

ANTI-CRUCR INFLUENCES
Some of Them Which Seem to Prevail with Young Women.
DR. PATTERSON'S SERIES OF SERMONS

At the First Presbyterian church last evening the discussions as to the reasons assigned for nonattendance at church were brought to a conclusion. The services have proved exceedingly satisfactory and have elicited much interest, the church being filled to its utmost capacity each evening.
Mr. Patterson took for his text the prayer of the psalmist, "That our sons may be as plants grown up in their youth; that our daughters may be as cornerstones polished after the similitude of a palace."

"It is sometimes a matter of wonder that ministers speak more frequently and freely of young men than of young women," Mr. Patterson said. "One reason is that the pulpit shares the common belief that young men are more exposed to temptation and are more susceptible to temptation than young women. There prevails in the world a false gallantry, which demands that whenever a man speaks of woman in public he shall use only the language of compliment and adoration. Otherwise, the speaker is considered destitute of civility. Most men prefer silence to unfriendly judgment and sharp criticism, but in my judgment it is unworthy the ministry to bring into the pulpit the flattering compliments of the drawing room, and, therefore, I take the privilege of plain speech. Some young women do not attend church because they are unable to rent pews. The fee for a seat will not hold good in churches where there are a considerable number of unrented pews. Most churches that rent pews reserve a number of pews in the best portion of the house for the accommodation of strangers. Churches whose seating capacity is not in excess of the membership will find this constantly compromised by the system of pew renting. A stranger in a church is in the nature of a guest in one's home and is entitled to the best accommodation the church has. It must not be forgotten that it requires money to support churches, neither should it be assumed that the speaker is to be supported by the support of the gospel. A church where the rent for pews is too high will give more than they will pay for the rental of pews. This is becoming a vital question in the churches today, wherein the system of free pews has been tried; it has not proved a financial success. Families should be advised to rent places to sit; reasons for this are obvious, but every seat in every church, according to the spirit of the new testament, should be open to any worshiper who seeks communion with God in His house.
"Some young women do not attend church because they have formed a habit of reading the newspapers and magazines has done much to this end. It is said that the sculptor, Hart, made a statue of a woman who had a woman triumphant. The ladies of his native state, Kentucky, have bought it, and it adorns the city hall at Lexington. Of it Frances Willard said:
It shows a perfect woman, nobly planned,
To warn, to comfort, and to command,
A creature not too bright for good,
For human nature's daily food;
And yet a spirit pure and bright,
With something of the angel's light.
"But where can such real and living ideal of woman be found? Certainly not in the magazines. They are only caricatures. No wonder they present false ideals. As Moses builded the tabernacle according to the pattern shown him in the mount, so every man and woman is to follow a pattern the character revealed in Christ.
SUNDAY THEATERS.
"The theaters present some young women from attending church. I do not desire that the theaters should be closed, or demerits of the theater, but I submit that there is no reasonable defense of the Sunday theater, and I wish to raise my voice against the Sunday theater. For one I consider it a burning disgrace. I am glad to know that the manager of the leading theater in this city would be glad to close his place of amusement on Sunday. I am glad to know that respectable actors almost without exception oppose Sunday theaters. They are only missionaries of the theater goers of this city who regard the Lord's day to stand in favor of no Sunday shows. For one I do not see how a respectable Christian can support a play house that runs on Sunday.
But I hear some one say Chicago has Sunday theaters. They may be a good reason why we should not have them, but why not want Chicago's shame; neither do we want her sins. Chicago had her Haymarket, is that any reason why we should have one? Chicago had her Prendergast, is that any reason why we should have one? Yet the very influences that brought about these conditions in Chicago are working here, and who shall say that we will not suffer another riot, a crime harvest? But another says the Sunday theater keeps people from worse places. Yes, it does, but it is a very ones, too. Constituted as men are, it is very easy for the good to supplant the better and the better to supplant the best. I submit if the Sunday theaters are not to be closed, enterprises why not offer seats free and go out into the highways and hedges and saloons and gambling halls and houses of prostitution and compel them to come in? The truth is the Sunday theater is not after men and women. The mission of the Sunday theater is not to heal the sores of Lazarus, but to increase the store of sin. It is not run in the interest of the laboring man, but in the interest of his hard-earned cash. And I appeal to the fathers and mothers of this city as they love their own boys and girls, by the thundering law of Sinai, by the pleading sacrifice on Calvary, by the promised land of Canaan, I appeal to you to abolish this shame.
SOCIAL ENGAGEMENTS.
"Some young women do not go to church because of social engagements on Sunday evening. Why not invite the young gentlemen to the house of God? If it is not care to be seen with him in church you should be ashamed to spend an evening with him in your parlor. If he does not respect your religious convictions, neither should you respect him. It will not take a Christian young woman long to decide between the house of God and a social party with an irreligious young man. I am a great believer in the power that young women might exercise over young men. I believe it is within the power of young women to do more for the moral reformation of young men than they dream of. If young women would refuse to associate with young men who divide the time between places of low amusement and their lady friends, then the young men would begin to realize that there was something serious in their behavior and would set about to mend their ways. So long as fair and faultless women smile on corrupt and impure men, the men will continue to corrupt themselves. Shakespeare paid a high compliment to woman's influence when he said: "The catastrophe of every play is caused always by the folly or the faith of a man, and the redemption, if there be, is by the wisdom and virtue of a woman." From the time that Eve gave Adam the forbidden fruit man has followed woman's lead for good or ill. Occasionally we find a Joseph with his power to assist a temptress, a Job that will not curse God though commanded to do so by his wife, but the rule is that though a woman become a Delilah, a Jezebel or a Herodias, there will be plenty of men who will follow her lead.

AMUSEMENTS.
"Laugh and the world laughs with you, weep and you weep alone," must have been the governing thought in the minds of Harry and Edward Paulson when they gave "Niobe," which was done yesterday at the Fifteenth Street theater, to the stage. Laughter pervades the three acts of this accurate comedy to a wonderful degree and is administered in alopathic doses to the people in front.
Had Gilbert's "Pygmalion and Galatea" never been written "Niobe" would, in all probability, never have seen a nineteenth century drawing room, much less looked upon the men and women of the present through eyes that at least are 3,000 years old. It was a most clever conceit to bring back the wife of the king of Thebes, who was changed into stone by the gods long before the Homeric periods, and place her as governess over a modern household, which is the "irritating cause" of all the complications that arise in the life of Peter Amos Dunn, the life insurance agent.
Niobe, the famous mother of so many heroes, whose real name is not given, but who suffers on every occasion by sighs and tears has been exploited in almost every literature, is very discreetly played by Miss Margaret Fuller, a new comers to the comedy stage, but a veteran in melodramatic work. Her performance was characterized by tact and spirit, the young lady catching and holding the humorous feelings of the part admirably, while her touches of the ancient Greek civilization in occasional parts and her dignified bearing, which, notwithstanding the storm that raged, were large. The dignity and gentleness of Niobe were pleasantly contrasted, the outline of those who had seen Miss Isabelle Coe in the part being sympathetically inclined to Miss Pealy's well rounded interpretation.
Peter Amos Dunn is in very competent hands, although one wishes now and then that Mr. Anderson were just a trifle taller than the contrast between the clinging and clinging nature of the money maker might be more pronounced. Mr. Anderson has the comedy instinct well developed, but he lacks the repose the role seems to require and he plays it with a bit too much patter. Repression is what Mr. Anderson needs to make the part a bit better.
Mr. Frank Short, an Omaha boy, and a most promising young actor, plays the eccentric art enthusiast splendidly. In making his character a little more eccentric, he shows the student throughout. In direct opposition to the character study, Mr. Short played a conventional young lover's part with a grace and ease that was a pleasure to one part actor. Miss Daisy Mayer makes much of the ingenue part, Hattie Griffin. She is bright and vivacious and helps the comedy, while she shows a fine sense of humor with considerable merit. If the expressions she uses in her scenes are not too acid, she is any criterion of success. The rest of the company is entirely acceptable, the curtain calls showing the pleasure the audience obtained from the comedy.

STRANGE SIGHTS IN SEWERS
What Has Been Seen by Crawling Men in Rubber Suits.
WORK OF THE CITY ENGINEER'S FORCE
Result of a Trip Through the Big Sewers of the City—How They Are Staggering the Wear—Some Curiousities Captured.
Since the first of the year City Engineer Rosen has had part of his force engaged in making a new sewer system of the city, and some of the discoveries made are of a nature to interest the average individual as well as to attract the attention of the scientist. The inspections are made by men clad in rubber suits passing through the walls of the sewers, which have been made since the building of the sewers. Inasmuch as some of the sewers are large enough to admit the passage of a man on horseback for miles, and others are four or five feet in diameter, this work is not as difficult as it might seem at first thought. The principal object of the inspection was to ascertain how badly the walls and bed of the sewers were becoming worn and to note such effects as would be of value in further extensions of the sewer system of the city or in repairing or rebuilding any of that portion already laid.
In the office of the city engineer may now be seen some of the curiosities that have been brought to the light of day by the men making the inspection. Among them are pieces of a calcareous formation that was noticed in the sewer at the vicinity of Seventeenth street and St. Mary's avenue. They were formed on the stagnate and stale water from a fluid that percolated through the walls of the sewer, and the chemicals in the sewage and the gases that rise from it.
Among the other products of the darkness, warm moisture and foul air of the sewers are mushrooms of the most varied and fantastic forms and colors. Some of the specimens appearing in the form of a cluster, bearing a striking resemblance to a bunch of grapes. Some of these mushrooms have been brought from their birthplace in the noxious atmosphere of the sewers, only to wither and decay in a few days. Arrangements have been made for their preservation in alcohol. It is evident that their growth has occurred within the past six months, or since the last time the sewers were washed away.
One of the discoveries of the inspectors has tended to increase the anxiety of engineers have held up to this time, and that is that the heaviest wear at a bend in a sewer has been at the outside of the curve. The observations of the inspectors show that the wear is at the inside of the curve, and this is explained by the engineer on the theory that while the centrifugal force throws the water to the outer or farther side in passing around the curve, the sediment and ingredients carried along by the water, being heavier than the water itself, are thrown to the inner side, and at the bottom near the inner side, and their grinding is due to the wear that has been noticed. It was made known that the wear in some places amounts to several inches, and it will soon be necessary to make repairs by relaying the inner course of brick work with concrete. The observations are particularly those where the fall is heavy, and the flow of the sewage unusually rapid, as it is the constant flow that does the damage and not the occasional rush during the brief period of a heavy rainfall.

HOME BUILDERS.
Annual Stockholders Meeting of the Omaha Association.
The eleventh annual meeting of the stockholders of the Omaha Loan and Building Association was held Wednesday evening at the office of the association, 1224 Farnam street, Bee building. The attendance was greater than at any previous meeting of the association, and the number of the shares voted was double that of last year. The election of three directors occupied considerable time, being conducted by five judges and clerks. About 1,200 votes were cast. The election resulted in the choice of Messrs. Thomas J. Fitzmorris, E. A. Parmelee and C. W. Patterson.
Pending the count of the votes a meeting of the stockholders was held in an adjoining room. The reports of President G. W. Loomis and Secretary Nattinger, which were read, explained in detail the business of the association for 1913, showing an encouraging increase of business. The report of the president, President Loomis, "that we are not only able to show a net profit on the business of last year of 8 per cent. As you are all well aware, we have passed through a year of depression, and while commercial houses, banks and other kindred institutions have gone to the wall, the loan and building associations have stood the strain and have been able to protect the savings of their members. This is the record of the 'Omaha,' and while we have not increased our membership to the full extent desired, we have certainly done well considering the times and the conditions. We have had a large amount of new stock during the year, and were it not for the fact that some of our members were obliged during the hard times to withdraw, our stock would be considerably larger. The history of loan and building associations in this state. Some of those who withdrew were depositors in banks, which suspended their operations, and were unable to get their money back. Some were obliged, on account of the decrease of incomes, to make use of the money which they had saved in the form of savings in alcohol. It is evident that their growth has occurred within the past six months, or since the last time the sewers were washed away.
The beneficial effect of the change from the serial to the Dayton plan, the president pointed out, was the assurance of a demand for loans on gilt edge security. Applications for loans now on file will exhaust the income of the association for the next three months. The certificates of indebtedness issued on the maturity of the first series two years ago were reduced from $25,000 to $3,000 during the year. The association has been in business eleven years," continued President Loomis, "and the total expense of conducting it for that time shows a net profit of more than $1,100 per annum. During this period we have issued 7,785 shares of stock, of which 4,515 have been redeemed, leaving 3,269 outstanding. We have made loans amounting to $265,300, of which there have been canceled by maturity of first series stock, $141,000. This sum of $265,300 represents about 200 different loans, and means that we have in reality built that number of homes in this city. We have paid to stockholders $108,221.15, and as interest and earnings, $108,221.15.
The report of Secretary Nattinger covered nearly the same ground as that of President Loomis, and was equally encouraging. His statement shows the condition of the association at the close of 1913:

YESTERDAY'S STORM.
Trains on Many of the Railroads Delayed and Some Abandoned.
The snow storm which prevailed all day yesterday did not have as serious an effect upon the street railway company as the one of a few weeks ago. Up to a late hour last evening the lines were open and the street car people thought they could keep them so unless the storm became more severe or continued too long. All day yesterday the snow plows were kept busy running over the lines, and it was the intention to keep them going all night unless the storm abated.
The railroads were not so fortunate. The lines to the east did not experience any difficulty, and their trains arrived on time, but to the west, where the late, Missouri Pacific No. 3 was one hour late. The southern train went out on time with two engines and expended to pull through all right. The freight trains en route were abandoned. The Elkhorn train from the west came in on time.
The B. & M. train from the west, due at 4:30, was four hours late, and the Rock Island from the west was also four hours off. The Union Pacific train from the west was three hours late.
The storm was general throughout the west and the snow falling badly.

NELLIE MADE THINGS MOVE
Household War Causes Neighbors to Think Murder Was Going On.
WHOLE FAMILY BLEEDING FROM GASHES
Police Get a Hurray Call and Stop the Throwing of Flat Iron, Breaking of Windows and Clubbing of Men—A Lively Fight.
A hurry call brought the patrol wagon to the house occupied by Miss Nellie Brennan, Mrs. Herman and his wife at Seventh and Leavenworth streets last evening. There was reported to be a serious and bloody fight in progress there, and that two persons had been assaulted and one woman so seriously injured that she was in a critical condition.
When the officers got in that neighborhood they were met by residents and urged to hurry before any one was killed. The horses were in the gallop, and within a few moments they were up at the scene of the conflict, and indeed everything indicated a lively fight.
The trouble arose in the afternoon. Mrs. Brennan had said something to Nellie Brennan that she did not like and without further ado Nellie picked up a flat iron and threw it at Mrs. Brennan. She struck the woman a very forcible blow, and not satisfied with that, she followed this up by an attack with a chair, then with a cup, and then with matters in keeping with the opening she broke the platter, and after Mrs. Brennan had left the house and got to a place of safety, Miss Brennan continued her delightful occupation of breaking all the furniture in the house and then breaking out all the windows that were not already broken. She then proceeded to attack the men, and it was in this act that the police caught her when she was arrested.
When the fight was the hottest John Brennan, Jr., came to the assistance of his sister and then Mr. Herman came to the aid of his wife, who was being badly worsted. Then the rumper became general and blood, good and bad, was flowing very freely from large and numerous gashes in various parts of the bodies of the participants.
The Brennan family is noted for its pugilistic proclivities and very frequently the old man, his two sons and some of his sons-in-law become mixed up in general melees and only desert when arrested, or they are unable longer to keep up the fight.
Nellie, when taken to the station, pounded her fists against the iron grating till she bled in her endeavors to free herself. She was very brave, and she was very strong, and she was very determined to free herself. She was very brave, and she was very strong, and she was very determined to free herself. She was very brave, and she was very strong, and she was very determined to free herself.

Landlord Wants His Rent.
James and Mrs. Colligan were arrested last night for trespassing. They have lived in one of Tom Murray's houses over on Harney street for two or three years and the rent they have been supposed to pay never seemed to find its way into the pockets of the owner and legal proprietor. Mr. and Mrs. Colligan are the same who were arrested some time ago with Black Horse and a couple of negroes who were given a free-for-all fight, as a consequence of some dispute as to which of the three possessed to the greatest extent the affections of Mrs. Colligan.
