

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE

P. ROSEWATER, Editor.

PUBLISHED EVERY MORNING.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION. Daily Bee (without Sunday), One Year, $5.00; Six Months, $3.00; Three Months, $1.50; Single Copy, 5 Cents.

OFFICES. Omaha, The Bee Building, North Omaha, Corner N and Twenty-fourth St.

ADVERTISING. All communications relating to news and editorial matter should be addressed to the Editor.

STATEMENT OF CIRCULATION. George B. DeLoach, secretary of the Bee Publishing company, being duly sworn, says that the actual number of copies of the Daily Morning, Evening and Sunday Bee printed during the month of November, 1894, was as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Category (Daily, Sunday, etc.) and Circulation (Number of copies).

THE BEE'S LEGISLATIVE REPORTS. Full, accurate and critical reports of the proceedings of the legislature will appear in the columns of The Bee from day to day.

The Florida orange crop is said to be badly damaged by the polar wave that struck the Gulf of Mexico last Friday.

The death of ex-Senator Fair, one of the bonanza kings, will create no great amount of distress on the coast, where they have had too many multimillionaires side by side with a multitude of paupers.

The new Board of Education should start out with a new finance committee. A majority of the old committee does not know enough financing to run a peanut stand without plugging it out of sight in debt.

The Denver Chamber of Commerce has taken the initiative toward the erection of an auditorium that is to be completed in time for accommodating one of the great national conventions of 1896.

Friday night the fire department was called to East Omaha to put out a fire. The response was prompt and effective, yet the property attacked by the flames was not, under recent decisions of the courts, located on Nebraska soil.

The Grand Old Man of England celebrated his 85th birthday in fair health and with restored eyesight. It is a sad commentary upon the brevity and evanescence of all earthly glory that this intellectual giant, who only a few months ago voluntarily retired from the premiership of Great Britain, should be sneeringly congratulated upon his birthday anniversary by the court organ with the expression of the hope that he would "close his old days studying classics, theology and the encouragement of trade in eggs and jam."

The trustees of the village of Dundee, which has been incorporated within the past two months, manifestly to forestall annexation to the city, have issued a protest against extending the boundaries of Omaha. Now the village of Dundee is just as much part and parcel of Omaha as is Clifton Hill or Omaha Heights.

THE CLOSING YEAR.

The year 1894 has made a great deal of history, much of which will be memorable and exert a decided influence upon the future. In its economic conditions, of first consideration because affecting all classes of people, the closing year has been a period of severe trial and costly struggle, and this experience has been universal.

In respect of all those things which make for the moral and intellectual improvement of mankind the year 1894 has witnessed an advance. It is not to be doubted that the world is wiser and better today than it was a year ago.

Mr. Rand of Chicago, who appears to have an interest in some mining properties, took it upon himself to publicly reprimand John Burns for daring to point out certain defects in our mode of administering our government.

It is this class of conceited bigots that denominated Charles Dickens for pointing out the dark spots on our political and social horizon and indulging in odious comparisons between American and British modes of life in the 50s.

On December 20 a statue of Daniel Webster was placed in the national statutory hall in the capitol at Washington, the gift of New Hampshire, in which state that distinguished man was born.

England's great statesman, William Ewart Gladstone, was 85 years old yesterday, and the dispatches say that the "grand old man" is in good health and recovered from the affliction which threatened the loss of his eyesight and compelled him to retire from public life.

It is impossible to think of Mr. Gladstone without a feeling of profound admiration bordering on affection. His has indeed been a wonderful career, and it is possible that he will yet have more to do as a public man before his life is ended.

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE

handpicked by the misfortunes that naturally followed extreme inflation and speculation, is bravely endeavoring to recover. The other countries of South America, if not greatly prosperous, are making progress.

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE. The full truth regarding the recent conflict in Georgia between organized bands of white men and negroes, in which there was bloodshed on both sides, will probably never be known.

Mr. Rand of Chicago, who appears to have an interest in some mining properties, took it upon himself to publicly reprimand John Burns for daring to point out certain defects in our mode of administering our government.

It is this class of conceited bigots that denominated Charles Dickens for pointing out the dark spots on our political and social horizon and indulging in odious comparisons between American and British modes of life in the 50s.

On December 20 a statue of Daniel Webster was placed in the national statutory hall in the capitol at Washington, the gift of New Hampshire, in which state that distinguished man was born.

England's great statesman, William Ewart Gladstone, was 85 years old yesterday, and the dispatches say that the "grand old man" is in good health and recovered from the affliction which threatened the loss of his eyesight and compelled him to retire from public life.

It is impossible to think of Mr. Gladstone without a feeling of profound admiration bordering on affection. His has indeed been a wonderful career, and it is possible that he will yet have more to do as a public man before his life is ended.

It is impossible to think of Mr. Gladstone without a feeling of profound admiration bordering on affection. His has indeed been a wonderful career, and it is possible that he will yet have more to do as a public man before his life is ended.

It is impossible to think of Mr. Gladstone without a feeling of profound admiration bordering on affection. His has indeed been a wonderful career, and it is possible that he will yet have more to do as a public man before his life is ended.

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE

themselves thoroughly familiar with the public career of Daniel Webster. There is no better schooling for statesmanship than is to be found in a careful study of the life of Webster; there is nowhere to be found better instruction in the obligations of citizenship or higher teaching in patriotism than are in the utterances of this illustrious man.

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE. The full truth regarding the recent conflict in Georgia between organized bands of white men and negroes, in which there was bloodshed on both sides, will probably never be known.

Mr. Rand of Chicago, who appears to have an interest in some mining properties, took it upon himself to publicly reprimand John Burns for daring to point out certain defects in our mode of administering our government.

It is this class of conceited bigots that denominated Charles Dickens for pointing out the dark spots on our political and social horizon and indulging in odious comparisons between American and British modes of life in the 50s.

On December 20 a statue of Daniel Webster was placed in the national statutory hall in the capitol at Washington, the gift of New Hampshire, in which state that distinguished man was born.

England's great statesman, William Ewart Gladstone, was 85 years old yesterday, and the dispatches say that the "grand old man" is in good health and recovered from the affliction which threatened the loss of his eyesight and compelled him to retire from public life.

It is impossible to think of Mr. Gladstone without a feeling of profound admiration bordering on affection. His has indeed been a wonderful career, and it is possible that he will yet have more to do as a public man before his life is ended.

It is impossible to think of Mr. Gladstone without a feeling of profound admiration bordering on affection. His has indeed been a wonderful career, and it is possible that he will yet have more to do as a public man before his life is ended.

It is impossible to think of Mr. Gladstone without a feeling of profound admiration bordering on affection. His has indeed been a wonderful career, and it is possible that he will yet have more to do as a public man before his life is ended.

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE

for those charitably disposed to give alms promiscuously to beggars about nothing is known. It is the province of this organization to learn the deserts of every applicant and to apply the labor test to every able-bodied alms seeker.

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE. The full truth regarding the recent conflict in Georgia between organized bands of white men and negroes, in which there was bloodshed on both sides, will probably never be known.

Mr. Rand of Chicago, who appears to have an interest in some mining properties, took it upon himself to publicly reprimand John Burns for daring to point out certain defects in our mode of administering our government.

It is this class of conceited bigots that denominated Charles Dickens for pointing out the dark spots on our political and social horizon and indulging in odious comparisons between American and British modes of life in the 50s.

On December 20 a statue of Daniel Webster was placed in the national statutory hall in the capitol at Washington, the gift of New Hampshire, in which state that distinguished man was born.

England's great statesman, William Ewart Gladstone, was 85 years old yesterday, and the dispatches say that the "grand old man" is in good health and recovered from the affliction which threatened the loss of his eyesight and compelled him to retire from public life.

It is impossible to think of Mr. Gladstone without a feeling of profound admiration bordering on affection. His has indeed been a wonderful career, and it is possible that he will yet have more to do as a public man before his life is ended.

It is impossible to think of Mr. Gladstone without a feeling of profound admiration bordering on affection. His has indeed been a wonderful career, and it is possible that he will yet have more to do as a public man before his life is ended.

It is impossible to think of Mr. Gladstone without a feeling of profound admiration bordering on affection. His has indeed been a wonderful career, and it is possible that he will yet have more to do as a public man before his life is ended.

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE

SECULAR SHOTS AT THE PULPIT. Globe-Democrat: A church in Springfield, Mass., is struggling with the question whether its debts shall be paid "on a moral or business basis."

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE. The full truth regarding the recent conflict in Georgia between organized bands of white men and negroes, in which there was bloodshed on both sides, will probably never be known.

Mr. Rand of Chicago, who appears to have an interest in some mining properties, took it upon himself to publicly reprimand John Burns for daring to point out certain defects in our mode of administering our government.

It is this class of conceited bigots that denominated Charles Dickens for pointing out the dark spots on our political and social horizon and indulging in odious comparisons between American and British modes of life in the 50s.

On December 20 a statue of Daniel Webster was placed in the national statutory hall in the capitol at Washington, the gift of New Hampshire, in which state that distinguished man was born.

England's great statesman, William Ewart Gladstone, was 85 years old yesterday, and the dispatches say that the "grand old man" is in good health and recovered from the affliction which threatened the loss of his eyesight and compelled him to retire from public life.

It is impossible to think of Mr. Gladstone without a feeling of profound admiration bordering on affection. His has indeed been a wonderful career, and it is possible that he will yet have more to do as a public man before his life is ended.

It is impossible to think of Mr. Gladstone without a feeling of profound admiration bordering on affection. His has indeed been a wonderful career, and it is possible that he will yet have more to do as a public man before his life is ended.

It is impossible to think of Mr. Gladstone without a feeling of profound admiration bordering on affection. His has indeed been a wonderful career, and it is possible that he will yet have more to do as a public man before his life is ended.

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE

the people to know is that he caused two old horses, which had served his family for many years, to be chloroformed because they had long outlived their usefulness.

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE. The full truth regarding the recent conflict in Georgia between organized bands of white men and negroes, in which there was bloodshed on both sides, will probably never be known.

Mr. Rand of Chicago, who appears to have an interest in some mining properties, took it upon himself to publicly reprimand John Burns for daring to point out certain defects in our mode of administering our government.

It is this class of conceited bigots that denominated Charles Dickens for pointing out the dark spots on our political and social horizon and indulging in odious comparisons between American and British modes of life in the 50s.

On December 20 a statue of Daniel Webster was placed in the national statutory hall in the capitol at Washington, the gift of New Hampshire, in which state that distinguished man was born.

England's great statesman, William Ewart Gladstone, was 85 years old yesterday, and the dispatches say that the "grand old man" is in good health and recovered from the affliction which threatened the loss of his eyesight and compelled him to retire from public life.

It is impossible to think of Mr. Gladstone without a feeling of profound admiration bordering on affection. His has indeed been a wonderful career, and it is possible that he will yet have more to do as a public man before his life is ended.

It is impossible to think of Mr. Gladstone without a feeling of profound admiration bordering on affection. His has indeed been a wonderful career, and it is possible that he will yet have more to do as a public man before his life is ended.

It is impossible to think of Mr. Gladstone without a feeling of profound admiration bordering on affection. His has indeed been a wonderful career, and it is possible that he will yet have more to do as a public man before his life is ended.

BROWNING, KING & CO., Reliable Clothiers, S. W. Corner Fifteenth and Douglas Sts.