Edmund Kean, Edwin Forrest, Edwin Booth, 'Hamlet" has stood out as one of the great creations of the stage. Actors the world over have played the "mad prince of Den mark" in bil larguages. Rossi attempted it in Italian, Mounet Sully was a spiendid real-ization of the French Hamlet, Sonnenthall made much of the character in Germany, while our own country has given to the world

tion of Shakespeare's masterful creation at Boyd's theater, emphasizing, if anything, the impression created when first seen in Omaha season from the cup, or bought in the shops. It must be intuitive, and Walker Whiteside comes nearer having this element of fascinaion than any other actor since Booth. Whiteside's Hamlet is poetic, following closely the traditions of the great tragedians of the world, English as well as German. The person whom he represented last night was not an ancient Dane, fair, blue-eyed, yellowhaired, stout and lymphatic, but was the dark, sad, dreamy, mysterious hero of an immortal poem. Mr. Whiteside is almost ideal in this character, although there are noticeable certain mannerisms in his impersonation which were not noticeable when first seen in this character in Omaha. He is learning the art of husbanding his strength for great climaxes, and sometimes so runs his words together that the ear refuses to drink in the inarticulate sounds and attempt their separation into rounded sentences. This fault, however, is the fault of youthful en-thusiasm, and with the approach of age will give way to a fuller art. In all representa-tions of "Hamlet" the main thing is and should be Hamlet himself. The accessories are subordinated in the piece and should be

This dvertised fight between Charles Plummer seems especially forcible to Mr. Whitesids, who, while mounting the play with considerand two big wild cats recently captured ook place in a 12x12 foot cage on the stage able care, particularly the exterior of the castle and the battlements at Elsinore, does nothing that would tend to detract from the of the Rugles opera house last night, a central picture.

In all essentials, therefore, Mr. Whiteside must be taken with serious consideration, for he presented last night a most studious, a most thoughtful prince of Denmark. The support in great part is not up to the of the Rugles opera house last night, a good-sized crowd witnessing the novel af-fair. Plummer appeared with a base ball mask over his face and carried a small rid-ing whip as his only means of defense. The contest was a disappointment, the crowd expecting to see the cats pounce upon Plum-mer and make him fight for his life, but they did nothing of the kind. Both cats sprang on Plummer two or three times, but took fright and tried to get out of the cage after seeing their antagonist was not afraid of them, and a few sharp cuts with the whip made them crouch in the corners of the cage and take the punishment of the cutting lashes given them with the whip without attempting to defend themselves. Expedition Sent to Assert France's Right to the Hinterland Meets with Disaster in Central Africa-Urgent Appeal for Reluforcements.

PARIS, Feb. 22 .- The Quotien reports that the French expedition which left Marseilles some months ago under command of Commandant Montell for service in the interior of Africa was surprised and a sanguinary Hamlet fascinates by his personality, and conflict ensued. Three hundred men, comprising half the force of the expedition, are have been driven from the line of march and metal. It their retreat has been cut off. The minister of colonies has received an urgent appeal from the commander of the expedition for reinforcements.

Commandant Monteil's expedition was in tended to join the contingent of Captain Docaze, which was guarding the Ubanghul. It numbered about 600 men and 120 officers, for the most part soldiers of the foreign le gion and Senegalese tirailleurs, men who, being well drilled and armed, were one and all used to African climate. The officers were also picked men. The mission was practically to assert France's right as to the possession of the Hinterland country, extending throughout the Bar-El-Ghazel, to the left bank of the Nile. This is a part of the section of Africa which the treaty between Great Britain and Belgium had nominally turned over to the former. The treaty, however, was virtually abandoned owing to the French protests, France denying the right of the Belgal-Congalese government to cede the territory to England. It was also intended that Captain Montell's force should be backed up by two gunboats, several steam launches and fighters. Captain Montell is remarkable for a voyage lasting for two and one-half years, the course of which he traversed Africa from St. Louis on the west coast to Tripoli on the north coast, a voyage the result of which was to increase ten-fold French ambition and to lay the foundation of French influence in countries where no Frenchman had set foot before.

Mr. Bayard sat on the right of the lord mayor and the marquis of Ripon, secre-tary of state for the colonies, on his left Among those present were Henry Courtney member of Parliament; Leslie Stephen, the noted writer; Richard Garnett, L.L.D., keeper of printed books in the British museum; Sir Robert T. Reid, member of Parliament, and Mrs. Humphrey Ward, the authoress. The marquis of Ripon offered a motion declaring the meeting, recognizing the importance of preserving to the nation such places, cor-dially approves the effort to purchase Mr. Carlyle's house. Mr. Bayard said as a repre-sentative of the United States he had the

The battle was very tame, Maher forcing the fighting in all but the fourth round, and doing the most effect-ive work. Through the contest Hall was on the defensive, and the end of the sixth, and what was expected to be the decisive round, when both men smillingly walked to their corners, called forth hisses from the spectators. Maher was in perfect fighting form at 171 pounds. Hall was trim at 167%. Maher forced Hall to the four corners of the Australian. At no time during the con-test was there any indication of a finish contest, but Maher showed his superiority in feading and countering. Frank Keefe of South Boston and Jake Donovan of East Boston opened the entertainment with a six-round contest. Donovan knocked Keefe out in one minute and thirty seconds.
