COTHAM'S SWELL WEDDING

Appreaching Nuptials of Miss Anna Gould and the Count de Castellane.

GOSSIP ABOUT AN INTERESTING AFFAIR

Four Hundred in a Flutter-How the Match Was Brought About-Arrangements for the Wedding-The Costumes of the Bride-Elect.

> MR. AND MRS. GOULD request the pleasure of

MISS ANNA GOULD.

COUNT DE CASTELLANE, on Monday, March the fourth, at twelve o'clock. 854 Fifth avenue .

Sines the announcement of M so Anna Gould's engagement to the Count de Castellane New York society has been on the qui vive for each and every development in the progress of affairs. No event of the marriage world has ever created a greater sensation in New York. The youth and wealth of the prospective bride and the title and social standing of the count combine to make the alliance one of international interest in importance. From time immemorial American heiresses have had a penchant for titled huobande, but no other instance can be recalled where a nobleman has been won with so little apparent interest. It therefore must be inferred that the non-marketable com-

The match is deemed a triumph for Mrs. Paran Stevens, who encouraged it from the first, and who gave the brilliant ceries of dances and dinners at which the young prople saw so much of each other. Oddly enough, it was Mrs. Steven's friend, the princess de Sagan, who introduced the two to each other in Paris. Therefore, everything considered, Miss Gould, as well as the count, has made a very good marriage. The young indy has already presented to her fiance the picture of herself, which she painted last summer, with the aid of a mirror. This painting of one's self was the fad of the season, and Miss Gould succeeded, as was generally admitted, better than most of the amateur artists who ook it up. When the count was waiting for an answer to his proposal the young lady got this picture from her brother, and sent i the count, thus da'ntily informing him that his offer was accepted. IT IS A POPULAR UNION. One feature of this marriage is especially noticeable, and that is that not only do peo-ple in general, but the newspapers in particular, express themselves favorably on the subject. As a rule, the foreigner who comes to the United States with matrimonial preensions, or sets them up after he s received with hoots and jears by the press This is not true in the present instance. The count has made a very favorable impression on society, which takes him as being of a different mold from the average fortune-hunting nobleman. To marry an heiress with $15,000,000 in her own right and escape a charge of mercenary motives is difficult for anybody; for foreigners is it practically an impossibility. Yet this is what young Castellane has done—at least so far as anybody could do it. In spite of the denial of the statement off without delay. The count's family have jewels.

possessed for three generations chalets in Mr. Geor various parts of France, but they are all rather heavily mertgaged, and it is reasonable to assume that with a rich wife his debts will become less pressing. Already word has come from abroad that the Castelaine fortunes have brightened considerably since the confirmation of the story of the engagement. Miss Gould, it is further ascertained will dwell permanently in France after her wedding, and this country has probably seen the last of her for many years, once she goes abroad. But it must be re-membered that from a foreign point of view Miss Gould is making a very brilliant mar-riage. The Count de Castellane is no ordi-nary, impecunious foreigner, and could easily have marreid into some of the richest Eu-ie came over here. THE COUNT HAS A SMALL ROLL. The count is not poor by any means, as wedding day his father will present him with 1,000,000 francs ($200,000), which is a large um in France. Countess Castellane will no have married a man of title, and one pretensions in Gotham and Newport, which is more than the bride can boast of, with all her wealth, but, what is far more significant, man who belongs by right of birth to the nobility of the Fauborg St. German, the most onservative society in Europe. Miss Gould is a pet te brunette, with hand-ome dark eyes, brown hair, and regular features. She is daintily exquisite in neat-ness of dress, displaying excellent taste therein. Withal, she is a young woman of inwinsome. She is 19 years old, and has bein society but a season, making her debut some few months ago. Miss Gould was educated at Ogoutz seminary, a Philadelphia suburban institute of learning.
