its stockholders' annual meeting Monday evening in the league rooms. The attendance was more than twice as large as at any meeting held since the organization was founded, and the reports of the various officers showed the club to be in a very prosperdus condition. There are now 190 members, forty-five of whom were at the meeting. The association is out of debt, and has a balance of $430 in the treasury. It has become so popular that it was found necessary to limit the membership, and for that purpose a resolution was adopted recommending to the board of direc-tors that the initiation fee be raised from $10 to $25. The kick that was registered several days ago at the action of the Butchers' association of this city in deciding to buy their ice of Omaha merchants in preference to those on this side of the river is still being made, and prospects are flattering for the matter coming up before the local Board of Health in the course of a few days. It has been deported that the ice which these dealers are preparing to give the butchers comes from claimed that the Omaha Board of Health has on the merchants of Council Bluffs. The old | gram.)—Excitement over the forgeries and suicide of L. D. Blosser of Cromwell has not abated, and there are mysteries still surrounding the affair. Some new papers have come to light today. J. Bolins has discovered fifteen notes forged against him and his wife. The amount of Blosser's forgerles are increasing and may reach $15.000. Great interest now centers in Blosser's safe in his blacksmith shop, and the people are waiting anxiously for it to be opened. It is the impression that this safe contains some sensational evidence and that Blosser's religious the identification.

are waiting anxiously for it to be opened. It is the impression that this safe contains some sensational evidence and that Blosser's private papers may disclose the identity of his accomplice.

Representatives of interested implement firms want the safe opened at once, but it is probable it will not be opened until an administrator is appointed. The safe is guarded night and day to prevent any one tampering with it. From Saturday night, when Blosser shot himself, until Monday morning the safe was unguarded, and during that time it may have been opened.

It appears now that Blosser displayed considerable cleverness and originality in disposing of notes. He would issue duplicates, and when a man paid his note Blosser would give him a duplicate, having sold the original. There are many theories afleat regarding the accomplice, and it is generally believed that Blosser was being systematically blackmailed. There are rumors that a woman is in the case. The theory that Blosser had an accomplice is also gaining ground, but no clew has been obtained. It looks reasonable to suppose that Blosser was the victim of some one. If he had been a clever criminal when the crisis was certain he would have flown, but instead he stubbornly refused aid and died by his own hand. It looks as if he was being pressed all the time for money, and being unable to escape or meet the demand made upon him he ended his life.

Blosser was buried today, and more than 1,000 people attended the funeral.
