H. N. HATTENHAUER GETS AWAY.

His Efforts to Elude His Many Creditors Finally Crowned with Success. The report of H. N. Hattenhauer to get out of town Thursday night without paying his numerous creditors, as detailed in the Bee, caused a great amount of talk on the streets and in the resorts yesterday.

The report was in no way diminished when it was learned, early in the day, that he actually had outwitted the officer who was trying to get him, and skip out with his trunk and baggage. The trunk was left to wait for the air and tear their hair, and that was as near as they came to getting the fugitive.

Constable Albert, with his pockets full of executions and writs of attachments, waited around the Grand hotel until after 1 o'clock for Hattenhauer. He was told that he had come tired and went home confident that if he got up at 6 o'clock he would find the four trunks with all their goods from Pareto in the Hattenhauer room. Shortly after he went home Hattenhauer came down, bearing the coast clear, and engaged one of Wellman's wagons to take the baggage across the river to Omaha.

The people who have sued out writs of attachments had all their troubles for nothing. They were given the go-by, and the man who had eluded them for so long a time, was now in the hands of the law. The man who had eluded them for so long a time, was now in the hands of the law.

Hattenhauer comes of a Council Bluffs family, in which he has lived since he was a child. He was a little over a year ago he was employed in a local bank and received a salary of $40 per month. He fell in love with a girl named Julia, who was a young lady who was said to have a barrel of money.

Hattenhauer went to Chicago and they were married. For several months he was in charge of the bank in Council Bluffs, but finally returned to Omaha, where he was employed by the bank of J. K. Sweeney, the Clinton cigar dealer, found out about it, and slapped a writ of attachment on the man. He said that it was Mrs. Hattenhauer's property, and could not be held for cigar bills.

Yesterday morning he packed up his trunk and wife and left before two days, John Ben & Co., who hold a claim of $30, attached the goods in Ven's court and will return to Council Bluffs, where they go to be bought of them by Mrs. Hattenhauer.

Hattenhauer is a man of considerable means, and is reported to have a large fortune. He is a native of Council Bluffs, and has lived here since he was a child.

THOMPSON'S WEAKNESS FOR WIDOWS

Between Getting Married, Joining Church and Borrowing Money He Finds Himself Overworked and So Takes a Vacation.

CHEROKEE, Ia., Dec. 13.—(Special.)—About a week ago an item appeared in The Evening News, stating that W. A. Thompson, a resident of this place, had left home ostensibly to go to Kimball, S. D., near which place he claimed to own a farm, and as no word had been received from him later than November 11, it was supposed that he had deserted his wife, whom he had vowed to cherish and protect, less than two months before.

Some time during last March W. A. Thompson appeared at Storm Lake. He has a manly bearing, a striking appearance and exceedingly smooth tongue, and he soon worked into the good graces of the citizens, some of whom are now sorry that they have not known him. His annual income is estimated to be $15,000. It was at Storm Lake that he met and wooed Mrs. Mary Marston, a modest and highly respected widow of 36.

Thompson became a prominent figure in the community, and he was soon elected a member of the church. He was also elected a member of the school board, and he was soon elected a member of the school board.
