Edward Collins Being Made to Answer for it in the District Court.

ANOTHER MURDER TRIAL BEING HEARD

investigating the Shooting at Valley Last November-Two Suits Against a Gambling House Proprietor-City Wins a Tax Case-Court Cullings. In the criminal section of the district court, the case of the state against Edward J. Collins is on trial, where the life of the

during the night of November 17, 1893, by firing a bullet into his brain. McPherson was a young Texan and had been working in the corn fields in this and other Nebraska counties. A few days before the shooting, he went to Valley, where he chummed with one Oliver Dale, an old man who was out of money. The two men slept in a shanty some distance from the depot, loafing around saloons and stores during the day. On the night of November 17 they had secured permission to sleep in the back room of a chop house, providing that they would furnish the fuel to keep themselves warm. About midnight they borrowed a sack from a colored man, John Henry, and started up the railroad tracks for the pur-pose of stealing some coal from a loaded car which was standing on the switch They had succeeded in filling the sack and had climbed from the car when a man came from the opposite side of the street, and walking up to them, took deliberate aim and fired at McPherson, the ball striking him just above the left eye. Dale ran from the scene, proceeding down the railroad track to Papillion, where he surrendered himself to the sheriff. McPherson remained where ne fell until morning, when he covered by a watchman and taken to a hotel. The next morning the sheriff was notified of the shooting, and, starting on an early train, went to Valley, arresting Dale at Papillion and taking him along. On the way out Dale gave his version of the affair, detailing the manager of the design that the control of the affair, detailing the manner of the shooting and de scribing the man who fired the shot. He said that he was one of the residents of Valand was a man who went by the name of Ed," but he could not tell his other name. When the officer reached his destination he learned that suspicion rested upon Collins, who was at once placed under arrest. Collins was found at a livery stable, and as he was taken into the presence of Dale that party responded, "There's the man who shot McPherson." Collins did not deny the charge, but remarked, "There's too much stealing going on round here and I propose to have it stopped." After the arrest Collins was brought to this city, where he waived examination and was sent to the ounty jail.

Oliver Dale was the first witness called by the state. He went into details, de-scribing the night and everything surround-ing the scene of the shooting. Witness had seen the defendant a number of times and recognized him before the shot was fired. The night was clear and he was positive that he could not be mistaken about Collins being the party who did the shooting. E. Byers, City Marshal Burke and the reporters who accompanied ex-

Sheriff Bennett to Valley all testified to having heard Dale accuse Collins of murdering McPherson and to hearing Collins reply: "There has been too much stealing going on 'round here and I proposed to have it stopped. These hoboes would steal the cars from the track; they would steal Christ from the cross, and I wanted to show the people that I was not the only one who was stealing."

Advertised in a Sunday Paper. The city of Omaha was a winner in the equity division of the district court presided over by Judge Walton yesterday. During the year 1890 the city council passed an ordinance declaring the necessity of laypark. Some of the lots along which the walk was to be laid were owned by Mildred E. Ives, a woman residing at Fort Sheridan. Her share of the expense of the new walk amounted to $436.50. The passage of the ordinance was regular, as were all the other proceedings, with the bare exception that one of the publications was in the Sunday issue of the official paper. Everything moved along in the regular way until October, 1893, when the city treasurer attempted to collect the tax, which had become de-linquent. When the city treasurer made this move the owner of the lots jumped into court and secured an injunction, alleg-ing that on account of the Sunday publication all of the proceedings were illegal and void, and that the treasurer was without authority to collect the tax. On these is case was argued before Judge Walton and taken under advisement. Yesterday the court decided the case denying the permanent injunction and holding that the levy was legal, as were the prodings leading up to the attempt at collec-passing upon the case, In passing upon the case, Judge Walton said that the ground had been taken that the publication in the Sunday paper was not legal. This he thought was a mere technicality, as it was a well known fact that the Sunday edition of the daily paper had a much more wide circulation than the editions published during the other days of the week. This fact made it a more valuable advertising medium and gave nore publicity to notices that were inserted fraud connected with any of the transactions and that the sidewalk was a benefit to the community. Taking all of these facts into onsideration, the court said that he would

The plaintiff gave notice of appeal to the supreme court, after which the bond was fixed at $500 and twenty days given to prepare and file the bill of exceptions.

Lost His Money at Faro. Mary Weise has sued C. O. Pearson, the proprietor of a gambling house that was on the face of the earth a few days ago, alleging that her husband, Henry, played at the festive game of fare and lost $1,294 during the time which intervened between June 2 and November 28, 1893. To lose this money, she avers, the sportive Henry staid out nights, neglecting his family and failing to supply the members thereof with bread. Lena Spohn is another wife who has a husband who is afflicted with the gambling mania, or at least that is what she alleges in a petition in the suit which she has brought against Charles O. Pearson. She avers that this husband, Thomas Spohn, sat at a keno table during the greater portion of the years 1893 and 1894, losing $1,541, which was needed for the purpose of paying the running expenses of the Spohn hold.

A NewWay of Curing a Cold. The next he murdered Louis McPherson at Valley morning she found that her cold had almost entirely disappeared. During the day she took a few doses of the remedy (one teaspoonful at a time) and at night again took a tablespoonful before going to bed, and on the following morning awoke free from all symptoms of the cold. Since then she has, on several occasions, used this remedy in like manner, with the same good results, and is much elated over her discovery of so

Mrs. Bailey Says Sulcide is Not What it is

Cracked Up to Be. Mrs. Ella Balley, who attempted suicide last night by drinking carbolic acid, was able to talk intelligently last night, and a reporter for The Bee called to ask how it came about that she had concluded to die. Mrs. Bailey smiled and said that the report as in the morning paper was correct as far as she knew, and she was perfectly willing that the matter should rest before the public as it already was. When asked how she got the carbolic acid she said the stuff was for the purpose of washing her little water spaniel. She would not state that she attempted to take her life, neither would she say sie did not. "I guess they were not quite ready for me over there," she said, when she was told how nearly she came to the golden gates, "and I will wait till they are ready before I attempt it again."

When asked how she came to drink the carbolic acid she said that she had to drink something and that she just took some of this to see how it would go. She then smilingly bade the reporter good night, and said that suicide was not what it was cracked up to be. Dr. Riley said that her recovery was miraculous, as he had seen a great many attempts at suicide and never one that failed that came so nearly being successful as did this one. It is said by people who know both Mr. and Mrs. Bailey that she was insanely jealous of her husband, and that she frequently accused him of going with other Little pills for great ills: Dewitt's Little Early Risers.

SIGNED THE DECREE. City Restrained from Collecting Taxes from the Union Pacific.

The decree in the Union Pacific tax decision case against the city of Omaha was signed by Judge Dundy yesterday. The decree restrains the city from doing any act in and about the assessment or equalization of values of any or all of the Union Pacific realty in question and further restrains the city from the levy or collection of any taxes whatever thereon by virtue of any such assessment or equalization of values as made thereon. Sweet breath, sweet stomach, sweet temper? Then use DeWitt's Little Early Risers. AMUSEMENTS.

For the first time since the death of the brilliant Steele Mackaye, the author of the play, "Hazel Kirke," was given last evening at Boyd's by Effie Ellsler and her comerty abutting Park street, west of Hanscom | this story of woman's love and devotion and man's iron will and determination been given, yet there are thousands still to see and fall in love with the hopeless Hazel and join in condemnation of a religion that will make a father turn his offspring out into the world because that offspring chose to love some one other than the person of his choice. Although the play has been done almost continuously since 1880 it has still a profound interest to theater goers, and in the audience last night were many veterans who had seen the play years and years ago, but even to them there was a charm about the performance, for it was reminiscent of other days. Miss Ellsler was her happy self in the part of Hazel, filling the stage with brightness in the earlier scenes, but gradually lifting her audience up to the emotional side of the character and holding them by the force of her fine ability. Mr. Couldock, who is Dunstan Kirke, continues to play the hardhearted miller with consummate art; in fact the picture which he presents is one of the ideals of the stage and will be remembered after the veteran has passed beyond the bars as one of the virile portraitures of this generation. Mr. Weston as Pittacus Green and Mr. Drouet as Lord Travers were quite in their element, the performance as a whole being eminently praiseworthy, in every way up to the standard which Miss Elisler insists upon.

Pardee Franchise Ordinance

The ordinance granting a franchise to Pardee & Co. for operating and maintaining a plant for furnishing electricity for power, heat and light is a short document, covering less than three typewritten pages. It gives the company the right to place the neces-sary poles, mains and conductors for distributing its current and conducting its business. It requires all poles to be neatly shaven, and compels the company to use the best machinery and keep everything about its plant in a clean and safe condition. The company is further required to furnish in-candescent light for the city nall and public library at half the regular commercial rate and it is provided that whenever the wires of the company are extended within three blocks of any other public building, such as engine houses or police station, they are to be run to that building and light furnished at the same rate as for the city hall.

A maximum price is fixed for incandescent and are light for commercial purposes, the company not to be allowed to charge in ex-cess of 20 cents per 1,000 watt hours for electric light, and not in excess of $20.50 per month for all night are lights. nance is to take effect and be in force from and after its passage and approval by the mayor and acceptance by the company, and remain in force for thirty years.

After a Tannery.

"An effort is being made to locate a tannery in Omaha. The building of such a plant is particularly important because the Reed is one of the few stage favorites who insecuring of a manufacturing plant with an investment of $200,000 depends on getting a tannery," said Commissioner Utt at the tannery," said Commissioner Utt at the Commercial club. "Oak tan bark will not cost more than $1.50 per ton more in Omaha than in St. Louis. The latter is one of the largest tanning points in the United States. Besides, the hides are shipped by the packing houses cast to be made into leather. The supply of hides is so great that a selection can be made for any class of hides necessary directly at the packing houses in Omaha. The demand in Omaha for harness leather is $100.000 per annum, in Lincoln $75.000 per annum, besides St. Joseph, Kansas City and other western points. The sas City and other western points. The great objection to tanneries in the west has been the cost of tan bark, and the hides have been shipped to the bark instead of the reverse. The new factory in Omaha the reverse. WEST VIRGINIA MINERS TREATED AS DOGS

An Omaha Man Tells How the Operators Own Even the Stores and Run Things with a Sole Eye to Their Own Pocket.

Mr. M. J. Kenney of Omaha, a member of the general executive board of the Knights of Labor, returned recently from a lecturing and organizing tour through West Virginia. He was asked by a Bee reporter for some information concerning the condition of the miners in the coal fields near Charleston, where the recent troubles have centered.

"Yes, I know something of the people there," said Mr. Kenney. "I spent three weeks in the immediate vicinity of Charleston. The men are in a most deplorable condition.

"The miners in Kanahwa valley have been disorganized for years, and as a consequence have been digging coal for less money than the same work is being done for in other parts of the country. They were receiving at the time of my visit there 40 cents per on for screened coal, but had received notice from the operators that in the future they would be expected to mine coal for 30 cents per ton screened. In other words, that they must accept a reduction of 25 per cent. And let me say right here that the coal companies get two grades of coal which the miner does not get a cent for producing, namely, nut and slack. The nut coal is sold to the miners at $1.50 per load of about 1,200 pounds, while the slack from the gas coal is used for making coke. "The coal operators in that country are 'monarchs of all they survey.' For an ilustration we will take Acme, W. Va., a mining camp about sixteen miles from Coalberry, which is run by a man named Stevens. He owns the whole townsite, owns every building, even to the postoffice, which is run in his store. The houses are of the cheapest possible make, consisting of one thickness of rough boards nailed at the top and bottom with a rough batting on the outside. They are neither celled nor plastered. And for these he draws from $5 to $10 per month. He runs the only store in the village, and every person is compelled to trade with him every person is compelled to trade with him or leave the town.

"I saw one man there who had been in the employ of the coal company for eight years and had never drawn a cent of money, for at the end of each month ha found himself indebted to the 'plusk-ms store,' as they are called, to the full extent of his wages. A man is seldom allowed to earn more than he spends in the store, and should his store bill be smaller for two or three months he will be gently reminded three months he will be gently reminded that his services are no longer required in the mines. The old miners there say that they could not make more than 90 cents per day in good times, after paying for powder, fuse, oil and tool dressing, while the average would not exceed 40 to 60 cents per day.

HE HOGS IT ALL. "The operator was asked by the miners to allow a barber to come to the town, but he refused, telling them that he came there to make money, and there was not a d- man going to make anything there but himself.
"I spoke at Acme," continued Mr. Kenney, "on a Sunday afternoon and the owner threatened to have me arrested for Sabbath breaking. There are very few places in that region where buildings can be procured in which to hold a labor meeting. Nearly all the meetings that I attended were held in the open air beneath the broad canopy of heaven, and even there we left ourselves. liable to arrest for trespassing on the grounds of the operators.

"I organized large assemblies at every

"I think that the men in that region are entitled to the sympathy of the people in their struggle for existence, and should have the support of the state officials instead of the militia being called out to shoot them down. The mere fact of private citizens in that state refusing to act as deputy sheriffs should clearly demonstrate that the men are in the right. "I noticed in the press reports of a recent date an item from Ohio stating that the officials of that state were contemplating calling a special session of the legislature for the purpose of providing work for eighty or ninety convicts who are idle in the penitentiary of that state. It seems queer that such precautions and provisions should be taken for the health, safety and comfort of convicts while not a thing is being done to protect the happiness and prosperity of the honest workingman. "It is beginning to dawn upon the average workingman that the only chance for steady employment, sufficient food and clothing and comfortable shelter from the inclemency of the weather is to get himself securely lodged behind prison walls." When asked about the lawlessness now going on in West Virginia Mr. Kenney said: "That is another matter worthy of mention. The miners there did all in their power to reach an amicable settlement of the trouble but the operators refused to confer with them. They asked the operators to appoint a committee to confer with a like committee from the miners' organization and the opera-tors ignored them and did not even show them the common courtesy of answering their communication. So whatever trouble may follow, the miners have got the satisfacmay follow, the miners have got the saturates tion of knowing that they did all in their power to avoid a clash. The citizens of Montgomery are in sympathy with the men and condemn the operators very severely for their action in precipitating the trouble that now exists in that locality."
