HOUSE CAUCUSES TO BE HELD TODAY

sylvania Likely to Be the Next Chief Clerk, Thus Putting Henderson Out of the Race.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.-(Special.)-As the time grows near for the republicans to caucus upon the men they will support for offices in the house of representatives one thing is clearly evident, the McDowell champions have seemingly the best of the situation, claiming 108 votes, and consequently those in the McDowell combine look forward to the caucus tonight with little fear of the But there is always a contingency present that the gearing may not be well intricate mechanism out of position. Gen- will then be decided upon. Quite a number eral Henderson, candidate for clerk against McDowell, is a very popular old man, and many would like to vote for him for any officein the gift of the lower house, but McDowell was in Washington early last spring and commenced an active canvass for the clerkship long before General Henderson even thought of being a candidate, and therefore has a lead of time to his credit. McDowell has been successful in organizing a solidarity which will elect him, unless there is no deendence to be placed in signs.

With McDowell elected, however, the rub fices. commences, and it will require the closust application of the whip to keep in the traces those who supported the Pennsylvanian for the cicrkship. General Henderson does not lack politicians who are actively enlisted in his cause, and they are quite as experienced wire pullers as those who are manipulating McDowell's campaign. Recognizing that General Henderson cannot be made clerk, there is a decided probability that Mr. Hitt of Illinois will exploit Henderson's name for sergeant-at-arms, and in a little speech in which "no sectionalism" will be most promwhich no sectionalism will be most prominent, urge upon the caucus the pleasant thing of making the general an officer in the body which he dignified for so many years. This is in a faint hope that the move may smash the slate to smitheresis.

This contingency is being guarded against by McDowell's backers, and every man who is known to be for the man from Pennsylvania is given to understand that he must take the combine through from head to tail at one doze. Under these circumstances, and knowing the deals that have been entered into and positions contracted for, i seems safe in predicting the election of Mc Dowell of Pennsylvania for chief clerk, Glenn of New York for doorkeeper, Russell of Missouri for sergeant-at-arms, Fisher of Kansas for chaplain, and J. C. McElroy of Ohio for

STILL IN THE RACE.

General Henderson, when asked today if he intended to continue in the race for clerk, replied that such was his intention. 'My banner is still on the outer wall. I will not continue the quotation to the extent of saying, 'The cry is still they come,' for I have never made any claims. I do not, however, claim the contest settled until the house caucus shall pass upon it, and I shall hold out until that time."

He added that he had considered some of the Ohio delegates pledged to him, and said that even with half of the Ohio or the In-diana delegation he could be nominated.

diana delegation he could be nominated.

There is an effort in certain quarters to obtain General Henderson's consent to transfer his candidacy to the contest for sergeant-at-arms, but he has not yet consented to this arrangement, and it is being bitterly opposed by the friends of Mr. Russell, who is the candidate of the McDowell-Glenn coalition for this place.

Judge Holman of Indiana, who has been chairman of the democratic caucus for several congresses, is not in the present house and it is generally believed that the caucus will select Amos J. Cummings of New York for this honor. There are two candidates for caucus officers Colonel Isaac R. Hill of Ohio, deputy serant-at-arms of the last house, and Henry H. Mohler of Illinois, who was cashier in the sergeant at arms' office in the last congress. Colonel Hill has been deputy sergeant-atarms since 175, in democratic congresses, and held the position of caucus officer or "demoeratic whip" in both the Fourty-seventh and Fifty-first congresses, which were republican, REED IN THE COMMITTEE.

Ex-Speaker and Speaker-to-be Reed is guarding the makeup of committees with the greatest care. As his selection as speaker was a foregone conclusion he has had ample opportunity during the recess to various chairmanships. The members themselves generally wrote them their views and arrived here almost, the important places had been decided, upon. It is understood, too, that a few of the important assignments are yet in controversy. It is that Mr. Reed will consult Speaker Crisp and other democratic leaders to the minority representation on the WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—During the last six months Senator Mitchell and Representatives Herriman and Ellis have been receiving many letters signed by different persons, from different points in Oregon, requesting that the book on diseases of the horse, by Dr. Salmon, issued by the Agricultural de-partment, be forwarded to them. On a com-parison of the handwriting of these letters it has been found that they all were written by the same person, and on investigation it has been ascertained that some one has been traveling through Oregon selling some kind of a receipt for curing horse diseases, the seller assuring each purchaser that he would be entitled to a copy of the horse book by writing to some member of the delegation, he invariably writing the letter at the same time. cial.)-The present visit of Standing Bear, the chief of the Ponca Indians, and White Swan, a Ponca chief from the Indian terriory, to the Santee reservation, on the opposite side of the Missouri river from Spring field, this state, recalls to an old-timer here, now a federal official, the early days when every effort was made by raiding bands of Pawnees and Sloux to exterminate the on a reservation west of the Missouri river, below Fort Randall, and being midway be tween the Pawnses and Sloux, were the customary for raiding parties of from twenty o forty Pawnees to leave their reservation in Nebraska and raid the Poncas, stealing ponies, cattle or anything that they considered worth carrying away, and now and then killing a herder who was so innocent as to attempt to frustrate their plans, or who was not sufficiently agile to make his escape from the invaders, Bands of Sioux would also leave their reservation farther up the Missouri and sally against the Poncas, who numbered about 800 or 1,000 persons, and were fair fighters-especially when they were Occasionally the Poncas would muster up sufficient courage to sally forth and give bat-tle to their persecutors when the raiders be-came so bold as to enter the agency itself, and loss of life would result. The Pawnees, on their raiding expeditions against the Poncas, were extremely careful not to enter Sioux territory, as the wars which had been carried on for generations between these hereditary enemies had taught the Pawnees Sloux were fighters and not to be trifled with.

BRAVE AT CERTAIN TIMES.

The Pawnees, like other Indian tribes, were very brave when they outnumbered their foevery brave when they outnumbered their foe. It was considered a brave act by some of them to creep up on a Ponca horder and kill him before he had an opportunity to resist or escape. The federal official mentioned above was a government horder at Santee agency in the early 70s, and states that one day he rode suddenly over a rise of ground into a ravine about fifteen miles from the agency and was astonished to see close at hand a band of Pawnee warriors. It was agency and was astonished to see close at hand a band of Pawnee warriors. It was one of the raiding parties, and the Indians were dressed in full war array. They had apparently just dismounted, and were stand-ing beside their pontes. They appeared as astonished as the herder at the unexpected meeting, and stood in their tracks motionless for the time being. In the meantime the berder's horse was very uneasy at the sight of the Pawnee warriors, who are, when dressed for war, the most hideous of Indians, and kept sidling from them. All this time the herder was keeping close watch of the Indians, momentarily expecting a hostile demonstration, and at the same time gently touching up his horse with the spur on the foot fartherest from the redskins. Finally, WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The president came into town today and the cabinet gathered at the last meeting before the assembling of congress. Naturally the annual message of the president was the leadhey cared to kill him they could easily have

The constant raiding by the Sioux and Pawnees also created alarm among the Santee Indians, who lived in proximity to the Poncas. They are a branch of the Sloux na tion, and had no fear of being raided by their own people, but feared the Pawnees. On another occasion, one Sunday afternoon DEMOCRATS WILL CAUCUS.

DEMOCRATS WILL CAUCUS.

Ex-Speaker Crisp arrived here this morning rom his Georgia home and after consultation with some of the democratic leaders it was making, perhaps, 15,000 words, although in deeded to hold the house democratic caucus of morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The caucus will probably be very brief, as no attempt will be moved to day. Yester in the summer of 1870, the same herder was his office this afternoon and stoves the business on turn the copy into print. It is understood the business on turn the copy into print. It is understood the business on turn the copy into print. It is understood to day the east of the same herder was him the summer of 1870, the same herder was him the summer of 1870, the same herder was him the summer of 1870, the same herder was him the summer of 1870, the same herder was him the summer of 1870, the same herder was him to business on turn the copy into print. It is understood that the document will be moved to day. Yester-day at the event that it is deemed necessary to reserve for treatment in a special and later on the summer of 1870, the same herder was him the summer of 1870, the same herder was him the business near the bluffs near Pawnee raiding expedition, and started on a wild run for their agency.

HAD FUN WITH THE SANTEES. Seeing at a glance their mistake, and corectly interpreting the cause of alarm, the herder decided to have a little sport with them. So he galloped toward them, and whenever a depression in the trail was reached and he was out of sight of the frightened Indians, but still within hearing, he would give utterance to a series of yips and vells that were calculated to raise the hair of a mummy. The speed of the Indians was accelerated by the yells, and so desperate did they deem the situation that they dropped their blankets and other articles that thought might impede their flight When they had been scared into a state of utter panic the herder turned his horse aside and resumed the hunt for the stray cattle. The next day he had occasion to visit Sante agency, and learned that it was the general belief there that he had been killed the previous day by Pawnees. The frightened Indians had made the most of the situation and told of having been chased by vast numbers of Pawnees, their narrow escape, and added other embellishments characteristic of the average Indian's narrative.

The raids of the Sioux and Pawnees kept the Poncas in such a state of terror that the government finally moved them to the Indian territory. A few stragglers have, from time to time, returned overland to their old home on the Missouri, complaining that it was to hot and unhealthy in the Indian territory sible to keep these dissatisfied ones in the When it was demonstrated that it was impossion to remain in the vicinity of their old stamping ground and receive their rations at the Santee agency. They still reside there, and the new order of things permits them to enjoy life without the constant fear of hearing the warwhoops of their old-time enemies, the Sioux and Pawnees.
