NEWS FROM COUNCIL BLUFFS

Production of the "Jahr Markt" by the Little Folks was a Grand Success.

MAY POLE DANCERS WIN FIRST PRIZE.

Pages Walk off with the Cake and the Second Prize—Many Interesting and Novel Features Included in the Program.

One of the events of the week in which the social world of Council Bluffs was largely interested was the "Jahr Markt," which, under the direction of Miss Clara Goodwin, has been in process of preparation for the past ten days.

The electric dance, presented by Miss Harie, Tipton, and Nellie Jones, was very pretty, the different colored incandescents, red, white and blue, producing a novel effect. The cereals dance, by Mattie Hart, Bessie Bine and Miriam Benton, was also exceedingly well done.

The capers of two little cupids, Hazel Woodbury and Nellie Benton, were vastly amusing to the audience.

The French Gavotte, by Miss Hill, Miss Marie, Miss Jeanne and Miss Evans, was very graceful. The Mountain Maids, Zee Hill, Ethel Watson, Maud Bessie, Clara Neuman, Edith Thomas, Midge Hollenbeck, Dugma Stone and Hecora, gave very jolly capers of dance, which met with frequent applause.

Probably the three most beautiful things on the program, however, were the Grecian evolutions, the English Maying dance and the Pages' drill. The first was participated in by Misses Genie, Carrie, Carrie, Carrie, Emma Frederick, Mabel Cook, Katie Rapp, Ross Wind, Stella McIntire, Maggie Kemp, Nettie Gans, Eolina Hoiland, Katie Bennett, Browne Walker, Frank McKesson, Zula Blaine, Stella Gilbert, Eloise Cars, Rosalie Tiersan, Ruby Bryant, Laura Gaines, Clara Neuman, Nellie Baker, Frank McKesson, Edith Wyckoff, Maud Robertson, Clara Krich, Nina Gates, Jessie Pontius, Bessie Pryor.

May pole dancers were attired in jaunty costumes, and went through all the difficult evolutions in a way that commended the admiration of the audience. By a vote of the audience the late Mrs. J. A. Hoffmann's flowers, was awarded to them.

The following were the dancers: Foray Childs, Jewel White, Harry Murphy, Edna Wright, Clyde Lyons, Bessie Huntington, Fred Parsons, Nettie Groneweg, Will Butler, Cora Keller, Robert Leech, Belle Patterson, Edna Wright, Nellie Baker, Frank McKesson, Zula Blaine, Will Parson, Alice Foster.

The pages also won well merited recognition of their efforts. For their success in going through the intricate evolutions they were awarded the second prize, a huge cake, which was undoubtedly more satisfactory to the audience and a half of boyish appetite than a hundred dollars.

BELGIAN SIGHTS AND SCENES

Beautiful Brussels with Its Queer and Interesting For a.

ATTRACTIVE EXPOSITION AT ANTWERP

Not as Complete as the Columbian, but a Pronounced Success—Wild West Show and Congo Village—Red Man Compared with the Black.

ANTWERP, Sept. 30.—(Special Correspondence.)—It is only eight hours from London to Brussels, the pretty Belgian capital, so well known the world over as a little edition of Paris. Brussels is beautiful, and extremely interesting, not merely as the gay and polished capital of a spiritual nation, which boasts of the triple crown of agriculture, industry and the fine arts, but as the seat of a high, modern, and aristocratic, with all French characteristics, and where even the French language is wholly used, while the other part is low, old, queer, where dominate the Flemish traits. Their language is not beautiful. It is a mixture of English, French and German, which horrible jumble of sounds is not half so agreeable as the language of the Sioux Indian.

Yes, after Paris, that most interesting, most nearly incomparable capital of the world, and Berlin, Brussels is one of the handsomest, best kept and most artistically beautiful cities in Europe. It is rich in immense palaces of fine, old families, whose names have long figured in the history of that northern country in its long years of struggle for existence in some shape or other, under first one monarch and then another, until the little state finally took its place on the map of Europe, one which, by reason of its location as to politics, the military and agricultural worth today is of no small importance. There are museums and libraries, and a rich and varied collection of paintings and promenade, rich old churches and wonderful ramblings under charming arcades, like the noble Hotel de l'Empereur, which is noted as one of the richest furnished palaces in Europe. Brussels must yield to Antwerp, where we safely landed after a forty minutes' journey.

There is much fun in watching the Americans and English who have not acquired the language of the natives, and who are encountering. There is a big wild west sort of a show here, to which belongs about sixty Indians from the western plains, and a number of the noblest and most interesting of the American red men are on speaking terms as neighbors should be. It is a curiosity to see the Indian in an equality with the white man, and to see other interesting features is the wonderful Congo village, to which we referred before, and which is a very interesting feature of the exposition is indebted to their far-reaching businesslike level-headed king, Leopold II.

A wonderful Dark Continent promises very much, and may some day be discovered as a rival to our own American continent.

M. Burton.
