GERMAN LUTHERAN SYNOD. Subjects Discussed Vesterday-Report of the Committee on Missions. The sessions of the Lutheran synod were ontinued yesterday morning with discussions on Christian congregations. It was shown that several of the poor members, especially the Greek widows, were overlooked in the distribution of alms. All members were called together and without noticing the harshness of the complaining ones the difficulty was vercome in a friendly manner. The whole or gregation voted that the apostles should each the word and remain in prayer, and that six members, so-called deacons, take care of the poor. Men filled with wisdom and the holy spirit were selected to these offices. It was urged that from this it is not wise, nor for the good of the church that preachers should be occupied with preachers worldly things or the business con-cerns of their congregations. All members of the congregations should deems of their congregations. All members of the congregations should have a word to say in arranging the concerns of the church. In this manner, being well constituted, the church also does mission indeed by the fact that the church was well ordered. Nothing but the word of God contents word, then this draws people to it. Thus the congregation at Jerupalem was well founded and impure elements were expelled. Now persecution set in: Stephanus, one of the stocked and impure elements were expelled. Now persecution set in: Stephanus, one of the six deacons, came into dispute with the Pharisees and was shortly after stoned to death. The consequence was that many members were dispersed to the stock of the six deacons, came into dispute with the Pharisees and was shortly after stoned to death. The consequence was that many members were dispersed to the stock of the six deacons, came into dispute with the Pharisees and was shortly after stoned to death. The consequence was that many members were dispersed to the stock of the six deacons, came into dispute with the Pharisees and was shortly after stoned to death. The consequence was that many members were dispersed to the stock of the six deacons, came into dispute with the Pharisees and was shortly after stoned to death. The consequence was that many members were dispersed to the stock of the six deacons, came into dispute with the Pharisees and was shortly after stoned to death. The consequence was that many members were dispersed to the stock of the stock o The consequence was that many members were dispersed throughout the land of Judea. The apostles remained in Jerusalem. "A preacher who leaves his charge in times of tribulation is accordingly the dispersed preached or talked of that which filled their hearts, and so founded many congregations outside of Jerusalem. All Christians should not forget this, that they should preach the gospel wherever they have an opportunity and thus do the work which the Lord wills them to do.

"During the persecutions the Christians at Jerusalem edified themselves by meeting in dwellings and in the halls of the temples, by exhorting and admonishing themselves with the word. We read nothing of societies in the church. The church itself was one grand society, sufficient for all purposes.

"The second congregation we read of in

The second congregation we read of in Acts is the one at Samarla. Philipp, another deacon, preached to the Samarlans, those people with whom orthodox Jews had no communion. But although the Jews had no communion. But although the Jews had not receive the gospel the Samaritans accepted it. Philipp was not a sensational preacher. He spoke simply of Christ crucified. Thereafter Peter and John were sent by the Christians in Jerusalem, who thus entered in unity with the young Christians at intered in unity with the young Christians at "In this congregation we notice the work of darkness. Hardly had these people come to Christ than satan sought to desiroy them. We see this in the person of Simon, the conjuror, who offered money to Peter for the power of giving the spirit by laying on of hands. He had come to faith but had of hands. He had come to faith, but had soon lost it and desired to practice his old ways under the guise of Christianity Peter repulsed him, telling him that he had no part with the Christians. Thus Simon is an example of such who join the Christians, but fall back into their old ways, or, because he desired the gift of conferring the spirit, he is an example of such teachers, who only seek their good and not the welfare of those who are entered to their their of those who are entrusted to their care. But as Peter repulsed him, so it is the duty f the church to expel all such corruption and deans: itself from such impurity wherever t is exposed." The committee on approval of constitu-tions reported and recommended to receive the following congregations into the synod: Evangelical Lutheran congregations of Grand Island, Hayestown and Sweetwater.

Island, Hayestown and Sweetwater.

The committee on missions reported that the synod has its missions chiefly among Germans of this state and Wyoming and in the eastern part of Colorado, sending the gospel to the dispersed Lutherans, who are too few and too poor to maintain charches of their own. In this work the synod has supported in the past year, wholly or in part, nineteen preachers and one, parochial school teacher. These have taken care of forty-eight congregations and fifty preaching places. The expenses of this work amount to $581 per month. On account of hard times places. The expenses of this work amount to $581 per month. On account of hard times the committee reported a debt of $1,121, and recommended the lay members of the synod to raise a collection in their congregations in order to wipe out the claim. The committee reported upon the conditions of the several congregations and preaching stations. During the past year the work has grown considerably. It was regulated to allow the congregation of North Omaha $150 per annum for a school teacher, and the congregation at Lawrence $50.

"Mr. Mathews is outside, sir," I began.

"Well?"
"I was standing in a corner a bit ago watching the clerks stow away the jewelry and gems in their cases preparatory to lock-ing them up for the night, and glancing at one whose back was toward me, I saw his elbow go up and his hand made a swift motion toward his vest pocket. He was bending over a tray of unset diamonds, arranging them in their pouches, and presently I saw the motion repeated. It was enough to convince me, sir, that you are being robbed, but waited quietly until the man was going out and then asked him to remain a

During this speech Mr. Forsythe was watching me intently, and I was rather surprised to observe at its conclusion that although my tale had doubtless interested him, he appeared to be thinking of something else. I stood for a few moments watch ing the preoccupied look upon his face. He was a handsomely dressed, portly gentleman of about 60 years, with a nearly bald head, whiskers of pure white, a ruddy complexion and large, keen gray eyes.
"Shall I show him in, sir?" I ventured to ask, after a somewhat lengthy pause.

Now, sir, what have you to say for "Here is his hat, sir," I answered,

"His hat? Well, sir?"
"He left it on the show case where was sitting. The diamonds are inside the band."

It was a little adventure in my dull life, and feeling a trifle proud of my talent as an amateur detective, I resolved to call upon Josephine the next day at noon, and tell her my story. Josephine was my sweetheart. Her father, M. Jules Croneau, was ostensibly Her father, M. Jules Croneau, was ostensibly a seller of French books and publications on West Fourteenth street. I was in love with this man's daughter; she encouraged me in the belief that she reciprocated my passion, and undoubtedly my best policy was to say nothing and see no more than I could help seeing. Resolving thus I came to the store and was ushered into Mr. Forsythe's office. He was writing when I entered, and motioned

PROTEST AGAINST PREFERENCE IN LIENS

Join Max Martin in Alleging Fraud and Collusion in the Confession of Judgments-History of the Trouble.

Following directly upon the appointment of receiver for the S. P. Morse Dry Goods company, intervenors are appearing in court to join Max Martin and the other creditors who were given the cold shoulder by the defunct company, in demanding their rights in a court of equity. The Bee Publishing company yesterday filed its showing, and other intervenors have announced their iutention of also appearing in the case.

The petition of Intervention just filed makes demands for the court's protection against the fraud and collusion of the stockarrived that evening earlier than usual I had contained a desk, guarded by a screen, a chanced to detect one of the clerks in the commission of a crime that warranted my taking a bold measure to expose him. And yet I hesitated to act upon my own authority; which constrained a small back window, and contained a desk, guarded by a screen, a company similar to those which have books were received, a shelf or two and a fireplace. intervenors proceed to aver that the whole scheme was a fraudulent one, concocted by the stockholders and directors, who con-spired with W. V. Morse and O. J. Lewis, a Boston member of the firm, to give the Boston member of the firm, to give the preferred creditors an illegal, unjust and inequitable preference. These allegations are backed up by an extended account of the career of S. P. Morse since he embarked in the dry goods business in Omaha in 1876. At that time he was located on Tenth and Jackson streets. Subsequently he formed a partnership with W. V. Morse and O. J. Lewis, and the S. P. The annual company located in Fred Ames' building at 214-216 South Sixteenth street. The annual rent alone was $18,000 and to make this good W. V. Morse and O. J. Lewis found it necessary to guarantee the payment. Then the trouble, so the petition states, began. S. P. Morse was still a member of the firm, but by reason of his eccentric and irregular habits and on account or his extravagant and expensive living, which he carried on for and expensive living, which he carried on for the two years following, business began to the two years following, business began to shrink in volume, it is alleged, and profits dwindled away. Still S. P. failed to attend to business and so in 1892 W. V. Morse summarily removed him from the firm and his connection ceased. That same fall S. P. Morse tried to embark on his own account in business, but the following April 1892, the stack was realwaying and She tended the store.

Josephine came in and thanked me prettily for relieving her. But it was time for my ergagement with Mr. Forsythe, so I contented myself with a few tender words and parceled out among the creditors. OWEN HAS STOLEN A PREACHER.

Lawyers Watching for the Man Who Has the Divine. A kidnaped preacher, Rev. O. D. Taylor, was due in Omaha the early part of this week. The officers of the law and his attorneys have been anxiously scanning every incoming train in the delusive hope of locating the reverend gentleman and extending to him the aid of the law for the purpose of extracting him from the clutches of a man named Owen. Who this man Owen is, or why he maintains his grip on the preacher, no one in Omaha knows. As near as can be ascertained he claims to be an officer of the law who desires to place the preacher in legal custody. Taylor at the time of his capture was in The Dalles, Ore. He says that he informed his Portland attorneys of the trouble he was in by wire, stating that his destination, according to what he could ascertain from Owen, was Omaha as an intermediate stopping point. The Portland attorneys wired H. J. Davis to habeas corpus the preacher when he arrived in this city. This is the way the case stands,

The officers are still looking for the kidnaper and his ward. Minor Matters in Court. The name of Charles Sharp is offered in probate court for administrator of the estate of Annie O'Cennor.
