MODERN MAGDALENE. By Virna coal matches, meat, o.l, and many other things. The author draws a picture of the realities of modern business, making some of its mysteries clear to the common people, ton. From Megeath Stationery Company, Omaha. The story is one designed to show the in-justice of society toward women—the social ostraciam that drives many unfortunate woman of really noble qualities to a life of hopeless degradation. The characters por-trayed and scenes depicted are from life. This is especially true of that portion relating to California. The author, in her choice of subjects, has done a very daring thing, and a thing no woman at least has as yet to which that if literary art must handle such as Miss Woods.

The heroine, a Jewess, lacking the commercial, purse-proud instincts of relations with whom she is thrown in contact, suffers, as the refined and artistle nature must suffer, amidst estentatious and vulgar surround-ings; yet, hampered by the exigencies of her then undeveloped character, she places such undue importance on the luxuries supplied by wealth that she weakly fails to cut loose from her demoralizing environment, and rous perilously near trading her soul for the Mammon of unrighteousness. How her "bet-ter self" finally conquers, and how eventually a soul is born within the soulless woman, the story tills-and tells in a manner most charming. As is proper in a novel, love is the lever that raises her above the level of worldliness, and nowhere in contemporary Literature is the struggle for supremacy between unworldly love and worldly gain more vividly portrayed.

THE WAGNER STORY BOOK -- By William. Henry Frost. Illustrated by Sydney Richard Burleigh. Cloth, $1.50. Charles Scribner's Jons, New York. From Megeath Stationery Company, Omaha.

The poetic wonderland of German my-thology out of which the great composer drew his characters and incidents and like another creator breathed into them a new life, is here reproduced in prose, yet so exquisite in style as to lose none of the entranc-ing power of the original. It is a strange realm into which the mind of the reader is borne, a realm in which the wildest fic-tions convey the soberet truths, a world of SHERIDAN COAL, EXCELLENT SUBSTITUTE for hard coal, and $1.20 ton cheaper. 1605 Far-mam street; main entrance Board of Trade. 460 terror softened and sweetened by the music of a divine harmony whose barshest notes are but a part of an elaborate whole. 25 PER ACRE: FAMOUS BIG HORN DASIN WEALTH AGAINST COMMONWEALTH. By Henry Demarest Lloyd. Cloth, 563 pages. Harper & Bros., New York. geath Stationery Company, Omaha. "Nature is r ch," says the author of this book, "but everywhere man, the heir of na-ture, is poor." Following this theme his book deals with the story of the "trusts" or monopolies, which are to conspicuous a fea-ture of American life. It is not an argument, but a dramatic presentation of the Woods. Cloth, $1.25. Lee & Shepard, Bos-ton. From Megeath Stationery Company,

This is especially true of that portion relating ness what other civilizations gave to war to California. The author, in her choice of subjects, has done a very daring thing, and a thing no woman at least has as yet attempted, but the result inclues the reader to wish that if literary art must handle such subjects, the artist might always be a wo-man of as much feeling and good judgment as Miss Woods.

THE BIRTH OF A SOUL. By Mrs. A. Phillips. Paper, 50 cents. Rand, McNally & Co., Chicago.

growth is traced from its first inception to its vast proportions now, when it con-trols the oil, and several other, markets of a continent—perhaps four continents—and is probably the most influential and most dreaded financial power in America. It is a romance of the busines world, as absorbing in its interest as any ancient or mediaeval romance of conquest. The direct bearing of the book upon one of the most important social and economical questions now under discussion everywhere is obvious. It con-tributes moreover to the debate an immensa tributes moreover to the debate an immense stock of pertinent facts. THE BUTTERFLY HUNTERS IN THE CARIBBEES-By Dr. Engene Murray-Aarou, F. E. S. Cloth, $2.00, Charles Scribner's Sons, New York, From Megeath Stationery Company, Omaha. A tale reciting the adventures of two young naturalists in the West Indies. The writer himself is thoroughly familiar with this region and has here reproduced scones and experiences that have been part of his own life as an exploring naturalist. "Scien-tific accuracy," he says, "has been the guid-tific accuracy," he says, "has been the guid-ling principle in the production of this work," and the interest in the narration is only heightened by the fact that its wonderful revelations convey reliable information.

POLLY-By Thomas Nelson Page. Cloth, $1.50. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. From Megeath Stationery Company, Omaha.

human facts of the combinations in sugar

The story, presented as a Christmas recollection, is a charming southern character sketch and is dressed in suitable fashion to be recognized as one of the first stragglers in the advance guard of coming holiday books.

BEACON LIGHTS OF PATRIOTISM-By General Henry B. Carrington. Cloth, 443 pages. Introductory price, to schools and classes, 72 cents. Silver, Burdette & Co., Boston.

The present volume contains nearly 300 holds selections and contributions, with historical notes, commencing with the carliest Hebrew history and closing with the Columbian exposition and the commencement of the fifth century of American civilization. Of living contributors there are nearly fifty, embracing eminent statesmen, soldiers, di-vines and poets, and the literature concorning the civil war period is especially happy in its justice to all sections. No question of current interest to Americans is without resentment, and neither sectional nor partian elements have been admitted. The text is followed by programs for Memorial days, our national songs, a biographical index of authors, an alphabetical table of contents, and a pronouncing and defining vocabulary of nearly 1,600 words, rendering neither en-cyclopedia nor dictionary necessary in the se of the volume.

WILD BEASTS-By J. Hampden Porter. Illus-trated. Cloth, 380 pages, $2.00. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. From Me-geath Stationery Company, Omaha. A study of the characteristics and habits of the elephant, lion, leopard, jaguar, tiger, puma, wolf and grizzly bear, to each of which is given a separate department. The writer gives evidence of naving made a thorough investigation of the subjects and the views expressed and information collected make a valuable acquisition for this branch of literature.
