The afternoon game was one of those ratthing, uncertain sort that so delights the fans. It bristled with both good and bad fielding, and fairly scintillated with clean hitting. Inks was the hero of the contest, both at the bat and on the bag. He made two home runs and a single out of six times at the bat, and put out twelve men without an error. Miles was a close second. He blayed short in Ulrich's piace, who was sick, and put up a game that would have effected credit on Herman Long. He not only grew fat and sassy on hot grounders and line flies, but lined the ball out safely twice and scored two runs. It was an uphill game for Omaha until the eighth milestone was reached, when a little timely batting by Inks, Miles and Darby allowed her to get to the front by a nose. In the ninth Hutch's boys struck a terrific slugging streak, and ably assisted by a couple of errors, ran their total up to 15, giving them a lead of nine runs. The Quinces also let out a few licks in the final half and had the great crowd for a few minutes standing on their toes. They fell on to Darby hard, and at the same time his support became lax, and Brackett's band came within four of tying the score. Eagan began on the slab for Omaha, but was relieved by Darby in the fifth inning. Winkelmeyer, the Quinces new man, pitched the entire nine innings for his side, and with the exception of the last inning put up a strong game.	Score:					- 5

About the Transfer of Omaha.

There has been a good deal of gossip on the streets about the possible transfer of Omaha's base ball club, on account of nonsupport, to some other city, and it is true is attributable to various contingencies, but the magnates of the association will meet at the Paxton hotel this morning at 10:30, and there is little call for discussion of the matter until after they get through with their deliberations. President W. W. Kent is here and will preside. One thing the fans can rest assured of, and that is there is no disposition on the part of the association to remove the club to any other city, and a strennous effort will be made to devise ways and means of keeping it right here. This morning dawned with the sky overcast, and every indication of rain. From 9 until 10 o'clock it drizzled enough to make roads sticky and keep 5,000 people away from Jefferson. The clouds scattered, however, before noon, and when the races were called this afternoon the track was in perfect condition, the rain having put on inishing touches. The crowd is estimated at 6,009, and raining men say they saw the best speed contests that have been witnessed on path this season. The features of the day were the breaking of the state half-mile record in the last half mile of the two-mile event, and the achievement of Emil Kostomlatsky of Oskaloosa.
