THEY QUARRELED ABOUT IT

Local Republicans Not Unanimous as to Who Shall Go to Denver.

DISCORD AT LAST NIGHT'S MEETING

Fight Will Be Seitled at Lincoln-Wheeler Heads Dougles County Delegation-Arrangements for the Mass Meeting Wednesday Evening.

The meeting of the republican league clubs of Douglas county, held in Patterson's hall last night, did not break up in a row, but it adjourned without accomplishing the principal object for which it was called, simply for the reason that the aspirants for honors, and especially those who got left, were more numerous than those who were in the lead.

When President B. H. Robison of the Union League club called the gathering to order he stated that the object of the meeting was to formulate a plan and agree upon a line of action to be carried out at convention of republican clubs to be held at Lincoln next Tuesday. This congressional district, he said, would be entitled to six delegates in the national convention of republican clubs to be held at Denver on June 22, besides one delegate-atlarge. He suggested that Douglas county would be entitled to four of the delegates would be entitled to four of the delegates and Sarpy and Washington counties to one delegate each. As neither of those counties were represented, he suggested that the selection of their delegates be left alone. This proposition was agreeable to the meeting, and the work of selecting a chairman ing, and the work of selecting a chairman for the Douglas county delegates to the Lincoln convention was commenced.

Dan H. Wheeler, H. C. Brome, C. J.
Greene and Isaac Noyes were placed in nomi-nation for the position, and when the vote was counted, after all of the changes had been made, the result was as follows:

Wheeler 198, Proces 112, Greene 19, and Wheeler, 136; Brome, 113; Greene, 12, and Noyes, 3. The election of Wheeler was

In a short speech Wheeler thanked the meeting and urged that if anything was to be accomplished harmony would have to prevail among the delegates when they reached Lincoln. He wanted to see enough reached Lincoln. He wanted to see enough harmony so that it would be reflected back to Douglas county and have it said for once that the republicans were united upon every proposition. The talk was cheered, but it was apparent that harmony was hustling out of the hall, seeking a perch in some other

Taking up the matter of the selection of secretaries of the delegation, the names of J. M. Gillan, H. M. Waring, C. B. Denny and H. C. Brome were placed before the meeting. Gillan and Denny withdrew, and which Waring and Brome were elected by Gillan and Denny withdrew, after

These preliminary skirmishes having been disposed of, John M. Thurston was nominated as the delegate-at-large to the Denver convention, but as Mr. Thurston stated that being an ex-president of the national lengue he was entitled to a seat in the convention, his name was withdrawn and John L. Webster elected to the position. The real fight of the meeting was then declared on, and the president announced that the time had arrived for selecting four gentlemen whose names would be presented to the Lincoln convention as delegates from Douglas county to the Denver convention. Men climbed over one another to present the names of their favorites, and when the end was reached the list loomed up like this: R. S. Berlin, A. H. Willis, Richard Smith, C. J. Greene, J. T. Wertz, H. C. Timme, J. H. Kyner, C. E. Winter, John W. Battin and W. F. Bechel. It was egreed that those four having a majority of all the votes cast should be declared elected, and the work of balloting comed. This consumed the better part hour, and when the changes from one candidate to another had been made the result was as follows: Berlin, 88; Willis, 20; Smith. 117; Greene, 78; Wertz, 99; Timme, 102; Kyner, 85; Winter, 80; Battin, 4, and Bechel, 95. This vote did not give any four of the candidates a majority, and Kyner at once started in to lead a revolt by convincing some of the mer who were far down on the list that their chances would be better if the fight was transferred to Lincoln. There were loud calls for a second ballot and equally loud calls for an adjournment. The chairman ruled that a motion to adjourn was always in order, and to settle the whole matter a standing vote was taken. Kyner was four too many for his opponents, and the result was that ninety-nine men stood up and were counted for adjournment, while the other side could muster but ninety-five delegates who wanted to stay and fight it out. After the adjournment there were severa hot wordy contests, one of which was brought on by Jim Kyner, who accused G. W. Holbrook, the president of the Fift! Ward Republican club, of throwing severa votes of that delegation to other candidates. Kyner maintaining that he should have had the entire vote of the ward, notwithstanding the fact that he was not elected as a delegate from his own ward, his name not hav ing been mentioned at the caucus which selected the delegates. Mr. Holbrook ac knowledged the corn, and in no uncertain terms informed Kyner that while he got a few votes from the Fifth ward in the meeig which he had just disrupted, he could be assured that when the delegates reached Lincoln he would not get a vote from the Exonerated the Officers. The Board of Fire and Police Commibioners exonerated Officers Brady, Bauer, Arnold and Clark from charges of drunken ness while on duty at the Coliseum on the night of May 28.

It reserved its decision in the case of Bergeant Shoop, charged with disobeying orders, and adjourned until Monday night.

Knew Where He Got His Support. A Memphis man vouches for the truth of the following election story: "A number of years ago I was living in a certain Missinsippi town. The mayor of the place and myself were boarders in the same house. The mayor was a man who loved his own way, and when the election day rolled around a great many people thought that now was a good time to teach his honor that he was not the only man in town. Our landlord, of course, wanted to be pleasant to his boarder, and was profuse in his expressions of featly to his cause. It turned out that the mayor only received one vote for re-election. He came home, where the news of his defeat had preceded him, naturally somewhat disgruntled and out of sorts. The landlord at once began to offer consolation of the sort that is common on such occasions, telling the mayor that he would live to come again, and at some election in the future would put his enemies to rout and be triumphantly elected. I did all I could for you, concluded the landlord; I voted for you myself. You are an infernal liar, roared the irate mayor; I got only one vote, and I voted for myself.

ANTWERP'S BIG FAIR.

The Exposition Which Has Just Opened and

Our Building There. A great World's fair has just been opened at Antwerp, in Belgium, and will continue until the second day of next November. The first of these great World's fairs was in London, some forty-three years ago, and it was so great as to exhaust the capacities of the nations contributing and to lead to of the nations contributing and to lead to the belief that it would not be again equalled during the century. The United States soon followed, with what it called a World's fair, but what was really a private enterprise, held in the city of New York, and which, with all its buildings, covered an area equal to about one city square. Up to the great Centennial fair in 1876, one of these exhibitions was held in England or France every ten years, but they have been found to be so profitable, or so fascinating. found to be so profitable, or so fascinating, that hereafter we may look for one every Cable news from Antwerp reports that the United States building at that fair will not only be the largest erected by any na-tion, but will occupy the most commanding position. It is to have a room for every state and territory in the union, in which the principal products of that state will be exhibited, with an abundance of free literature, showing its resources and pointing out its superior advantages to the bloated cap-italists of the old world. One of the fea-tures of the American exhibit will be a regu-lar New England shoe factory, running as an annex to the main building, where will be an annex to the main building, where will be illustrated our method of turning out by machinery every variety of shoe, from the dainty satin slipper to the heavy hob-nailed boots worn by the miner.

As the last Paris exposition was dis-tinguished by the now famous Elffel tower and Chicago by the Ferris wheel, both erected to give sightseers an extensive and complete view of the grounds, so Antwerp is to have an observatory equally novel, though not apt to be so permanent as the wheeel or the tower. This outlook is to be called "The Castle in the Air," and will be a monstrous, anchored balloon. This balloon consists of six parts, each one of which is complete and independent of the other so that I may one or the standard or the other so that I may one or the standard or the other so that I may one or the standard or the other so that I may one or the othe other, so that if any one or two should fall, the others would support the struc-ture. The balloon and observatory are fastened to the ground by five ropes, each anchored by Iron cables. The observatory car will hold 150 people, and will be lifted and lowered to a height of about 500 feet, by means of electric power. His majesty, King Leopold, having recovered from his recent debauch, which ended in Geneva, was enabled to open the fair with the dignity befitting his high position. During the coming summer Antwerp will be to American tourists a point of great inter-

A Telegraph Operator Wooes the Wrong Girl on His Circuit.

A telegraph operator in a Boston office once met with bitter disappointment early in his career by falling in love with a young woman at the other end of one of the Western Union wires. She used to say sweet ern Union wires. She used to say sweet little nothings when a luil in the business gave her an opportunity to use the wire. The young man worked in the Boston office, says Donahce's Magazine, and had the reputation of being a "ily" sender, and able to receive what he could send, an all-important factor in the "sizing up" of an operator. The woman was proud to have him say even "Gm" or "Ge" good morning or good ovening to her; and the other girls on the wire, with whom he never condeon the wire, with whom he never conde-scended to exchange even these salutations, were jealous. As time wore on their con-versations over the wire became longer and more frequent. Finally an invitation to come to Boston and visit one of the theaters was given and accepted. The Lothario of the wire was to wear a real real rose in his he never conde the wire was to wear a red, red rose in his button-hole, a white straw hat with a blue band; she was to carry a small satchel of peculiar shape in one hand, and a fluffy lace handkerchief in the other.

The train arrived at the Eastern station on time, and the satchel of peculiar design was sighted. It was indeed of peculiar design—it was an old-fashioned carpet bag, of grayish green color, and considerably older than the Morse alphabet. The girl was a sight that would have made Neil Burgess in the "County Fair" go and hide. She was fully 48 years old. Long corkscrew curls of a past era hung down over her shoulders like twists of molasses candy, and a smile loomed up under these a smile loomed up under the caves of her sunbonnet that would have done credit to a fissure in the side of Vesuvius.

She was extremely glad to see him, and he, with the instinct of a true gentleman, tried to appear that he was just as glad to see her. He took her carpet bag and they beared a see feet. see her. He took her carpet bag and they boarded a car for the house where he was staying. There were many sly nudges and covert laughs at the tea table, all the girls and young men thinking the young operator was entertaining his aunt from the country. For the evening performance at the theater the giddy maiden fished out an awful bonnet from the depths of her carpet bag and slicked up her curls in the most approved fashion. The bonnet was a flower garden of itself, and the writer has the young man's own words for it that she and the bonnet attracted more attention than the play.

The next day he sent her home, but ever after he was careful not to allow himself to converse with any one on the wire except on

Pedestrians have some slight protection against the man on the bicycle when he goes on a rampage. They can scurry out into the gutter and kick mud at him. They can eramble upon the fence and hurl hard hunks of language at him. They can subsidize a teamster and sick a coal cart on him. They can lug around base ball-bat-walking-canes and knock him out on the fly now and then They can even carry their guns at half cock and bring him down on the wing, if quick enough on the trigger. But the woman on a bleyele is another thing altogether. The public has long since recognized the fact that it is at the mercy of the woman on a pave-ment, especially if she walk double or triple ment, especially if she walk double of triple file, and more especially if she carry an um-brella. Put her on a bicycle and she is simply devastation on wheels. Wise Man says Drink

Chocolat - Menier. His reasons are:

Tea and Coffee create nervousness with a people too nervous already; Bitter Chocolates are not lit to make a cup of chocolate; cheap (sweet) chocolates are impure, hence injurious; COCOA is no more like CHOCOLATE than Skimmed Milk is like Cream.

Chocolat-Menier is an exquisite Vanilla Chocolate, as nourishing as meat, as low priced as other beverages, and far superior. Ask for yellow wrapper. Your grocer has it. PARIS MENIER LONDON 59 Wabash Av., Chicago St W. Brondway, N. Y.
