The paper contains much unconscious attest. The city's sad story of suffering and rivation may be read between the lines in he articles commending individual bravery of confederate soldiers, joking about dining on a cat dressed as a rabbit, instilling hope for the southern cause in the hearts of the defenders of the city, claiming victory for confederate armier everywhere, excoriating the trading citizens who were profiting by the exigency of the time to harge exorbitant prices for necessities of ife. Everywhere there is the same under-one of hopelessness allied with dogged deermination never to admit defeat.

HEROES IN BLUE AND GRAY fricassed kitten-urge southern warriors to such diet never more. This is the last such diet never more. This is the last wall paper edition and is, excepting this note, from the types as we found them. It will be valuable hereafter as a curiosity. WIND UP OF THE WAR.

In the latter part of the month of March, 1865, Washington saw many signs of collapse of the rebellion, writes Noah Brooks in the May Century. The confederate army appeared to be hadly demoralized, and deserters, who arrived constantly in large numbers, reported that men from Alabama, Georgia, Florida and the Carolinas could not be expected to have any heart in a fight which then seemed only for the defense of Virginia, while their own states were overrun by the armies of the union. During the month of March more than 3,000 de-seriers were received at Washington, and Thomas Heaney has in his possession a great numbers were quartered at Fort Monsopy of the most interesting newspaper ever published in the world, says the Cheyenne quartermaster's department or in the naval

But notwithstanding such indications of a collapse of the rebellion, at this very time Horace Greeley and others of his stamp, were demanding that appeals should be made to the southern people "to stop the flow of blood and the waste of treasure," and that Washington Star of June 21. The investment of the city appears to have been close and perfect when it required twelve days for culated and so head that it cannot be misculated and so head that it cannot be misculated and so head or nerverted," by way of an inconstrued or perverted.' by way of an in-vitation to cease fighting. Curiously enough, the nearer the time came for a final sur-render, the more fervid was the demand for negotiation and appeal from the unreasonable radicals in the ranks of northern unionists. But all this was soon to end; and while a small party was asking, "Why not negotiate?" the downfall came.

A FIGHTER'S RECORD.

Major General Alexander McD. McCook, who has recently been retired, was associ-ated with some of the bloodiest battles of the war. He is now at Denver, where he has been in command of the Department of the Colorado since 1888. General McCook was born in Ohio on April 22, 1831, and is a memone article, intended to matthe a soldiers in the dispirited breasts of the soldiers ber of that famous family of warriors, "the was graduated within the city, contains a history of Geninghting McCooks." He was graduated by the soldiers are contained to match the soldiers ber of that famous family of warriors, "the from the Military academy at West Point in 1852, and was assigned to the Third in-fantry regiment. He was engaged against We lay before our readers in this issue an the Apache Indians in New Mexico in 1857, and from 1858 to 1861 was instructor of infantry tactics at West Point. In December, 1858, he was promoted to first lieutenant. At the outbreak of the war he was appointed colonel of the First Ohio Regiment of volun-teers, and in April, 1861, was mustering and dusbursing officer at Columbus. He com-manded his regiment at the first battle of Bull Run, and received the brevet of major in the regular army for his services on that occasion. On September 3, 1861, he was promoted to brigadier general of volunteers, and commanded a division of the Army of the needs of the population of the doomed city. Against these extortionate prices a bitter protest is made by Colonel twords.

The scarcity of food is officially shown by the following editorial quotation:

INCIDENT OF THE MODOC WAR. Edward Fox, who will be remembered by the old timers of Klamath county as the correspondent of the New York Herald dur-ing the Modoc war, was drowned on March 4 in the Swan river, Perth, West Australia. The name of Edward Fox became well known on both sides of the Atlantic during the Coleman Drayton-Borrowe scandal in 1892, says the Portland Oregonian. Fox acted as one of the seconds in the duel that did not come off in Paris and furnished the famous correspondence to a prominent New York paper. Fox claimed that the publica-tion of the letter was under the sanction of Borrowe, which the latter denied. The He was passed and the outcome of the dispute was a bloodless duel between Fox and Borrowe on April 23, 1892, at Nieuwport Bains, a seaside resort near Ostend. After firing two shots each at twelve paces they retired without shaking hands or passing the compliments usual on such occasions. Fox's first shot whistled by Borrowe's ear, while Borrowe's last bullet tore through Fox's frock coat near the hip bone, piercing the coat in three different places and grazing his rousers over his abdomen. Fox was not, as he has been described, an English but an Irishman and an ex-officer of an English line regiment. The original family name was O'Shanagh, which means son of or descendant of the fox, and the clan was located in County Cavan. He was educated in England, and entered the army as an ensign at 18 years of age, spending most of his time in England or broad. He was a bg, bron-ishouldered eep-chested man, fully six feet tall. His father not being rich, and he being a younger son, he was almost entirely de-pendent on his pay as a subaltern, and his tastes being expensive, he soon accumulated a very creditable amount of debts. Life came a burden to him, and he was obliged "sell out," the purchase system being then America, where he came after leaving the army, was the few hundred pounds sterling realized by the sale of his commission. Ho went straight to Wall street, where he lost every penny of it, and bought a very valuable experience rather dearly.

He had to do something for a living, and hardon met lamps Gordon blannett in them.
