

Pulse of Western Progress.

A strike of very rich ore is reported in the road level at the Stanley mine, says an Idaho Springs special to the Denver Republican, where drifting has been carried on for a distance of 2,500 feet.

The ore body is very rich in copper, lead, gold and silver and there is said to be three feet of it, beside three feet of mill dirt. The values run into the hundreds of dollars to the ton.

For some time it has been known that the body of ore in this mine was very large, running from five to eight feet wide, but very few people expected to hear of a strike so rich, although in the old workings a few years ago the ore body under Clear Creek was running $2,000 to the ton and the ore on the north side of the mine was very high grade. On the south side the ground is comparatively new, and the present management has been running a number of drifts into the mountain. Work is progressing on the third, fifth, sixth and road levels, and the mineral has continued in all of these. However, the road level is the one which has cut a wonderful mineral body, but when other levels reach the same distance there is little doubt but that the same ore chute will continue with depth, as has been shown by the other ore bodies. It is said that there is enough ore blocked out for a ten-year reserve, and the force is continuing to pile up the reserve instead of stopping on the developmental work. The mine is being run to keep the Salisbury mill continually running, beside the first-class ore shipped direct to the smelter.

GOLD AT HELENA.

The rich discovery made by Clarence Akin on the Western Union lode, at the head of Monitor gulch, says the Helena Independent, has created something of a stampede to that vicinity. Mr. Akin had only attained a depth of three feet when he struck $300 ore, which other ore bodies have not reached. Harry Titton on the adjoining claim, and the Little Nellie, to the south, and they have also struck the continuation of the rich vein that was discovered by the Akin party.

Some Helena men do not believe that gold has been discovered in this vicinity because of the fact that the Akin party worked six or seven years for silver, and they argue that these rich gold deposits could not have existed without such discovery as those made by the Akin party, and they know something about it. But it is averred, however, that the gold is a tangible fact, and that it is there in considerable quantities.

A portion of the D. & K. and Midland mines, owned by C. L. Darling, C. F. Akin, and James Swain, are situated on 250 feet on the west side of the mountain. The entire mountain from top to bottom is covered with slide rock composed of fire clay that assays from $2 to $20 gold per ton.

PUDOR BASIN DISCOVERY.

Of all discoveries that have been made in that section none has caused so much excitement as the finding of the rich Pudor basin, which has for several years been the objective point of many a prospector who has heard the tales of the great wealth there is to be found there. The lucky find of the trapper who has been in that section for the last three years prospecting and trapping, and on his arrival here for a load of provisions, says a Kendrick Review, he caused no little excitement with the news of his rich discovery. The news of the discovery of the rich Pudor basin, says the Kendrick Review, has caused no little excitement with the news of his rich discovery. The news of the discovery of the rich Pudor basin, says the Kendrick Review, has caused no little excitement with the news of his rich discovery.

Furnas county is breaking a good many records this year. Milo J. Whitman, a farmer of that county, seeded a piece of land to rye in 1892. He had a fair crop in 1893 and in 1894 enough matured to seed the land without replanting. No attention was paid to it, as it was not thought worth cutting last year. This last spring, however, it sprouted and the crop was cut and threshed. It yielded twelve bushels per acre.

Clinton has raised a liberal bonus for the establishment of a wagon manufactory. The new iron and steel bridge over the Mississippi river at Davenport will weigh 8,770,000 pounds.

Charles Fisher, a Valley Junction farmer, was robbed of $25 while stopping at a Des Moines hotel.

David Baxtre, a well known farmer living near Baxtre, died of heart disease while driving alone in a 4x28.

It is claimed this miner left every spring as soon as the trails were in passable condition for this basin, and returned in a few months with enough ore to maintain him in luxury until the next season, when he again would make his annual trip to this section of wealth and glory. The miner is anxiously looked for, as the trapper states that Mr. Vincent is at the basin, and believes that he has the basin, as it agrees with his map and details.

The Longfellow is the latest mine to disclose a pay streak in the Cripple Creek district.

In excavating for a cesspool at Victor the contractor struck a vein of ore, at a depth of five feet, which yielded 100 lbs. of ore.

An important strike on what is thought to be the Golden Wonder vein that carries $80,000 was made on Gold Hill, says a Lake City report. The pay streak is now twelve inches wide and constantly widening and carries ries both gold and silver of over $100 in value. Over 100 tons of low grade ore running $40 are already on the dump.

The Specimen mine in the Cripple Creek district is fast becoming one of the big producers. Some of the ore the group shows fifteen ounces in gold to the ton.

The Deshoro mine, one of Cripple Creek's early producers, is being developed by a force of ten men. It took it has marketed the picked pieces gave values of $13,720 to the ton.

The discoveries last year of high grade tellurium ores near the head of Maggie gulch, seven miles above Silverton, caused much excitement, and a large amount of work has since been done in this district. The veins are not large, running from six to ten inches to three feet in width, but from them counties assays have been made that ran from $200 to $240 per ton. One sample ran 1,700 ounces in silver and fifty ounces of gold per ton.

In the early part of June a young man by the name of E. W. Hunter commenced digging a tunnel in Newlin gulch, about five miles west of Parker. When asked what he was doing he answered that he was digging for gold. People laughed and passed on, thinking the young fellow had gone mad. Several days ago he exposed a vein of free gold. The vein is increasing in thickness with depth. The find has caused considerable excitement.

The chief product of the county is coal, says the Walsburg World, speaking of the resources of Jefferson county. It is estimated that we have here not less than 20,000 acres of coal, which would yield 150,000 tons to the acre. This seems big, but we are assured that the estimate is conservative. In a depth of 80 feet are found 120,000 tons of coal, and varying in thickness from six inches to ten feet. Only the three upper veins are worked. These have an average thickness of thirty feet below the first and the third forty feet below the second.

Without being at all pretentious, this attractive little book has been discovered in the person of Rev. Eleazer Williams of Green Bay, Wis., in 1851. Valmond Napoleon Bonaparte, born on the island of St. Helena, he arrives in Canada, works up a name for himself, and is soon in the hands of the British with high enthusiasm, and in the midst of initial success at recruiting he dies, leaving one heartbroken woman and an admiring populace.
