MORGAN MADE A DENIAL.

Dr. Rebert made an examination of the body of Ida Gaskill yesterday and found unmistakable evidence that the girl had been criminally outraged before she was murdered. The underclothing found by the officers also was covered in places by large spots of clotted blood, and parts of them were torn into shreds by the murderer. The inquest is set for today at 10:20.

Haze at the station shortly after t o'clock yesterday and closely questioned. He was ex-tramely nervous throughout the examination.

When asked again regarding the bloody clothes, he said that he had worked for a butcher in South Omaha some time ago and that the clothes found were those he had worn at the time. After half an hour of cross-examining, in which Morgan merely repeated his former statements, he was removed to the county half.

Early in the morning, as soon as the papers had given out their information of the terrible crime, a crowd was about the doors of the morgue. It was found impossible to allow them to go into the basement where the body had been placed, and consequently it was taken to the ground floor and than advantage was constant.

ISH WAS BADLY FRIGHTENED. There was no more worried man during he visit of this crowd than James Ish. It was reported that if the crowd once began operations it would never stop its work until Judge Lynch had passed sentence upon all the murderers now awaiting irial. Ish heard that a committee was coming to investigate the matter and grew extremely nervous. His Those who have been witnesses of lynchings remarked that there was an ominous look upon the outgoing faces. There was little morbid curiosity left in the features when the little body was viewed. There was not much talk, either. As the observers passed out one by one the only remark they made was "The brute ought to be hung."

LYNCH TALK HEARD.

The county jail was surrounded for about two hours in the evening by a crowd made up for the most part of idle currosity seekup for the most part of idle curoosity seek-ers, not a few of whom were boys so small that they could not have wielded any weapons had there been any there. The crowd was a good-natured one, and although it succeeded in worrying the police until after 9 o'clock, no harm was done. When Chief Sigwart found the numbers swelling at 7:30 o'clock he ordered the reserve squad of policemen to surround the county buildings. The day thing which caused the men's faces to harden more. > Capital Punishment Exists. While the talk of lynching was prevalent on the streets there seemed to be a widespread impression that the bill abolishing capital punishment became a law at the last session of the legislature. This was a mistake, as the bill introduced by Senator Dick Smith simply contemplated removing the place of execution from the various counties to the penitentiary at Lincoln. The bill was afterwards amended to abolish capital punishment, but it failed to pass the senate.
