FOUGHT THE WHOLE FAMILY

Trial of an Old Street Car Driver Who Once Killed a Robber.

HARRY WOOLDRIDGE'S CAREER RECALLED

Hero of an Exciting Fight with Thieves Defendant in an Assault Case-The Policeman's Marksmanship Was Very Bad-Court Cullings.

In the criminal division of the district court the case against Harry L. Wooldridge, which has been monopolizing considerable public attention during the past week, has been submitted to the jury, and although the twelve men have considered the law and the evidence for more than twenty-four hours, they are unable to agree upon a

This is a case wherein the defendant is charged with assault with intent to do great bodily harm, committed upon about all of the Gortter family, residing out in Kensington, one of the northwestern suburbs of the

As the story goes and as told in the courts, the elder Gortter some ten years ago rented a strip of meadow land not far from his residence. There for several years he has cut hay for the market, and has been in undisturbed possession. Last summer he cut the hay as usual, and everything went well until about the middle of July, when early one morning Wooldridge appeared upon the scene and declared that he proposed to cut the remainder of the standing grass August Gortter, a young man, protested, teiling Wooldridge that the land was leased by his father, and that other people were forbidden from doing any haying upon that particular tract of ground.

Held His Own Against Odds.

Wooldridge replied that he did not care : d-n about any lease, that he had a right to cut the grass and that he proposed to make hay during the sunshine. With that he whipped up his horses, which were at-tached to the mower, and commenced to cut the grass. August Gortter followed along and as soon as the opportunity presented itself he seized the horses by the bridles and brought them to a stand still. This aroused the ire of Wooldridge, and jumping from his seat on the mower he seized a monkey wrench, with which he belabored the lad over the head, knocking him down and cutting him in a frightful manner. Mrs. Gortter, who was standing in the door of the house, a few rods distant, seeing that her son was getting the worst of the fight, eagerly rushed to the fray, but, like the boy, was soon put to sleep by a few kicks from Wooldridge's heavy boots A daughter, Mary, then jumped into the breach, but, like her brother and mother, she went down like the grass before the mower. Having knocked the whole family out of the ring the man continued his mowing, feeling that he had fought the battle and had won a

The next day he was arrested and at the examination was held to answer at the district court, where he is now waiting for the verdict of the jury.

Wooldridge is a man with a reputation, having staked his fortune in Omaha some ten years ago, coming from some little town in Missouri. Shortly after arriving here he found employment as a driver of a street car, operating on the old line on North Eighteenth street.

Memories of His Career.

During the summer and fall of 1885 street car robberies were of frequent occurrence, and there was hardly a night when some driver was not held up in the outskirts of the city and relieved of the cash box. Two or three times these bandits had struck the Eighteenth street line, but none of them One September afternoon a number of the car drivers were sitting in the car barn at Twenty-sixth and Lake streets, discussing the many robberies and telling what they would do if they were held up. Wooldridge had been a listener, and after the others had ished. he remark up. I'll put a ball through his heart.

His associates laughed, considering it a joke, for they had made up their minds that Wooldridge was a coward and that he would deliver as soon as his cash box was de manded from the front end of the car.
That night Wooldridge took the late run on the Eighteenth line and just before midnight, as he was making his last trip in, and when he was just back of A. J. Poppleton's residence, near the intersection of Spruce street, a man steeped from behind the shade of a tree and, pointing a gun. demanded the cash. Without saying a word Woodstiger seased in the saying a word Wooldridge reached into the cash box and, instead of pulling out the dimes and dollars, pulled a revolver, which he instantly leveled upon the robber and fired. The man fell to the ground and Wooldridge drove out to the barn, where he told the watchman that he had shot a robber. Then he went to the police station, told his story and surrendered to the authorities. The patrol was sent to the scene of the shooting and there the dead body of John Ruckles, a notorious crook, was found.

An examination of the body proved that Wooldridge had been true to his word and that he had put a ball through the heart of the robber. The next day heart of the robber. The next day the coroner's jury sat upon the case, returning a verdict that Ruckles had come to his death from the effects of a pistol ball, fired by Harry Wooldridge, who was acting in self defense. This verdict exonerated Wooldridge and for a time he was a lion in the eyes of the public. He was toasted and feasted by the street car company, while the patrons of the car line raised a snug little purse of money which they presented to the man who had the nerve to shoot a robber.

After that Wooldridge had some trouble

nerve to shoot a robber.

After that Wooldridge had some trouble over a family affair, as he wedded the daughter of a prominent and wealthy citizen. Scarcely had the ceremany been performed when a woman from Missouri appeared upon the scene and furnished conclusive evidence that she was Mrs. Wooldridge No. 1, and that there had never been any legal separation. There was a promise that the matter would find its way into the courts, but a settlement was made upon the first wife and she went back to her southern home with money, but without a husband that she could money, but without a husband that she could

A CHURCH ROW.

Story of Division of a Lutheran Congregation in Burt County. The sorry spectacle of a church being di vided against itself is being exhibited to the public in Judge Ferguson's court, where one faction is seeking to secure an order re straining the other faction from using the house of worship.

In 1873 Simon Korl deeded to the trustees of the Evangelical Lutheran St. Paul church of Burt and Dodge counties ten acres of land seven miles southwest of Oakland in Burt county, so the petitioners allege and ever, with the distinct understanding that the society would erect a church building the society would erect a church building thereon and maintain it forever. In the due course of time the little church was erected and a pastor installed, and things went well and the work of saving souls commenced. But in 1890 Rev. Ed Bergh, the pastor, was removed and Rev. W. H. Fricke elected in his stead.

This change of pasters caused trouble and the membership of the church split in twain, each faction following the lead of its respective paster. Two keys, however, were supplied, and on each afternate Sabbath one supplied, and on each alternate Sabbath one of the men of God held forth to his own flock. After a while this method of procedure became tiresome and the followers of Fricke rebelled, claiming that they were the disciples of the Evangelical Lutheran church of St. Paul, and that the members of the flock which was guided by Bergh were interlowers.

the flock which was guided by Bergh were interlopers.

From that time on it has been a fight to the death. First one side would have possession of the house of God and then the other would hold the fort. Doors were barred and broken and arrests were made until the whole affair became a public scanial. Finally, and at last, and in order to settle the matter for all time to come. Henry Mosemann. Rudolph C. Suhr and Gerhard Havekort, the trustees of the original organization, went into the district court and asked for an injunction restraining the other asked for an injunction restraining the other side from using the church in any manner whatever, claiming that they were about to take the church out of the Nebraska synod and place it under the control of the synod of the state of Missouri. They also aver that at a secret meeting this outside faction stole the old constitution of the church and in its stead substituted another constitution in which it was provided that the church should be named St. Paul's German Lutheran church On this showing the temporary order was granted and now the desire is to have the injunction made permanent.

Burgiar and Wounded a Boy, Once upon a time William Hughes was a sember of the South Omaha police force, but he is not there any more, though he was n Judge Hopewell's court yesterday, where he and his bondsmen were called to show why they should not pay $500 to John Skarld, a boy 3 years of age. On April 20, 1892, Hughes was chasing a burgiar and had him dead to rights, for he had seen him in the very act of committing the crime. It was a nip and tuck race and the minion of the law was becoming winded. Just then a happy thought flitted through the brain of the bluecoat and he concluded that he would shoot the man instead of run ning him down. Pulling his gun he blazed away, but instead of shooting the burglar he shot the boy, who was in an opposite direc-tion and some fifty feet away. The humilia-tion of being such a poor shot caused the officer to turn his star over to the city, after which the father of the lad sued the officer and his bondsmen for damages

Hunt's Home at Florence.

By the terms of the stipulation, the aged and time-worn case of George J. Hunt has been dismissed from the dockets of the courts of the county and another legal battle s at an end.

As long ago as man can remember, Hunt came in possession of some lots in the town of Florence, getting them via the Mormon grant. For years he held possession and no man dared to question his right, but about ten years ago the trustees of the fown of Florence claimed to have discovered a flaw in the title and that Hunt was without any equity in the property. He threw a high fence about the land and dared any man to tear it down. The trustees were not men who would take a dare and at once that tence disappeared. This was the beginning of the legal fight which has been carried from court to court, with first one party on top and then the other.

Yesterday the case was dismissed at the cost of the plaintiff and from this time hence he will rest under the shade of his own vine and fig tree, which grows upon the Florence lots, without any person or corporation dar-ing to make him afraid.

Rellman Estate Settlement. Maria Heliman, widow of the late Myer Hellman, and executrix of the estate, has filed her report with the judge of the probate court, showing what she has done in the premises. The report shows that she has collected the sum of $49,096.68 and has disbursed the sum of $43,273.70, exclusive of her monthly allowance of $750.

Kansa: City and Its Water Works. Kansas City, Nov. 23. - The city this morning arrested six men employed by the water works company for digging in the streets without a permit. The city holds that as the franchise of the company has expired the company has no more right to dig in the streets than any other private corporation. The franchise expired some time since. The company refused to sell its plant to the city as the condition under which its charter was granted was stipulated, holding that the price was not a fair one. This morning's action by the city is the first overt act in the fight.

Bauished Under Sentence. William York and Charles Hamilton were charged with vagrancy before Judge Berka yesterday afternoon. The charges were sustained and the men were sentenced to thirty days in the county jail. The sentence was suspended and the men given a few hours to research the men given a few hours to get out of the city.

Newsboys' Banquet Postpoued. For the past several days the newsboys of this city have been living in fond anticipation of having a feast at Washington hall last night. There was quite a crowd of newsboys at the hall at the appointed hour but there was no banquet, no speakers and one lights. After standing around for some time they were informed by a new arrival that the affair had been postponed until De-cember 9. He could not tell why the postponement took place. This statement proved to be a disappointment for the ponement but they retained their tickets and will anxiously await developments. The holders of tickets were at a loss to understand this sudden move. It was learned later on that the banquet was postponed be-cause the sale of tickets was not sufficiently large enough to insure success, but the boys have been assured that the "eatin" wil take place on December 9.

Distilleries Starting Up.

After a period of several months of idle ness the distilleries have resumed operations, and it is expected that before the end of the month they will be running full capa city. The Willow Springs plant is now using about 1,250 bushels of grain per day, but will increase this to 2,200 bushels. The Columbia started up Monday.

It is stated that it is the intention of the trust to run everything full capacity until a full stock is on hand, in order to avoid the increase in tax that is certain to be levied by congress at its next session.

Crueity to Animals.

Yesterday morning the chief of police received a daintily written letter from Isabel Lee, complaining about the way horses are treated by the workmen employed in ex-cavating the ruins of the Farnam street Miss Lee asserts that the horses are beaten and kicked by the drivers and com-pelled to draw heavier loads than they should. The chief has directed his men to arrest every one seen abusing the animats. Only on Suspicion. Paul Buhler, a young man who has figured in police annals quite extensively in the past, arrived in the city last night and was immediately arrested by Sergeant Haze. Buhler says he has been traveling in the cast during the past summer. In his pocket was found a letter to Frank Wilson, a convict in the Canon City, Col., penitentiary, which contained some valuable information for the police. Buhler is charged with being a suspicious character.

Workman Injured. J. M. Smith, a laborer, employed by the Omaha Bridge and Terminal company, had his left leg broken yesterday morning while unloading ties. Smith was standing on top of the load of ties and slipped. He fell in such a manner that the limb was broken. The patrol wagon took the injured man to St. Joseph's hospital.

The robbery and attempted murder at the lighthouse on "Coffin Rocks," off the Devonshire coast, is still fresh in the memory of English newspaper readers. A young girl had received an inheritance of several hundred pounds, and for safekeeping decided to place it with her lover, the keeper of the lighthouse. On the evening of the same day she had left the money it became necessary to send an assistant to the mainland for oil, who, on reaching the shore, was enfor oil, who, on reaching the shore, was enticed into a public house and drugged. During his stupor the boat was taken and rowed to the lighthouse, where a terrific struggle took place between the keeper and his assailants, who left their victim seriously wounded and unconscious. The crime, which baffled the best Scotland Yard detectives for a long time, is vividly recalled and minutely reenacted in the new melodrama, "The Span of Life," by Sutton Vane, which will be presented by William Calder's American company, under the direction of H American company under the direction of H. # AN OFFICIAL COUNT our sister states "How much majority do you need? It serves to discover how many of a certain candidate relatives have cast their ballots against him. It makes states full of rivers—"dry."—But the official count of the Nebraska means "Something is about to drop."—A fortnight age we counted too many suits-of course we made em disappear like icicles in a Turkish bath-Next we counted our overconts-found two lots having a majority by about 2,000. Now, these are elected-to go-Got 'em down for this week's special sale-bout 40c less on every dollar.

There is no tale of woe connected with this overcoat. We have too many of 'em-that's all. You saw no better coat for $10. We gamble on it. These overcoats are just the proper thing for dress and comfortable use; medium weight and sack style.

Pretty fine quality of navy blue cassimere, with small diagonal stripe, lined with fine Italian velvet collar. Made to or not to roll in front, with silk worked button holes, finished on both sides.

When an honest value like this $15 garment has to be sacrificed, and sold at $9.50, it begins to look like -- hard times. A year ago today the same garment, was the leading $15 overcoat of the season. Well, let us not wonder, even if Uncle Sam sends our entire navy to Ha-

Three desirable shades, the black, navy blue and chocolate brown. Every one from the kersey maker's loom. All wool fast colors, made up in double breasted cut. silk stitched edges, lined with California flannel and finished with satin on the upper half. Get a hump on

A thing of beauty is a joy forever—not that beauty makes up for everythingquality must be good-that's our cut glass. Come and see it.

You'd Holler

If your wife traded with a grocer who threw a few handfuls of sugar into a bag and "guessed she had a pound." You'd talk scales to her.

Why not talk scales to yourself? Aren't YOU 'guessing' about the circulation of some of the papers you use.

> CAUTION-There's no guess work in dealing with this paper. Our circulation's printed on the editorial page. You know what you're buying and you get what you pay for.
