connection with Riverview park. When A. J. Hanscom deeded the property which is now known as Hanscom park to the city it was with the condition that none of his adjoining property should be assessed for special taxes. Subsequently he sold the property to other parties, and when the pavement was laid around the park they were assessed along with the other property owners benefited. They at once enjoined the collection of the tax on the ground that they were exempted by the condition of the deed in history." and the case has been bitterly fought. Three briefs have been submitted to the supremu court in the case, and the parties are now waiting for a verdict which means severa thousand dollars to the city. The position remained in force, but that such a condition was not salable and that as soon as the property passed into other hands it became liable to taxation. of the city attorney is that while the prop-erty belonged to Mr. Hanscom the condition
