

PIRATE TREASURE

The adventures of two of the great buccaners of the Spanish main have already been told...

After the capture of the pirate ship, the treasure was found to be a great deal more than expected...

The treasure was divided among the crew, and the captain and his first mate were left with a large share...

At that time the European nations had just begun to trade with the East Indies...

The earliest known of Captain Avery is as first mate of a ship called the Duke...

Thus it came about that the ship and the ship's company were left together in charge of the Duke...

The crew, many of whom were from the West Indies, were only too willing to listen to him...

stuffed in a drunken sleep in his cabin, the mutineers, under command of Avery, slipped the cable and sailed away...

They had really come upon a richer prize than any peaceable Dutchman in all those waters...

of her inestimable treasure, helpless and silent. The pirate fleet was composed mostly of small sloops and brigantines...

The historian of this famous pirate says that he designed to sell his treasure and perhaps to settle in Boston...

They found Captain Avery in the lap room when they arrived. He was half tipsy, but he had sufficient wits left to ask of the landlady...

At last it occurred to him that maybe some of his friends in Bristol might help him, for he knew that there were merchants there who dealt in precious stones...

held at the New York Society of Amateur Photographers. The idea is a very unique one. Mothers are requested to send photographs...

Two grand medals of the exposition, to the most popular lady; to be awarded by the vote of those attending the exhibition.

This gives an excellent chance for all the babies in the country to get a medal, without standing the tiring and weary ordeal of sitting still for three days...

A few months' experience on the train had given him a pretty keen insight into the habits and desires of the passengers.

It was a relief after the rocking train. Much to his surprise he found the conductor in earnest conversation with two women.

"You see there ain't any other way to send her and her mother except by sea, and she'll be a real good girl, and not trouble you one bit, won't you Bessie?"

Then he heard the younger of the women exclaim in a distressed voice. "You see there ain't any other way to send her and her mother except by sea, and she'll be a real good girl, and not trouble you one bit, won't you Bessie?"

from its rings, and placing the cord on his back, bound the cord around and around, thus binding her tightly to him.

Then there was a terrible whirling sound in his ears, and the blackest night seemed to settle over everything and he became unconscious.

News of the disaster traveled fast, and when the train bearing the wrecked passengers drew into Detroit there were hundreds of anxious friends inquiring for dear ones.

In one corner, faint and weary, sat a sad-faced mother, while her husband wandered hither and thither in vain search for their child.

"A little girl with blue eyes!" repeated one of the passengers after him. "Let me see there was any, but here, porter, perhaps you can tell the gentleman, and the passenger hastened away."

"I hope it ain't yours, I'm sure. Just step this way, please." He turned to do so with tears blinding his eyes, but a tiny hand caught hold of his coat and a childish voice cried, "Don't run away, papa—ain't you glad to see Bessie?"

HE WAS THROWN BACK. "I told the ladies I'd see you to you safe," Dan explained as they were being directed toward the baggage car.

"The bud of the infant class when she contributes her penny to the missionary fund knows that she is doing something for a dark infant of about her own size, and she glows with pride."

The other day she was telling a caller of it that she had made on the previous day. "I found the family living in a miserable little house of only two rooms," she said.

Having but just returned from another visit to these lands, says a writer in the Chicago Record-Herald, the truth must be told, I found that respect for America and Americans has sadly waned within the last half dozen years.

Industrial profit sharing is the subject of an interesting article by Prof. Frank W. Blackmer in the March Forum. He says the plan of profit sharing, as adopted by the N. O. Nelson Manufacturing company of St. Louis in 1886, sets aside one-tenth of the profits for a reserve fund, one-tenth for a provident fund and one-twentieth for an educational fund, and the balance is divided equally between the employer and the employees.

THE ANTI-TOXIN TREATMENT. A very interesting experiment in immunity has been made at the New York Infant Asylum, writes Dr. L. Emmett Holt in the Forum. In the country branch of this institution, containing about 350 children, diphtheria was epidemic in the months of September, October and November of 1894.

immediate fall in the mortality in hospitals for diphtheria from 40 or 60 per cent to 10 to 20 per cent, as in the reports given. It is too marked to be accidental, especially when it has been noted in all parts of the world where the treatment has been tried.

STEWARTS' ESCAPE FROM IRELAND. After the collapse of the attempted Irish revolt in 1848, writes James Stephens in Donahoe's, I proceeded to Cork, and found shelter in a friend's house, where I met Mrs. Downing, "Claribel" of the nation, a famous poetess of that day.
