Eighty-three years a soldier! This may of Michael Moore, whose name at pears on the Army Register, where it has been carried since April, 1812, when he enlisted as a musician from New York. He says that he is the oldest living officer of the United States army, and there are probably not many older in any of the world's armies. He was born in New York on July 4, 1800, and inherited a love for a military life from his father, Jacob Moore, who was a soldier in the revolutionary army and saw active service at Trenton, says the New York Tribune. With an older brother, Michael ran away from home when he was 12 years old, and enlisted as a drummer in Captain John

A severe wound re ceived at the battle of Fort George has left a scar on his arm. His regiment was part of General Wilkinson's command, which went down the St. Lawrence to attack Montreal. After spending a winter at French Mills his regiment was ordered to Sackett's Harbor under General Izzard, and later on it was consolidated with the Fifth infantry and was sent to Detroit, Mich., which was then one of the extreme western posts. While at De-troit Moore's time expired, and he was discharged in May, 1817, but re-enlisted at once in compa of the Second infantry, then pany A of the Second infantry, then comuntil January, 1869, he served continually as a musician, and was with his regiment at Sault Ste. Marie, and took part in the Lake Superior expedition in 1826 under Governor Cass, which resulted in a treaty with the Indians. He took part in the Black Hawk war and in the Seminole Indian war in Florida, and was stationed at Fort King, Fla., when he received his discharge because of expiration of his time of service, in 1840. But n 1841 he was still wearing the uniform at Bedlow's island station, and he remained in the service at recruiting stations till January, 1869, when he was commissioned as second lieutenant in the Ninth United States infantry. He was placed upon the retired list by reason of "disability from old age" De-cember 15, 1870, and has lived since then with his wife, two daughters and son at 20 Seventh avenue, Brooklyn, Three other chil-dren, daughters, are married. ### HEROES IN BLUE AND GRAY

Singular Meeting of Three Crippled Veterans on the Floor of the House.

EV. NT FULL OF DRAMATIC SUGGESTION

Foes in Polities and Foes on the Bloods Field, the Aged Trie Clasp Hands, Forgetting All the Bitterness of the Past-War Indeed Over.

The fact so often stated, that "the war is over," was wonderfully demonstrated recently in the national house of representatives. General Daniel E. Sickles, of New York, who lest a leg at Gettysburg, whose military record is worthy all approbation, and who is now nearly 70 years of age, left his seat on the democratic side of the house of representatives, swung from his chair upon his crutches, and hobbled down the main aisle towards the door on the republican side leading into the speaker's lobby. Just at that moment Colonel David B. Henderson of Iowa, who lost a leg at Corinth, swung through the green baize doors from the lobby into the house of representatives, and these two distinguished veterans of the Union army, both of them upon crutches, one of them a partisan democrat and the other a strong partisan republican, met in the little area in front of the speaker's desk, and, leaning upon their crutches there, clasped hands with a fervor and heartiness which is seldom seen and can never be understood except by veterans of the war who have marched and suffered together.

Colonel Henderson is only 55 of age, but his hair is almost white, although but two years ago it was dark and luxuriant The sufferings occasioned by the reopening of his old wound during the past two years have aged him in appearance wonderfully. General Sickles has black hair, and looks not a day older than the soldier from Iowa. These two old soldiers belong to different political parties, and their views concerning the proper administration of the government are as diametrically opposite as the poles, but they are both distinguished in the house of representatives as patriots first and parti-sans afterwards. They stood there for fully ten minutes conversing in a most pleasant and friendly manner until the attention of the entire house was attracted to their presence and comment was almost universal concerning the warm friendship existing beween those two men who fought and suffered for their country.

A SINGULAR TRIO.

While they stood there, the observed of all observers, not only upon the floor of the house of representatives, but also in the galleries, the green baize doors swung in-ward from the speaker's lobby on the democratic side of the house and a tall man with iron gray hair and heavy iron gray beard swung into the house on a pair of crutches. He also had lost a leg during the civil war. It was Major William J. Stone of Kentucky, ability to decide the sex of a baby from a who was a confederate soldier and lost his contemplation of its pictured face. The or- leg at Perryville, Ky., early in October, 1862. deal proved severe to women and mothers as well as disinterested bachelors, who are not supposed to own a discriminating eye in such caught his gaze and then he went over to where they were standing, in front of the desk of the speaker, and shook hands with both of them in a very hearty manner. These three men upon crutches, two of them veterans of the union army and one of them of the confederate army, remained in that position for a minute or two longer, conversing in the most congenial manner conceivable It was very manifest indeed that "the war is over" when those two union soldiers met there with a confederate soldier, each of them a sufferer from the vicissitudes of war but the fact that the war is over was made all the more apparent when the eyes of those who were witnessing the scene glanced to the desk of the speaker, where Charles Frederick Crisp of Georgia, a lieutenant in the Tenth Virginia confederate infantry, was presiding over the house of representatives of the United States. Two wounded union soldiers and one wounded confederate soldier stood in he area before the desk of confederate soldier sat in the chair of the presiding officer, with the gavel in his hand, directing the legislation of the popular branch of this government. Speaker Crisp under-stood the remarkable dramatic situation as "It oughtn't to be," said Phillippa, in a low voice, and she looked away toward the window. "I don't think it would be with—with everybody."

"A fellow feels, don't you know, Miss waist and lessens very considerably the on the contrary, the speaker smiled pleasantly." and nodded to the old soldiers in a manner which indicated his appreciation of the re-markable situation. Thereupon the three veterans of the civil war, realizing the fact that all eyes were centered upon them, shook hands with each other again and laughingly WHERE THE TRIO SERVED. General Sickles was a member of the general assembly of New York in 1847, corporation attorney, secretary of legation to London, state senator, was nominated by a democratic caucus for United States senator, was a member of the Thirty-sixth and Thirty-seventh congresses and entered the army of the United States early in 1861 as colonel in the First Excelsior brigade. He was a gallant soldier under General Hooker, General Heintzman. General McClellan. Meade, and has served in a number of prom nent positions since the war. He is one of the most remarkable men of the present, as well as of the past generation, and in all of his utterances upon the floor of the house of epresentatives manifests a remarkable degree of patriotism and love of country.

Colonel Henderson was born in Scotland, but was brought to this country when only 8 years of age. He enlisted as a private in the Twelfth lows infantry and was after-wards made a lieutenant. He lost his leg at the battle of Corinth in 1862, and was afterwards made a colonel of volunteers and served until the close of the war. Major Stone was a Kentucky soldier and was left for dead on the battlefield of Perry-ville in October, 1862. While he was dying of neglect upon the field he was visited and succored by a young lady living in that vi-cinity and carried to the residence of her parents and there nursed to recovery. He afterwards married the girl who saved his life and has lived happily with her to this day. He is one of the most lovable men in congress. It is to be regretted that he was voluntarily retired from public service. When Speaker Crisp was only 16 years of age he enlisted as a private soldier in the Tenth Virginia infantry, and was made a lieutenant in company K of the regiment. He served through all the campaigns and battles of the Army of Virginia until he was taken prisoner at Spettsylvania on the 12th. taken prisoner at Spottsylvania on the 12th day of May, 1864. He remained a prisoner of war at Fort Delaware until June, 1865. when hostilities ceased and he was released He fought a good fight on every occasion and was one of the best soldiers in the con-federate army. He followed the confeder-ate flag in some very hot campaigns, and when he was released as a prisoner of warwhen he was released as a prisoner of war it probably never entered his youthful mind that he would ever become a preminent part of the union and its government, much less that he would serve with such distinction and honor or that he would be elected to the highest office in the popular branch of the legislative department of the government of the United States. He has been a good presiding officer and has many friends upon the republican as well as upon the demo-
