If the St. Joes are a great ball team they evinced few symptoms of the fact yesterday. Comparatively speaking, they are not in it with Grandpa Traffley's Prohibitionists, and If the Rourke family ever surrenders another ball to them they should be led out into the barn one by one and quietly asphyxiated.

The day was warm and sultry, just the kind of weather for outdoor sports, and a large crowd was on hand to see what kind of work it is that has put the Missourians at the head of the procession. They saw it and are now unanimously convinced that if they could only remain here long enough Papa Rourke would metamorphose the leaders into tall enders. He made monkeys out of them from the very start, and should any one undertake to con tradict this statement his argument would prove decrepit from beginning to end. was a bonafide case of retrograde evolufrom the ball player to the anthropoidal ape formity in their actions to those of bal players, but it would require all the world to devise plans by which the psychical functions which distinguishes ball players from all other living creatures could be imparted to them. Experience has taught us, how ever; that no matter how monkeyfied the St. Joes have become, association with such model ball players as our own beloved like their old form, that is in the course of three or four generations. Attempts, how-ever, to cultivate the Missourians up to Bill Rourke's standard must prove futile, as these good-natured chimpanzees can never hope to reach such an exalted altitude. Away from ere they may do all right again, but as long as they remain in Omaha they must classified with the long-tailed animals of the anthropomorphous variety, and bear name of ball players simply because of their anatomical resemblance to them.

Considering with what phenomenal disrimination Captain Cole's menagerie acts in its intercourse with ball players, the inquisitiveness the members exhibit at all times and the aptitude with which they have learned to imitate batters, catchers and runners, it is not to be wondered at that the most logical philosophers down in St. Joe have been led into the belief that they really are ball players.

Now, I will endeavor to substantiate what description of the opening innings. WHERE THE TROUBLE BEGAN.

Let's see. An octogenarian, yelept Seery short, caught the first ball the slender Mr. Packard unbuckled on the end of his sapling and lammed it up against the right field fence for a bag. Jocko Munyun, con-centrating all the muscularity of his system into his wings, succeeded in pushing one down to Mr. Preston at third. Mr. Preston grabbed it firmly about the waist, but in endeavoring to get it across to Mr. Marcum he dislocated his shoulder blade and the bal fell short by about seven yerds, and when Mr. Marcum succeeded in chasing it into a corner where he could catch it, Colonel Seery was tying his shoe on second and Jocko was holding down first. Georgiana Mc ing that Mr. Preston was a good thing, put another down to him. This time Mr. Pres-ton shut his eyes, made a blind snatch and got hold of the ball and flung it across to Mr. Marcum just in time. Seery and Jocko, however, had hunched along a notch in the meantime. At this juncture Kid Fear, like an apholopodous mollusk, made his appear hectic flush burned in either cheek ance. A hectic flush burned in etchic and a wild light shone in his dovelike eyes and it was as plain as mud that he meant Packard took a long aim and then sent one over just right. The Kid smote it sere and like a big balloon it satled out into left field, where Mr. McKibben was deeply engaged in scratching his back. He made a frantic effort to catch the descending pigskin in his apron, but it was futile, for it bounded off of his protruding chest like so much india rubber, and when he did get his feet on it the extravasated blood was leaking out of the seams, and Colonel Seery was fanning himself on the bench. Papa Rourke awoke from his afternoon nap right here, and with wondrous vigor sent one ike the Kid's out to Mr. McFarland, and Mr. McFarland made a bigger mess out of it than Mr. McKibben did.

Captain Cole was exacerbated, and when a man is exacerbated look out. He frothed at the mouth like a big glass of beer, and made a noise just like an ourang-outang cracking occanuts with his teeth.

The bags were now all full and Billy Moran came up with a look on bis face that resem-bled the lid on a hair trunk. He hit a fierce one down to Mr. Hollingsworth, and Holly scooped the ball up and killed Joeko just as he was depositing himself on the

IT WAS ENDED RIGHT HERE. Still the bags were full and Pedroes, the Mexican hidalgo, came out of his cage bristling like a scrubbing brush. All was still. Not even a palm leaf fan

Pedroes turned and glanced into the stand with a smile on his mug that reminded me of the wild man of Borneo, then he swelled up until he was almost as big as Dave Rowe. Packard toyed with the ball with misgiving. Then he parted with it, but he wished Pedroes glued his eyes onto You could have heard a house fall-the loudness was so deathlike. Pedroes leaned back until his collar bone touched the plate. He interred his toes in terra firma. plunged his club into the ball's bowels. fragments it flew over the fence, and Fear, Papa and Billy plowed through the air like so many sprinkling wagons, playfully biting pleces out of the atmosphere as they moved

Captain Cole emitted a wild cry of anguish and had a paroxysm, or at least that is what General Cowin called it. He had something, any way. Everybody scored but Peddie, and the great crowd flapped its lungs in glad ac-

Paddy Boyle hit another down to Mr. Hollingsworth. He essayed to nail it, but had forgotten his hammer. It struck his off knee and bounded in the air. He clawed it. down, but too late. Pedroes, gathering him-self up in his arms, ran clear round home, while Paddy made second.

But that was all, notwithstanding Mr.

Mohler fell all over the grounder Peachy Whitehill sent him by freight. caught at home, trying to get in backwards, and the missing links came in. But what is the use of wasting any more Haven't I proved conclusively what I alleged in the opening paragraphs? Didn't Papa make monkeys out of Mr. Cole's quasi ball players, and isn't it true, as Mr. Darwin said, that monkeys sprung from men? bet you it is. But go out this aftern bet you it is. But go out this afternoon yourself. They will be on exhibition again, and Papa says he's goin' to stir 'em up worse than ever.

However, there is one ball player on the St. Joe team deserving of unstinted praise, and that is little Stein, the catcher. He isn't much bigger than a Jersey sweet po-tato, but oh my, how he does backstop and throw and hit and run bases. He is a reg-ular little terror, and ought to be on some team like the Omahas. He is a good He is a protege of Henry Oerter, and Henry says he is worth his weight in gold. Henry, by the way, is an old base ball manages and was once at the head of the famous old Hannibals. JACKSONVILLE, Ill., June 12.—(Special Telegram to The Bee.)—Victory perched upon the banner of the home team today in the second game with Rock Island-Moline. It was one of the best played games of the season. The score was tied in the sixth and in the eighth innings, and in the ninth the home team earned seven more runs and won easily. Both clubs played good, hard ball from start to finish. The leading features of the game were Jacksonville's heavy hitting and good work by Carrish in the box. Devenney, the new shortstop for Jacksonville, made four hits. Score:

DOMINO DEFENDS HIS TITLE.

King of the Two-Year-Olds Defeats a Pair of His Old Rivals at Morris Park. NEW YORK, June 12 .- Domino is still king. The attendance at Morris park today was large, although the air was sultry and exertion was anything but pleasant. The attraction was the time-honored Withers stakes for 3-year-olds at a mile, with the unbeaten Domino making his first appearance this season in a race against Henry of Navarre and Dobbins, two of his chief competitors as a 2-year-old. The only one of the crack 3-year-olds needed to make the battle the greatest of the year was Senator Grady, but he is being saved for the Chicago Derby. When the flag fell Garrison took three lengths the worst of the start, but got into a comfortable position as soon as they began to climb the hill. Nahma was then in front, with Dobbins following, Henry of Navarre next and Domino rattling along in fourth place. These positions were kept until the head of the stretch, when Taral carried Domino in next the rail and let out a link. Down the hill the five horses came almost side by side, with Nahma a trifle ahead. Here Nahma weakened and was out of the race, while Dobbins was under the whip. It was all over for all but Domino and Henry of Navarre at the last sixteenth and the riders were driving their mounts for all they were worth, but try as hard as he might, Garrison could not gain an inch on the black colt in front of him and the race was over with Domino a head in front, it was a grand race and showed that at least one Himyar can stay. PROGRESS OF THE TENNIS TOURNEY. First Round Nearly Finished and a Good Start Made on the Second. In three hours last evening there was good work done at the Lawn Tennis club grounds on Harney street and the first round of the singles has now been completed, save for one match and two ties in the second round where the players re-Cullingham and Tilden were the first into court. Cullingham both owed and gave 15, and these were the odds which it really seemed as if his opponent would be able to make some headway with. The result only goes to show that a handicap is of little use when a weaker player is so far outclassed. Other matches were in court before this was over, and one of these, bebefore this was over, and one of these, be-tween Will Gardner and Haverstick, strung out to almost inordinate length. It took three sets to settle it, and these three sets contained no fewer than thirty-six games. The match was not finished until after 8 o'clock.

The match was not finished until after 8 o'clock.

In the evening there was an exhibition game on the grounds between Cullingham and Cookson on the one side and C. H. Young and Austin on the other, and this game attracted almost as much attention from the few spectators who had turned out for what was virtually the first day of the tournament as did any of the games between the competitors themselves.

Tonight the doubles will be started, and the warning is again offered to all competitors to make their appearance on the ground in good time in order that they may not run the risk of being scratched. Last night's scores were:

The Omahas and St. Joes will clash again this afternoon, and an exciting conflict is forthcoming. The gang from down the creek are hot, and want revenge. They see the pennant growing slim and faint in the distance, and will make a big effort to check its flight. The Omahas, on the to check its flight. The Omanas, on the other hand, will go into the fisht with all the confidence in the world. They know they've got the best of it and intend to keep it. But it will be a game worth seeing, and no lover of the great sport should miss it. There was a good crowd out yesterday. Today should see it doubled. The positions:

Five Fair Girl Graduates Read Essays and Receive Their Diplomas-Address by Dr. Doherty on the Work of the Institution.

White dresses, silk ribbons, bright flowers and brighter faces marked the twenty-fifth commencement at Brownell Hall yesterday. when a class of five young ladies formally completed their school life within those walls ,and received their diplomas. The members of the graduating class were Misses Sarah H. Bowen, Katherine L. Collins, M. Eloise Couchman, A. Claire Couchman and Elizabeth McCracken.

The exercises were held in the hall, which was filled with the pupils and their parents and friends. On the platform were: Bishop Worthington, Canon Doherty, principal, Canon Whitmarsh of South Omaha, Rev. W. C. McCracken of Tower, Minn., and Colonel C. S. Chase. The eighty pupils of the school, all in white, occupied the front of the hall. The program opened with Kowalski's Marche Hongroise, an instrumental duet well executed by Misses E. Smith and L. Diebold. Miss Bowen read a well written essay on 'The Progress of Woman in English Literature," evincing careful research and wellbalanced consideration. It was followed by Miss Collins, who treated "The Development of the Sonata," and showed herself to be very much of a musical enthusiast. The moods, passions and temperaments of Beethoven, Liszt, Mozart and Haydn were discussed, as well as the effect they had upon those celebrated composers. The essayist thought that the sonata of all compositions portrayed the passion and voiced the soul and sentiment of the composer She followed the essay with a brilliant rendi-Op. 31 No. 3, which was enthusiastically re-

Miss M. E. Couchman's essay considered "The Greek System of Education," with its athletics and military training. Miss A. C. Couchman had collated a number of interesting thoughts on "Genius." She denominated genius as the perfection of the human intellect, and insisted that it was in a measure due to its surroundings. stance, it would have been impossible for any but an intellectual race to have produced

Shakespeare, or for any but an aesthetic race to have given the world Michael Angelo, or for a Watt or an Edison to have sprung from any but a mechanical race. Genius is ated and invented. It is often confused with talent, which but completes what genius has created. The essayist touched on the varied channels in which genius is displayed, and of its influence on civilization. Miss McCracken, the valedictorian, pre-sented some "Aspects of Tennyson." She appeared at something of a disadvantage, as she was just recovering from a two weeks' illness, but acquitted berself very creditably. She was thoroughly in harmony with her subject. She spoke of the underlying strain in all that author's works, recognizing a purer, better element in the soul of every man, and pointed out that that grand and divine element always prevails in Tennyson' The graduates were generously remembered by their friends in the way of bou-quets and floral bunches, and at the conclusion of the program the edge of the platform

were carried forward by a number of the smaller girls of the school. DR. DOHERTY'S ADDRESS. Dr. Doherty made a short address, in which he referred to his presence at twenty Brownell Hall commencements, and said that Colonel Chase was the only one who could boast to greater length in that direction, having been present at twenty-five. He said that this institution had given the first diplo mas ever given in the state, and a woman was entitled to the honor. There had been some critic sm because none of the graduate had treated sacred subjects, and in reply to that criticism be wanted to say that young ladies wrote on subjects with which they were most familiar. Their ideas and expressions were their own, and inasmuch as there was some difference of opinion among the difference of opinion among the divine doctors themselves on some points of theology, he was quite timid about getting any of the girls up there on the platform to be launched as theologians to enter into any controversy with the disagreeing doctors. Attention was called to the fact that Omaha was a commercial city, and while her people devote a great deal of time to the police com-mission and to discussing the voting of bonds for this and that scheme, they never talk about endowing a temple of learning. A commercial town never thinks enough of hese things, and of the importance of building model men and women as well as busiiess palaces. THIS is the truest history of the Civil War that has been written. And no one knows how many have been or will be written.

No one knows better the truths that belong to history than those whose deeds make history. But until the Century War Book there had never been history so written-by its makers. It is therefore unique.

And it is doubly unique. It presents both sides of the story as each side wished it to be known. Unionists and Conederates alike wrote it-the greatest generals wrote it.

It is the only extant authoritative history of the war. There can never be another.
