ORDERED HIS VALET SHOT. How Bismarck Nearly Frightened His Own Valet to Death. "It's a constant surprise to me," said Dr. Emil Dorn of Hoboken to a reporter of the Jersey City Journal, "that so few anecdotes of Bismarck's life are known in this country, because there is in America such a large German population which would eagerly welcome them. The memoirs of Europe are full of these quaint stories, and it would not be surprising if a party of officers came together almost invariably tales of the Franco-Prussian war which he figured as the theme of discourse. Here, for example, I have never seen a book printed in this country, and which I think will be of interest to many of our readers: 'It was a few days after the French had been driven out of Metz, that John von Bismarck, which they had taken and occupied for about twenty-four hours, when Bismarck came to that place and was lodged at the hotel of the great mine king, Herr Stumm. 'The French were not very far away, and the first counselor of the king of Prussia had every reason to take good care of his person. Bismarck, however, was not in the least alarmed, and when he went to bed at about 1 o'clock at night he gave distinct orders to his valet to bring him a pair of slippers from the bottom of the wardrobe, and when he had taken them he went to bed. From the lower part of the town the rejoicing of the soldiery, which celebrated the first victory, could be heard, and Bismarck, who was a man of a very quiet and dignified disposition, was not at all disturbed by the noise. He was, however, a man of a very quiet and dignified disposition, and when he went to bed at about 1 o'clock at night he gave distinct orders to his valet to bring him a pair of slippers from the bottom of the wardrobe, and when he had taken them he went to bed. ...
