than the other. Wherever the undressed state is in use in the schools here it has been sometimes slept until noen. He went down town about 7 o'clock last evening, and I do not know at what hour he returned. At 8 o'clock this morning my 4 year-old boy came to me and asked me to call 'uncle.' I cautioned the child not to wake him up at that hour. The child pushed open the door of the room where my brother in may slept. At that time his brother was here, and I was in-clined to wake up Hitmer, but on second thought regarded the hour as being too early. I glanced through the door at that time and saw Hitmer lying in bed as slates. One member of the board, who has had his attention called to the matters under discussion more than once, announced that he was tired of it, and that in his opinion the insig-uitenance of the causes made the argument though he was peacefully sleeping. When I went to call him at 10 o'clock his head was lying on the floor and his feet were on the bed. He evidently had a spasm and fell just as he started to arise from bed. He made no noise, however. The station meent at Redwood has become implicated in the wrecking of a train, by which several passengers were killed. He finds a baby in the wreck and, overcome by remorse, adopts it and rears it as his own. The first act in-troduces the little walf, now aimost grown to womanhood, a merry, lighthearted, lov-able girl, who assists her adopted father in his station duties and known along the line his station duties and known along the line as Neille, "the sweet manipulator of the wires." Neille has the proverbial sweetheart in Charlie Morton, the conductor of the limited mail. The usual rival is a wealthy mine owner. The machinations of the villain to gain possession of the hand of the heroine and the timely interpositions follow and Neille finally turns out to be an heiress, Morton marries her, and all ends hanning nappily.

Marphy, Mr. Thomas W. Keene will follow the "Limited Mail" at Boyd's, opening Monday evening with his elaborate scence production of "Richard HI:" Tuesday, "Richelieu;" Wednesday, "Macheth:" Wednesday mati-nee, "Romeo and Juliet."
