A very smooth scheme was frustrated by a NOR SALE-A 2600-ACRE FARM OF SECOND bettom land in Miller county, Ark, 12 miles east of Texarkana, 1,000 acres cleared, 700 acres in cultivation, 25 tenant houses. This farm is well adapted for grain, grass stock and cotton. Unlimited winter stock range. Will sell cheap and on easy terms. Address Geo. Peasler Russelville, Ark. RE-1900-O-17* charge. This was in spite of the fact that within a few years it was evident that the treets would be necessary and then the city would have to condemn the property and pay heavy damages to the owners. The property in question consists of Vernon

The property in question consists of version Heights addition, which is located in the ex-trome northwest corner of the city. This addition includes forty acres, or a territory two blocks square. Some years ago it was platted into city lots and the streets and alleys were properly dedicated to the city There are three streets running east and wea city and one north and south, besides eight alleys and the one-half of the boundary streets hich belong to the property.

The entire property was recently purchased by the Fidelity Trust company of this city, nd soon afterward an ordinance was intro-uced by Councilman Saunders by which all hese streets and alleys were deeded back to he company free of charge, the city re-inquishing all right and title. This was one on the plea that the company wanted turn the land into acre property.

The property immediately adjoining Vernor leights on the east and south is platted into ity lots and another addition joins it on the northwest corner. A glance at the map in-licates that as there additions become more hickly settled the streets and alleys through ernon Heights will become indispensable to low the residents of the other additions acess to their property. These facts were was sufficient evidence that no foes of his rought cut by the mayor in his veto, but totwithstanding, nearly enough councilmen oted for the measure to pass it over the Cholera in Honolulu.

As soon as it became known that cholera as certain to become epidemic in Honolulu local drug house there ordered a large suply of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Harrhoea Remedy. The directions given are a go to bed as soon as the first symptoms ppear; remain as quiet as possible and take its remedy in double doses, every fifteen inutes until the pain ceases, and then after ach operations of the bowels more than atural. Send for a physician, but take the emedy in this way until he arrives. It hould be kept at hand ready for instant se. The great success of this remedy in pidemical dysentery leads us to believe that will prove very effectual in the treatment cholera.

Met Death by Drowning.

William Prickett of the Union Pacific shop ce, received a telegram yesterday announcplace where we were encamped. He was unconscious, with an ugly wound in his head that had evidently been caused by a sharp stone against which he had failen. A slight cated to the city were to be returned to the owners of the adjacent property free of arm and his left leg were broken. Hi right His pony was feeding near; indeed, I found his pony some minutes before I discovered him, and was getting rather anxious regarding the whereabouts of the pony's owner, and wonderng whether he mightn't rise up out of some idiculously small thicket, or from behind ome preposterously diminutive stone and quietly shoot and speedily scalp me-when I first got sight of him in his quiescent and harmless condition. The revulsion of feeling when I once made up my mind that there was no reason why I shouldn't get back to camp again-walking safely over those forty odd rods that, in my fear for an unseen lurking foe, had seemed outstretched almost t infinity, was so great that I had to sit dow a few minutes to get myself composed again Be sure I never told "the boys" what m feelings had been. But even now, with mo years between me and the memory of tho old-time days than I like to think of, sometimes wake at night with the feeling my mind that had been there from the tim I found that silent pony-but always wake from such troubled dream without having found the redskin himself!

The savage had no weapons, and search in the vicinity of the place where he was discoverrol resulted in the find of none. That seemed strange-very strange. But there wasn't a hurt about him that I could believe due to purposely exercised human agency. and the fact that he still possessed his scalp or that they had been compelled to leave the vicinity in a hurry! The face was hideously painted. It would have been repulsive enough, I doubt not, under any circumstances.

Seen under these conditions and at that hour -between day and dark-it was doubly so. Besides, I have an idea that death, or the unconsciousness that follows accident, will serve to bring the nature of the unfortunate to the surface-writing character, as it were, on the helpless countenance. I have seen strength, honor, beauty-dead! And I've seen that lost red man! Not enough cases, per haps, to prove much. But I have my own theory all the same! A shot from my rifle brought a half dozen men from the camp-and still that senseles form never stirred. How his soul would have rebelled could it have known.

Among the half dozen who came, hurrying, were at least two who had spent the greater part of their lives upon the plains. They had no great admiration for the Indian charac-ter, and one of them rather petulantly asked why I had wasted my ammunition-why had fired into the air instead of into the In dian? I had a hard time to secure my own way. But I prevailed at last. We took the poor wretch into camp. I set his broken bones. I bound up the wound in his head.

I nursed him back to health again. The man-shall I offend any prejudice, an tagonize any judgment, by so designating him?-was young. I should not call him over twenty-five at the outside. He had no bad habits in his pait to draw him down and drag against him-that is, he had none that his race did not have before the white man came. He recovered rapidly-as any healthy animal will do if given a fair chance. The man-patient or prisoner-guest or captive-could not speak a word of English. I feel sure he could understand little, if anything, of what was said to him-or in his presence. What he must have thought-if creatures of his sort can think - when he thing, of what was said to him-of it his presence. What he must have thought-if creatures of his sort can think — when he came to himself surrounded by white men, and something of white men's comforts. I can only dimly imagine. How he must have re-garded his treatment, given the softest bed in the ansiest wagon day after day and fed in the easiest wagon day after day, and fed on the most nourishing of foods, reinforced by the best wine tho train could furnish, is quite beyond my ability to say. He may have read the truth in our faces, our hearts by the best wine the train could furnish, is quite beyond my ability to say. He may have read the truth in our faces, our hearts in our actions, and realized, dimly and vaguely, that beyond the great gulf God has placed between the white race and the red, there were men who knew and loved a golden ing the death of his father, by drowning, at Deseronto, Canada. Mr. Prickett left this afternoon to attend the funeral. His father was one of the best known machinists in Canada, having been for a number of years foreman of the engine building department of the Canadian Pacific at Kingston.

to be as good as another, must be as ready to prove himself so when occasion demanded; to prove himself so when occasion demanded; even in the boundless domain that was being conquered so slowly and painfully—they had no room for cowards! And Black was six feet tail—I, five feet and six inches; he weighed 200 pounds—I, 120; he was an ex-pert in the use of any weapon a ploneer ever took in his hands—I was a man to have died of starvation, in the woods or on the prairic, with a good gun, plenty of ammuni-tion, and the thickets and grasses noisily weilr with game! I said, in my desperation, that I'd welcome a brush with the savages— if I might thus be free from Tige Black.

If I might thus be free from Tige Black. I spoke only for myself. But we got the fullest fruillon of my reckless wish! Have you ever been in desperate danger? Do you know how horrible events come fast and faster upon one another—in dreadful an-ticipation of a fearful end? At dark, we were getting a frightened rest from an attack that had lasted an hour. Mr. Davis, Millie's father, was dead. We had two men wounded, one of them fatally. We wondered whether the red rascals would draw off and leave us alone, or whether we would be compelled to repulse them again. At 10 o'clock we had driven the savages off once more. We had ten dead men inside our lines. We were beginning to talk of the off once more. We had ten dead men inside our lines.
