ANOTHER WILL CASE IN EQUITY. Ten Years Old in Its Various Forms and

Still Far from Settlement. Judge Smith yesterday heard the evidence in a case which has been knocking about the courts in one form or another for the last ten years, and seems likely to be old enough to vote before its remains are finally laid under the sed. John Reane is suing J. A. Hamilton and H. Mendel for the purpose of having a deed to some property conveyed by Hamilton to Mendel set aside on the ground that it was executed for the purpose of defrauding the former's creditors. All the parties are from Neola. Hamilton was appointed administrator of the estate of John O'Brien, the father of Nick O'Brien of this city. He failed to account for all the funds in his possession, and Tim Foley was appointed to succeed him. Roane was one of the sureties on Hamilton's bond, and a suit was commenced ten years ago against him to collect the amount of the shortage. The matter was tried before Captain B. W. Hight as referee, and after a great deal of pulling and hauling had been done the referee gave the new administrator a verdict for $300 and divided the costs betwen the contestants, making them about $200 each. This decision both parties mad, and the case was taken to the supreme court. By this time the final disposition of the case was made last May in the supreme court the total amount of the judgment against Roane had grown about $2,500, and that was the amount Roans had to disgorge. One cause of this growth was the fact that at the time the suit was commenced the bond suddenly turned missing. Judge Smith, who at the time was merely an attorney in the ranks, and ap-peared for Foley, set forth the supposed con-tents of the bond in his petition. Just before the case was to be decided the missing bond came to light, and it was discovered to be lacking in the very essential feature of the name of the estate. The law case fell by the wayside and Smith commenced another action in equity to have the bond reformed by the insertion of the name of the estate. A few months ago the sureties on the bond madgood the shortage, and now they are looking to Hamilton to make them good. But Hamil ton had deeded all his property to H. Mendel a prominent merchant of Neola, before the action was begun, and now Roane wants the conveyance set aside. The case was tried and aubmitted to Judge Smith yesterday.

Federal Court.

W. B. and G. M. Cuppy and Mrs. Jennie M. Edgington Are Under Indictment and Will Be Tried After A. A. Edgington's Case is Disposed.

The case of the United States against A. A. Edgington of Avoca, which was put upon trial in the federal court yesterday afternoon, promises to be one of unusual interest as some of the details of the stories told are quite sensational, and all the parties concerned are well known throughout the county. The issues involve W. B. Cuppy, his brother, G. M. Cuppy, and Mrs. Jennie M. Edgington, the mother of the present defendant, each of whom is under indictment and will have a trial after this case has been disposed of. Nearly the whole afternoon was taken up with examining the candidates for the jury. Twenty-six men were called into the box, and after neveral hours of hard work the following twelve were selected, several of whom were noticed wearing Grand Army buttons:

money for farm loans. Fire insurance, Money J. M. Noah of Glenwood, J. C. Schockiey loaned for local investors on best of security of Sidney, Thomas Thompson of Riverton, J. M. Neah of Glenwood, J. C. Schockley William Arbuckle of Villisca, Phillip Shimberger of Denison, J. D. Jones and Charles McDowell of Clarinda, Lou Stroud of Glenwood, Warren Hough of Crescent, E. A. Boles of Missouri Valley, George Hart of Clarinda and C. M. Cadtle of Yorktown.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE. After a short recess District Attorney Fullen made his opening statement to the jury, which, in brief, was as follows: January 4, 1893, Jennie M. Edgington filed a claim for a pension as the widow of Francis M. Edington, who enlisted in the Thirty-fifth lowa regiment of volunteers, company F, at Dnawa, Muscatine county, Ia. Her husband lever served in that company, but another man is drawing a pension today under the name of Francis M. Edgington, and he beonged to the company and regiment men-Avington Edgington, the defendant, visited he office of a claim agent at Avoca, William H. Coon, and said that he didn't know what is father's name was, but he thought his nother was entitled to a pension. He took ain what company his father served in. He ought them back, saying he had discovered that Francis M. Edgington was his father and that he was buried January 26, 1886, it LeMars, Mo., and that he attended the uneral. He put these statements in the form of an affidavit and had it sent off to Washing ton, along with his mother's application for a The affidavit also contained the statement that his father had frequently talked to him about his war experiences and nentioned belonging to company F. As a natter of fact, the district attorney said, the young man was not at the funeral, and his father's name was not Francis M. Edgington as the testimony would show.

OTHER SIDE OF THE STORY Smith McPherson made the opening statement for the defense. He admitted that he would be unable, probably, to show in what regiment the defendant's father served, and asserted that the young man had done as is done by men every day in the year, signed an affidavit in support of a pension claim when he really had no personal knowledge as to the main facts contained in it. The father, he said, went away from home in 1861 and returned in the fall of the same year with his army uniform on, saying that he had been in the battle where General Lyon was killed. The defense would not dispute that Francis M. Edgington, or Maurice Edgington, as the prosecution called him, was in company F.

The defendant would not be able to tell what his father's name was, and before the defense had gone into its side of the case sixty minutes the reason for this would be made apparent. He sometimes signed his name M. F. Edgington and sometimes F. M. Edgington, and he also used other and entirely ifferent names. He was of a roving disposition, and would be gone for years at a time without any of the members of his family knowing where he was. In January of 1888 a gentleman was taken ill on a train near Le Mars, Mo., and was taken from the train and kept for several days, when he died. A day or two later he was buried, and four months later A. A. Edgington received a letter from a gentleman of Le Mars noti-fying him of the fact of the death and stating that it might be his father. IDENTIFIED THE BODY. He went down, had the body dug up, and dentified it as that of his father. Some of the contents of the affidavit were not strictly true, but there were no material variations from the facts. He wound up with a remark calculated to bring him in touch with the old soldiers who were on the jury.

"We have no right to say that because a ension claim is invalid it is fraudulent," said e; "we expect to make such a strong showing before we get through with this case that every one of you will say that if you were sitting in that chair in Washington instead of Hoke Smith this woman would get her pen

Everything indicates that there will be a ntest over the issues involved in the There were numerous verbal rows beween the attorneys yesterday, and the mos Intense feeling is manifest. District Attorney Fullen, his assistant, Thomas E. Casady, and Special Pension Agent E. C. Brown are look-ing after the prosecution, while the defense is represented by Smith McPherson, Fremont Benjamin, J. J. Shea and L. T. Genung.

SCHOOL TEACHERS IN SESSION.

Interesting Exercises in Connection with the fouthwestern Association.

The opening session of the Southwestern Iowa Teachers' association was held last evening at the Presbyterian church, which was filled to its full seating capacity by the 500 or more teachers who are so far in attendance, together with those from the city who are interested in educational matters. The attendance so far is in excess of that anticipated. All the hotels in the city are overrun with guests, and many private fam illies have thrown open their doors. The program last evening was a very interesting one. Dr. Stephen Phelps delivered an address of welcome, to which a response was made by President W. M. Beardshear of the Iowa college at Grinnell. This was followed by an address by Hon. Henry Sabin, state superintendent of public instruction. He made an earnest plea for a more practical education, which should reach not alone the mind of the pupil, but his soul as well.

"The school house," said he, "should be the rallying point of every good cause. Why should $14,000,000 worth of property lie idle during four months of the year? The library, the debating school and the museum should find place within the walls of the school house. High school buildings are now being built with large audience rooms, suitable for lectures on university extension and other educational movements. "There has been too much of a tendency to fill the head of the pupil with facts, without cultivating lofty endeavors in the line of character. He should be taught that there s a nobility of callous hands, and that it is as lofty a calling to have a trade and perform it well as to paint a picture or hold an office. The only aristocracy in America is the aristocracy of character. It is not the amount of knowledge a man has, but his bower of application that counts. When the time comes that no reference is to made in the school room to God as creater or to man as an immortal being, the designs of the worst foes of free education will be realized.'

This morning there will be a session in the Presbyterian achurch at 9 o'clock. In the afternoon at 2 o'clock there will be meetings the Bloomer building, the Presbyterian church, the Baptist church and the Congre gational church, with good speakers at each place. At 4:30 it is the intention to give the visitors a drive about the city, and Superinendent Sawyer desires that all citizens who have vehicles and are so disposed shall have them at the Bloomer building at that hour for the use of the teachers. This evening Superintendent A. P. Marble of the Omaha city schools will deliver an address at the byterian church on heating and public is cordially invited to attend all the meetings of the association.

OSCAR WILDE IS MORE SUBDUED. Strain of the Terrible Disclosures is Making

Its Mark on the Man. LONDON, April 11 .- An immense throng was gathered outside and inside of the Bow street police station when Oscar Wilde and Alfred Taylor were brought from the prison at an early hour in a black maria in order to be examined on remand, on the charge of having committed serious misdemeanors. The court opened at 11 o'clock with both prisoners in the dock. Wilde looked haggard and worn and it was noticed that he has greatly changed since he appeared on the witness stand of the Old Bailey to prosecute his suit for libel against the marquis of Queensberry, the collapse of which action in such an unexpected and sensational manner led to his arrest. Wilde today was much more subdued, although he smiled once or twice at certain questions which were put to him. five miles from this city, at an early hour But he seemed to realize the gravity of the this morning. The tramp was seen in this situation in which he found himself. He city last night and is a heavy set, hard was dressed as faultlessly as ever, carrying looking customer and is a stranger here, a shining silk hat in his hand and displaying on his ungloved fingers many sparkling gems. The city marshal of Centerville spotted him to the same sneeringly indifferent manner as leave town. This he promised to do and he when arraigned last week, and was evidently was seen to get on a Rock Island fast train not as deeply impressed with the seriousness of the charges brought against him as was Wilde. Sir Edward Clarke again appeared for Wilde and two lawyers acted as counsel for Taylor. The prisoners are evidently makthe conductor caught him, as the fellow was stealing a ride, and with the porter attempted delayed the proceedings in every possible way, and the examination of the accused promises to be a protracted affair. Taylor's lawyers said that he would recall one of the witnesses who were examined last Saturday,

Charles Parker, the 19-year-old witness who was examined on Saturday last, was again placed in the witness box today. He was subjected to cross-examination by Si Edward Clarke, but his testimony was no shaken. The other witnesses of Saturday were not present in court, but by consent of counsel for the prosecution, who promised to produce them later on, the pro-were continued, and Mr. C. F. G acted as prosecutor for the Treasury de-partment, and who, incidentally, was Edward M. Carson's junior counsel in the defense of the marquis of Queensberry, placed on the stand a man named Fred Atkins, 20 years of age, and described as a variety singer. At-kins, in reply to questions put to him by Mr. Gill said that Wilde took him to Paris in 1893. Further testimony furnished by the same witness was similar to that given by young men and boys who have been previously examined in the case. He added that Wilde gave him a silver cigarette case and money. Asked if he did any writing for Wilde, witness replied: "Yes, I wrote some-thing about 'A Woman of No Importance." Edward Shelby was then called. He was formerly in the employ of Elkin and Mat-thews, and said that in 1891 Wilde called at the latter' store, and thus witness made the prisoner's acquaintance. Shelby related how Wilde's attentions flattered him, and told how Wilde gave him copies of his works with tender inscriptions, took him to theaters' to the prince of Wale's club, and to other resorts.

After Shelby's evidence was all in a number of disreputable lodging house keepers from Chelsen, the district of London in which Wilde's home is situated, and several servants testified to Wilde's visits to these these houses in company with youths. The pro-prietor of the Hotel Albermarle testified as to how he became suspicious of Wilde, and finally issued a writ for a week's bill in order to prevent him from returning to that stablishment. Testimony was presented showing that the relations which existed between Wilde and Shelly were brought to the attention of the latter's employers, and Shelly was discharged. After the police had presented evidence con-cerning his arrest Wilde and Taylor were remanded for a week, ball being refused.
