The Ganymede Century club is not designed for literary improvement or the dis cussion of theological topics, but is composed merely of bicyclists who have made 100 miles in sixteen hours at some time during their cycling career, and who expect to repeat the operation some time or other if they keep their legs. It has been in existence since April and there are now eleven members. Each time a new century is made the rider upon bringing the evidence of his compan-ions on the ride, or by making affidavit in case he went alone, is entitled to receive a little gold bar inscribed with the name of the place to which the run was made, the date and the distance. This bar is hung as a pendant to a large pin made somewhat on a pendant to a large pin made somewhat on the order of the Ganymede pin, but bearing the words: "Ganymede Century Club." R. H. Nichols has been pegging away at the country roads more industriously than any of the others and has accumulated a string of the bars several inches long, nearly a dozen in all. Others are not far behind, and a good deal of rivalry is being manifested to see which will occupy the first place. ROCK ISLAND ENJOINS THE CITY.

Prospects of More Complications Over the Opening of Seventh Street. The Chicago, Rock Island & Pac fic Ra Iway city council. As a reason the allegation is made that Seventh street was never platted by the city, and the street has consequently always been the property of the company. A bond of $399 being furnished, Judge Smith

The railway company asked that the street be vacated, and so well were its plans laid that the ordinance vacating the street was passed before the chizzins generally knew that such a thing was contemplated. When they found out about it a storm of indignation arose, and anathemas were showered down upon the hyads of the city dads. In deference to public opinion the ordinance vacating the street in favor of the company was repealed, after a number of stormy meetings, and the aldermen were glad to let the matter drop.

At a recent meeting of the council the marshal was instructed to notify the company to plank its crossings, and the company now proposes to test the question of who owns the E. C. Baldy and F. M. Compton. plank its crossings, and the company now prostreet, it or the company. If the original plat is in existence, it will play an important part in the litigation that seems bound to arise. It is in all probability in the pos session of the heirs of Judge Riddle, who platted the addition many years ago. It was recorded on the books at the court house, but ome one without the fear of God or man before his eyes has used a penkuife and elipped out the page it occupied. The engineer's records at that early day are in a rather chaotic state, and it is probable that the city will have some trouble to prove its right to the street.

The petition for the injunction alleges that there never has been any crossing on South Seventh street. It states that the track is so close to the company's freight depot that the crossing by teams would be dangerons to life and limb, and could not help resulting in many accidents, no matter how close watch was kept.

NEW OVERSEER OF THE POOR.

tle the Fate of the Candidates. The county supervisors put in a laborious day yesterday balloting on the candidates who wanted to deal out bread and meat to the county poor. The names of nearly a dozen were before the board, although only Robert J. Huntington, Peter Bechtele, J. J. Watts, Joseph Spaulding and I. Swearingen made formal applications. The main fight seemed to be between Swearingen and Watts and for a long time the former held one vote and the latter two, without any variation to speak of. Then Huntington entered the tempts had been made to elect he received three ballots and was declared elected. The salary is $50 a month. A number of populists presented a petition asking the board to make a direct tax levy of $30,000 on the property in the county to raise money with which to buy and equip a poor farm, in order that interest on bonds might be saved. The board had already determined to lay the matter of issuing bonds before the voters at the coming election, so they found a nice, easy way out of the difficulty by merely referring the populistic scheme to the county attorney, with instructions to report at the next meeting of the board. This will be held in November, the week following election, when the report will neither do any harm nor any good.

For some time the supervisors have been talking of securing better accommodations for the insane patients pending their examination by the commissioners. Wadsworth of the board, and Auditor J. by the assessor with a bed and such other furniture as may be needed, in order that it may be used for the confinement of patients. The assessor's office will be removed to the room now used by the county attorney, who will be shoved into the grand jury room next door.

CHANGES IN TEACHING FORCE. school Board Gives Three Unfortu-

nates Another Chance to Pass. The school board held a special meeting last evening in Secretary J. J. Stewart's office. Examinations at the hand of the county superintendent had proved something terrible to three or four of the young ladies who were given schools, and they had failed to make an average grade of 85 per cent. At a recent meeting it was decided that no one unable to make such a grade would be permitted to teach, and the question before the board was whether or not the rule should be hung up for the present. Each of the young ladies had some friend on the board and there apepared to be a very good excuse for the failure of each one. To get around the difficulty it was decided that inasmuch as none of the failing candidates had fallen more than 3 per cent under the limit they should be allowed to try it again before they were declared out of the race.

A house to house canvass of the homes in the Madison avenue district had revealed the fact that there were fifteen pupils in the sixth grade and a like number in the fifth sixth grade and a like number in the fifth who would be benefited by the opening of a new room in that building, and upon the recommendation of Chairman Snyder of the teachers' committee it was decided to open the room. The salary of Miss Jennie Pile, the principal of the Madison avenue building. was raised $1 per month on the addition to her duties.

The resignation of Miss May Davenport at the Washington avenue building left a vacancy, which was filled by the promotion of Miss Maggie Wallace, whose place in turn was filled by the appointment of Miss Field one of the substitutes.

Chairman Thomas of the finance commit tee stated that owing to a mistake the Misses Nellie Parsons and Anna Mikesell had been given salaries of only $55, when they should have had $60. On his recom-mendation the changes were made and Miss Maggie Wallace's salary was fixed at $55.

Ways in Which the Gny World of Conneil Bluffs Has Amused Itself. The fagot party given by the Young Men's Christian association Tuesday night at the residence of H. A. Stoddard, 920 Second avenue, was as enjoyable as it was novel. The lawn was brightly illumined, and in addition to lanterns and headlights were small bonfires, upon which different persons tossed bundles of fagots, each being expected to entertain the company while his bundle was burning. Among those who thus added to the enjoyment of the company with song and story were Ned Mitchell, Mrs. Fred Lyons, Henry DeLong, Edyth Thomas and Henry Coker. There were numerous other attractions. Rebecca at the lemonade well was represented by Miss Dora Grass, as-sisted by a number of young ladies, all pretty in their oriental costumes. There was a gypsy camp also, where dark-eyed beauties with tinkling musical instruments gave their callers peeps into futurity whenever the silver crossed the hand. The boys had their share, too, in the merrymaking. They had a circus, the sideshow of which was much more interesting than many more pretentious ones. The freaks were for the most part small boys appropriately made up so as o represent the bearded woman, the fat man, the bodyless man, the wild man cap-tured near Big Lake, the snake charmer, tc. There was a genuine and interesting of ollection of Indian curiosities, and by the aid of a few laths and a few yards of cloth a veritable live, moving elephant was made to shamble about the grounds as the main feature of the street parade. Inside the house the parlors were tastefully decorated, and coffee, chocolate and accompanying delicacies were served. The affair was under the direction of Mrs. W. S. Grass, Mrs. Stoddard, Mrs. I. NEOLA, Ia., Sept. 7 .- (Special.) -- Three dangerous looking robbers were captured here today after a hard chase. They gave their names as George Reynolds, Fred Lane and Jim Conklin. They entered Wheeler Bros.' hardware store about 9:30 o'clock this morning, and while one drew the attention of the clerk in attendance, the other two stole cape. All three were caught. One was taken about two blocks away end the others were caught at the ball park, south of town. These were both armed with large knives and resisted acrest. Mashall Moffit deputized four men to assist him, and in the scuffle that took place George Bebce had a thumb badly cut. They were jailed and Sheriff Hazen was telephoned to to come down and identify them. He arrived on the Rock Island at noon, and said he knew one of them. They were taken before Justice Remington for proecution, but they secured a change of venue to the court of Justice Wilkinson, who is out of town. They will be held until Mon-day. When they were put in jail they made things disagreeable for the city officials, breaking up the stove and other furniture. It is thought they are of the very worst class of crooks. When they were searched the razors were found, but no papers establishing their identity, and the names given are supposed to be frauds, as they called one another by their nicknames only while conversing.

GLASGOW'S EXPERIMENT.

Remarkable Success of Municipal

Ownership of Street Railways. It may be recalled that last year the town council of Glasgow undertook the working of the street railways, the tracks of which had been owned by the city for some time, says the Boston Transcript. New and better cars were put in service, the men were uniformed, given more pay and shorter hours and 1 cent fares were introduced. It was prophesied in many quarters that the balance different. newal of tracks, buildings, machin-ery and plant, horse, harness, rolling stock and equipment, has been $986,782. This leaves the sum of $118,-129 as the net earnings. Of this $44,865 has been written off as depreciation, $22,942 placed in a reserve fund for renewal of permanent way, and $40,322 turned over to the general corporation funds. The latter payment takes the place of the former net revenue from the tracks, which amounted to $27,622 during the year ending May 31, 1894. The total amount of capital invested in the railways was $2,-698,425, off which $44,864 has been written. or nearly 2 per cent. In the future 2 per cent annually will be paid into the sinking fund. THE PEOPLE DEMAND IT.

FURTHER EXTENSION OF THE BATE OF $5 A MONTH.

Accommodate a Large Number of Intending Patients Who Are Not Ready to Accept the Special Ofter for August, the $5 Rate Will Be Maintained Until Further Notice.

Many people have signified their desire, both in person and by letter, to take advantage of Drs. Copeland & Shepard's special $5 rate for August. So large a number have been prevented, for various reasons, from so doing, that at their earnest solicitation this nominal fee will be kept in force until further aunouncement. The experience of these physicians amply proves that, with a sufficiently large practice, competent medical aid with the purest of medicines may be afforded at a rate that all can pay.

The bicycle riders of the state. Mr. Frederickson makes this brief statement:

"Following the example of may excellent people who have given testimony to the superior methods of Drs. Copeland & Shepard in various forms of chronic disease. I will state briefly my experience. Without going into the details of my symptoms, I will say that my affliction was a catarrhal irritation and inflammation of the kidneys and bladder, causing much distress and discomfort. The whole trouble was incident to severe and prolonged exercise upon the bicycle or, at least, was aggravated by that means, A brief course of treatment brought means, A brief course of treatment. The uniform rate of $5 a month is open to all patients and for all diseases and applies alike to those visiting the office in person and to distant mail patients. Parties outside of Omaha should send for symptom blank and names of their own neighbors who have been cured.

"I would state briefly that I took a thorough course of treatment by mail for what seemed a hopeless chronic infirmity of the lungs and bronchial tubes, the disease having progressed to the point of those evening fevers, themorrhages, debilitating nightsweats and emaciation that warn us of consumption. I will say simply that the Copeland & Shepard treatment brought me a gradual but complete cure. I commend the INFLAMED EYES AND CATARRH. Relief Followed Quickly Upon Core reet Treatment.

Mr. C. M. Ledge, 1014 Third avenue, Counsell Bluffs, is a railway postal clerk on the Northwestern between Council Bluffs and Cedar Rapids. Mr. Lodge says; "Recently I have been treated by Dr. Shepard for inflamed eyes, which were so sore and painful that I had to take a lay off for some time. The lids and eyebalis were intensely blood-shot and full of granulations, causing much suffering. Along with this condition I was troubled much with catarrh of the nose and threat. A brief treatment for these affections has resulted very happily and I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Shepard's thorough handling of my case."

PERILS OF THE PLAINS.

Recollections of a Trip from Omaha to Denver in 1857. In every community of any size in California there is some association, club, or society composed of men who came over the plains, rounded the Horn, or crossed the isthmus in the 40's and 50's. If the stories told by these men could be preserved they would prove a mine of interest in any land. One narrated to a correspondent of the New York Sun by John Alverson, a big, powerful, ranchman of the Pomona valley, apparently 65 years of age, the other day, gives a lively idea of the perils of the plains long ago.

"In June, 1857," he said, "I was in a small caravan bound from Omaha to Denver. At hat time there were literally vast armies of buffaloes and antelopes on the plains, and bands of marauding Sioux and Comanches moved about wherever they choze. An encampment was made one day. We had twenty-four four-horse teams and as many wagons. Among the party was Mr. Silverthorne, afterward pioneer of Breckinridge Colo., and his wife and children. Signs of Indians had been seen, and it was the opinion of some of us that we had better make a corral and fortify curselves. Others laughed at the idea, however, and finally our stock was turned out and we went to bed as usual, with the exception of a couple of guards.

"In the early dawn it came my turn to go on guard. I had scarcely got my eyes oper when I saw seventeen Indians swooping down on us from a little ridge near at hand. Our entire party was quickly aroused, and we made a desperate effort to get our wagons swung round so we could protect ourselves and get our stock in; but the tail end of the wagons had been arranged in such a hodge wagon and made camp safely that night.

"The next day I saw the prettiest race I ever saw in my life. It was a thing to make the blood tingle and to this hour I remember it as distinctly as if it were but yesterday. As we were approaching a long sand ridge we saw thirteen Indians chasing four white stopped his horse deliberately, got off, grasped something and stood there. Indians rushed upon him; he fought like a hero.

'They surrounded him and he shot and shot, and they also kept up the shocting, and finally, after he had killed three of them he are the short of the river dropped in nnaily, after he had killed three of them he escaped to the bank of the river, dropped in and swam and got away. He was the only one of the four who escaped. He had accidentally dropped his revolver, the only weapon he had, and did not have time to get it and mount his horse again before the In-dians would be upon him and shoot him in the back. So he just stood his ground in desperation, expecting to die, and his very desperation saved him. We were so far away that we could give no aid. In fact, we had all we could do to take care of ourselves and we were forced to see the other three men shot down and scalped.

"Meantime some soldiers came down from Fort Morgan and conducted us to that place, which was on our way. When we got there it was said we would probably have no more trouble, so we went on alone, were proceeding toward Deep Wells, and fore we got there we found a dead man by the road who had been scalped. Further on we were told that the Sidney stage, bound our way, had been surrounded by sixty Sioux, all the passengers and driver killed and the rig run off.

"This was about as bad a situation as could be imagined and when we got to Deep Wells, though we found the last report to wells, though we note that has been true, Silverthorns and the women were so scared that they were unable to move hand or foot from where they were in the prairie schooner. In the excitement a young fellow who scarcely knew what he was doing hand or foot from where they were in the prairie schooner. In the excitement a young fellow who scarcely knew what he was doing rode a broncho on ahead all by himself. He reached what is now the city of Denver and his story roused every one in the settlement. That night over 120 men, armed to the testh, came thirty miles to where we were staying. I shall never forget what a matter as they made the ascent of a certain mountain. "And where would we go, conductor, if the brake would not work?" asked the stout lady in vile Italian. The conductor courtequally explained that in such

By this time the Sioux were sweeping down on us in a fierce cavalcade. I do not exaggerate when I say the seventen red-blanketed Indians looked like an army. They dashed up between us and our horses, let out a few ylps and yells, discharged their firearms at us, and swept away every bit of our stock except two tired old horses that could not go fast enough to keep up.

"The next thing to do was to push on to Denver on foot and as swiftly as we could. We realized we were in the heart of the Indian country and must rush along, else all we could hope for was being scalped. We were obliged to leave all behind save what could be piled in one wagon with Silverthorne's wife and children. A good many of us followed on foot. There were three in my party—a fellow named Wilson, a born humorist, who wis lugging along a pewter spoon, the only thing he had.

"When Wilson, another young man, and I got into the Platte, we found it very high and no way to get across except by an old leaky boat. We started in it, but before we got over it filled and swamped and we had to jump out into the river. Then we had to make the biggest kind of an effort or lose our boat, and we didn't want to, do that. We finally got it over to an island in the river and then, being a pretty good river we made the rest of the way, though we were ducked several times. We overtook wagon and made camp safely that night.

"The next day I saw the prettiest race I ever saw in my life. It was a thing to make.

Girl Who Broke Him In. What wonder that Harold Hustleton was sat by her side and watched the evening star glimmering faintly above the orange flush which marked where the sun had sunk behind the hills he felt moved to ask her the fourteenth question of the Lover's Catechism, i. e., "How had it happened that she had chosen him out of all the men in her wide circle of acquaintances to he responsible for her future happiness?"

"Surely she must have known better fellows than he was," he urged; "richer and handsomer and more athletic. Why hud she chosen him?"

"Oh, Harold, you mustn't be too modest,? replied Ada, as she gently pushed back the hair from his forehead. "You have a great many traits which none of my other friends possess. You are so thoughtful of my welfare, so tender and considerate, so obedient to my slightest wish. I think it was those things which first won me to you, and I have never regretted it; for, Harold, you are simply an ideal lover."

"Oh, my darling, you don't know how glad I am to hear you say so," he exciaimed, as he drew her to him and kissed her tenderly.

"Yes, dear, and some day you must let me meet her and thank her for making you what you are," continued Ada.

"Meet whom? My mother?" asked Harold.

"No, Harold, not your mother." she sald.
