

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE

Published every morning except on Sundays and public holidays. Terms of subscription: Daily (without Sunday), One Year, $10.00; Six Months, $6.00; Three Months, $3.50; Single Copies, 5 Cents.

Table with 4 columns: Name, Address, and other details. Includes names like George B. Teschler, Secretary of the Bee, and various subscribers.

And the $115,000 hole in the city treasury is just as big today as it was six months ago. No gambling resort that presents a sign of any game can hope to stand in the city.

Nothing will satisfy the silver men in the senate now except another test vote on the free coinage question that will enable them to display their increased strength, marked by the advent of Utah's senatorial representatives.

The doctrine of home patronage has been of very great benefit to Nebraska. It should be observed in the purchase of things consumed and in the construction of all internal improvements.

Ex-Pugilist Sullivan again promises to cease to inflict the public from the stage and to retire once more to the obscurity of a saloon keeper's occupation.

The belted detectives of the city have made another report of a still hunt after gambling rooms and promptly confess that the police board will accept such a report in good faith.

The nonpartisan free silver league which was organized in Nebraska with such a flare of trumpets a few weeks ago is not receiving that encouragement throughout the state that was expected by its organizers.

The commissioner of health protests that his office in the city hall is to be moved into a dark and inconvenient room to make room for a department which he is disposed to think is of little use.

The fire insurance companies are drawing enough money out of Omaha to warrant them in going to the expense of getting evidence in every case of suspected arson and prosecuting any man arrested on the charge.

The South Omaha council will compel the enforcement of an ordinance providing that physicians shall report all deaths to the authorities, together with the cause of death.

The chief objection urged by Superintendent Pease against the plan to rearrange the teachers' salary schedule upon a classification based on merit is that it would devolve upon him the unpleasant duty of determining the relative qualifications of the teachers.

THE UNITED STATES AND TURKEY.

Both branches of congress having passed resolutions appealing to the Christian powers of Europe which signed the treaty of Berlin—Great Britain, Germany, Russia, France, Austria and Italy—to compel Turkey to comply with the conditions and requirements of the treaty, the earnest and considerate protest of this nation against the terrible outrages and crimes in the Turkish empire has been formally uttered.

It is fortunate for the peace of the United States and for the maintenance of the time-honored policy of avoiding entanglements in European affairs that there are conservative men in congress whose influence is great enough to overcome the hot-headed appeals of extremists and to subordinate passion to reason.

Turkey that our government should send a fleet through the Dardanelles and up to Constantinople with a demand for the protection of Americans within the sultan's dominions. This sort of talk is neither wise nor brave.

Another instance of intemperate zeal was furnished by the member of the house who urged that our government should give the Turkish minister his passports and terminate diplomatic relations with Turkey.

The formal protest of the United States against the outrages upon the Christian subjects of Turkey has been made and there we should stop unless the pledge of protection to our citizens is violated. In that case the executive authority will take such action as the circumstances demand.

The inquiry that has been instituted by a congressional committee into the results from the reciprocity agreements made under the last republican tariff will not show that in the case of every country the benefit secured by the United States was very great.

The greatest gain in our exports under reciprocity was made with Cuba, when we secured practically the control of the market for flour and realized an increased demand for other articles on which duties were materially reduced.

The proposition of Senator Lodge, that the government shall borrow $100,000,000 to be used in the construction of coast defenses, will probably encounter considerable opposition. Even some of those who believe that defensive preparations should be entered upon as soon as possible may question whether it is wise to increase the interest-bearing public debt for this purpose.

The proposition of Senator Lodge, that the government shall borrow $100,000,000 to be used in the construction of coast defenses, will probably encounter considerable opposition. Even some of those who believe that defensive preparations should be entered upon as soon as possible may question whether it is wise to increase the interest-bearing public debt for this purpose.

QUESTIONS OF ECONOMY.

Now that the work of transforming the basement of the city hall into a jail is under way and the fire chief's quarters adjacent to the rotunda are being reconstructed into a police court room, the Bee may indulge in comment on this piece of alleged reform without subjecting itself to the charge of trying to obstruct a great economy.

Senator Cannon of Utah may flatter himself that he has drawn a prize in the lottery which gave him the long term of the two Utah senatorships. More careful consideration, however, will show that Senator Brown, whose term is to expire March 4, 1897, will stand for re-election before the same legislature that originally sent him to Washington.

According to the report of two capable engineers the county road leading to the southwest is in poor condition and it is evident the terms of the contract for its construction have not been complied with. The county commissioners will no doubt hold the contractor responsible for the defects in the road.

Trade conditions the past week have shown decided improvement throughout the state. This is doubtless due to the fact that grain has begun to move. With a decided advance in the price of corn Nebraska would undergo an immediate revival of trade.

Street Commissioner Kaspar has demonstrated the practicability of the day's work system in the street cleaning and repairing department. It would be well for the labor unions to compile statistics covering the cost of street work under the old system as compared with that under Mr. Kaspar's plan.

The war of 1812, about which books are written in America, has scarcely got five lines devoted to it in any one of the popular English histories. The action of the council in this matter is also an infraction of the spirit, if not the letter, of the contract with the school board.

Utah being heretofore a state with 19,515 farms, of which 17,869 are unimproved. The new commonwealth owns itself, and presents a poor field for the calamity orator.

The gist of Cleveland's warning to Venezuela is that if the United States is going to assume the duties of big-brotherhood it will have to give up the face-making and stone-throwing privileges.

There is a speculative patriotism. In this category the proposition to make national parks of all the battlegrounds of the late civil war finds a place. Enough has already been done to properly commemorate that bloody and calamitous struggle.

The proposition of Senator Lodge, that the government shall borrow $100,000,000 to be used in the construction of coast defenses, will probably encounter considerable opposition. Even some of those who believe that defensive preparations should be entered upon as soon as possible may question whether it is wise to increase the interest-bearing public debt for this purpose.

A sorry spectacle is being presented in the United States. It has been the habit of the American people to regard with pride, as well as with a distinct feeling of confidence and reassurance, the upper house of congress. The senate has always been the most exalted conception of personal dignity and patriotic devotion.

The proposition of Senator Lodge, that the government shall borrow $100,000,000 to be used in the construction of coast defenses, will probably encounter considerable opposition. Even some of those who believe that defensive preparations should be entered upon as soon as possible may question whether it is wise to increase the interest-bearing public debt for this purpose.

INCENTIVES TO WASTE.

The benefit which would accrue to the people from the establishment of postal savings banks is sufficient warrant for the government to undertake the task. In testimony of the valuable services rendered by Commander and Mrs. Rallington Booth as directors of the Salvation Army work in the United States, a public meeting is to be held in New York City on Monday next.

Chicago Tribune: It is perfectly true that Cleveland is the logical candidate for the presidency. At the same time, it is generally more logical than any of the others. Washington Post: Speaking of treachery at national conventions, Mr. Harrison will never forget the little trick the Ohio McKinley pulled on him at Minneapolis.

Chicago Chronicle: Foraker and McKinley are to have it out in Chicago. Foraker is to be the guest of the Hamilton club and McKinley the guest of the Marquette club. McKinley will probably have a considerable vote at the start in the St. Louis convention, but it is significant that there is agreement among the informed observers that his chances are not increasing.

Chicago Chronicle: Foraker and McKinley are to have it out in Chicago. Foraker is to be the guest of the Hamilton club and McKinley the guest of the Marquette club. McKinley will probably have a considerable vote at the start in the St. Louis convention, but it is significant that there is agreement among the informed observers that his chances are not increasing.

Chicago Chronicle: Foraker and McKinley are to have it out in Chicago. Foraker is to be the guest of the Hamilton club and McKinley the guest of the Marquette club. McKinley will probably have a considerable vote at the start in the St. Louis convention, but it is significant that there is agreement among the informed observers that his chances are not increasing.

Chicago Chronicle: Foraker and McKinley are to have it out in Chicago. Foraker is to be the guest of the Hamilton club and McKinley the guest of the Marquette club. McKinley will probably have a considerable vote at the start in the St. Louis convention, but it is significant that there is agreement among the informed observers that his chances are not increasing.

Chicago Chronicle: Foraker and McKinley are to have it out in Chicago. Foraker is to be the guest of the Hamilton club and McKinley the guest of the Marquette club. McKinley will probably have a considerable vote at the start in the St. Louis convention, but it is significant that there is agreement among the informed observers that his chances are not increasing.

Chicago Chronicle: Foraker and McKinley are to have it out in Chicago. Foraker is to be the guest of the Hamilton club and McKinley the guest of the Marquette club. McKinley will probably have a considerable vote at the start in the St. Louis convention, but it is significant that there is agreement among the informed observers that his chances are not increasing.

Chicago Chronicle: Foraker and McKinley are to have it out in Chicago. Foraker is to be the guest of the Hamilton club and McKinley the guest of the Marquette club. McKinley will probably have a considerable vote at the start in the St. Louis convention, but it is significant that there is agreement among the informed observers that his chances are not increasing.

Chicago Chronicle: Foraker and McKinley are to have it out in Chicago. Foraker is to be the guest of the Hamilton club and McKinley the guest of the Marquette club. McKinley will probably have a considerable vote at the start in the St. Louis convention, but it is significant that there is agreement among the informed observers that his chances are not increasing.

Chicago Chronicle: Foraker and McKinley are to have it out in Chicago. Foraker is to be the guest of the Hamilton club and McKinley the guest of the Marquette club. McKinley will probably have a considerable vote at the start in the St. Louis convention, but it is significant that there is agreement among the informed observers that his chances are not increasing.

Chicago Chronicle: Foraker and McKinley are to have it out in Chicago. Foraker is to be the guest of the Hamilton club and McKinley the guest of the Marquette club. McKinley will probably have a considerable vote at the start in the St. Louis convention, but it is significant that there is agreement among the informed observers that his chances are not increasing.

Chicago Chronicle: Foraker and McKinley are to have it out in Chicago. Foraker is to be the guest of the Hamilton club and McKinley the guest of the Marquette club. McKinley will probably have a considerable vote at the start in the St. Louis convention, but it is significant that there is agreement among the informed observers that his chances are not increasing.

Chicago Chronicle: Foraker and McKinley are to have it out in Chicago. Foraker is to be the guest of the Hamilton club and McKinley the guest of the Marquette club. McKinley will probably have a considerable vote at the start in the St. Louis convention, but it is significant that there is agreement among the informed observers that his chances are not increasing.

Chicago Chronicle: Foraker and McKinley are to have it out in Chicago. Foraker is to be the guest of the Hamilton club and McKinley the guest of the Marquette club. McKinley will probably have a considerable vote at the start in the St. Louis convention, but it is significant that there is agreement among the informed observers that his chances are not increasing.

Chicago Chronicle: Foraker and McKinley are to have it out in Chicago. Foraker is to be the guest of the Hamilton club and McKinley the guest of the Marquette club. McKinley will probably have a considerable vote at the start in the St. Louis convention, but it is significant that there is agreement among the informed observers that his chances are not increasing.

Chicago Chronicle: Foraker and McKinley are to have it out in Chicago. Foraker is to be the guest of the Hamilton club and McKinley the guest of the Marquette club. McKinley will probably have a considerable vote at the start in the St. Louis convention, but it is significant that there is agreement among the informed observers that his chances are not increasing.

PRESIDENTIAL TALK.

Chicago Tribune: It is perfectly true that Cleveland is the logical candidate for the presidency. At the same time, it is generally more logical than any of the others. Washington Post: Speaking of treachery at national conventions, Mr. Harrison will never forget the little trick the Ohio McKinley pulled on him at Minneapolis.

Chicago Tribune: It is perfectly true that Cleveland is the logical candidate for the presidency. At the same time, it is generally more logical than any of the others. Washington Post: Speaking of treachery at national conventions, Mr. Harrison will never forget the little trick the Ohio McKinley pulled on him at Minneapolis.

Chicago Tribune: It is perfectly true that Cleveland is the logical candidate for the presidency. At the same time, it is generally more logical than any of the others. Washington Post: Speaking of treachery at national conventions, Mr. Harrison will never forget the little trick the Ohio McKinley pulled on him at Minneapolis.

Chicago Tribune: It is perfectly true that Cleveland is the logical candidate for the presidency. At the same time, it is generally more logical than any of the others. Washington Post: Speaking of treachery at national conventions, Mr. Harrison will never forget the little trick the Ohio McKinley pulled on him at Minneapolis.

Chicago Tribune: It is perfectly true that Cleveland is the logical candidate for the presidency. At the same time, it is generally more logical than any of the others. Washington Post: Speaking of treachery at national conventions, Mr. Harrison will never forget the little trick the Ohio McKinley pulled on him at Minneapolis.

Chicago Tribune: It is perfectly true that Cleveland is the logical candidate for the presidency. At the same time, it is generally more logical than any of the others. Washington Post: Speaking of treachery at national conventions, Mr. Harrison will never forget the little trick the Ohio McKinley pulled on him at Minneapolis.

Chicago Tribune: It is perfectly true that Cleveland is the logical candidate for the presidency. At the same time, it is generally more logical than any of the others. Washington Post: Speaking of treachery at national conventions, Mr. Harrison will never forget the little trick the Ohio McKinley pulled on him at Minneapolis.

Chicago Tribune: It is perfectly true that Cleveland is the logical candidate for the presidency. At the same time, it is generally more logical than any of the others. Washington Post: Speaking of treachery at national conventions, Mr. Harrison will never forget the little trick the Ohio McKinley pulled on him at Minneapolis.

Chicago Tribune: It is perfectly true that Cleveland is the logical candidate for the presidency. At the same time, it is generally more logical than any of the others. Washington Post: Speaking of treachery at national conventions, Mr. Harrison will never forget the little trick the Ohio McKinley pulled on him at Minneapolis.

Chicago Tribune: It is perfectly true that Cleveland is the logical candidate for the presidency. At the same time, it is generally more logical than any of the others. Washington Post: Speaking of treachery at national conventions, Mr. Harrison will never forget the little trick the Ohio McKinley pulled on him at Minneapolis.

Chicago Tribune: It is perfectly true that Cleveland is the logical candidate for the presidency. At the same time, it is generally more logical than any of the others. Washington Post: Speaking of treachery at national conventions, Mr. Harrison will never forget the little trick the Ohio McKinley pulled on him at Minneapolis.

Chicago Tribune: It is perfectly true that Cleveland is the logical candidate for the presidency. At the same time, it is generally more logical than any of the others. Washington Post: Speaking of treachery at national conventions, Mr. Harrison will never forget the little trick the Ohio McKinley pulled on him at Minneapolis.

Chicago Tribune: It is perfectly true that Cleveland is the logical candidate for the presidency. At the same time, it is generally more logical than any of the others. Washington Post: Speaking of treachery at national conventions, Mr. Harrison will never forget the little trick the Ohio McKinley pulled on him at Minneapolis.

Chicago Tribune: It is perfectly true that Cleveland is the logical candidate for the presidency. At the same time, it is generally more logical than any of the others. Washington Post: Speaking of treachery at national conventions, Mr. Harrison will never forget the little trick the Ohio McKinley pulled on him at Minneapolis.

Chicago Tribune: It is perfectly true that Cleveland is the logical candidate for the presidency. At the same time, it is generally more logical than any of the others. Washington Post: Speaking of treachery at national conventions, Mr. Harrison will never forget the little trick the Ohio McKinley pulled on him at Minneapolis.

Chicago Tribune: It is perfectly true that Cleveland is the logical candidate for the presidency. At the same time, it is generally more logical than any of the others. Washington Post: Speaking of treachery at national conventions, Mr. Harrison will never forget the little trick the Ohio McKinley pulled on him at Minneapolis.

THURSTON'S GREAT EFFORT.

First Set Speech in the Senate of Nebraska's Junior Member. MONROE DOCTRINE OF VITAL IMPORTANCE. Believes in a Strict Adherence to the Doctrine Embodied in the Davis Resolution and Takes Issue with Senator Wolcott.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Senator Thurston delivered his speech on the Davis resolution today and the senate listened to him with the closest attention throughout. Senator Thurston said in part: "The adoption of the resolution reported by the committee on foreign affairs will present a grand international issue which may hold much menace to the world's peace; an issue which I sincerely hope and profoundly believe will be resolved to the advantage of peace and honor and permanency of this republic, but which it is useless to deny, may precipitate upon our beloved country all the disasters and horrors and sacrifices which would inevitably follow should the two great English speaking nations of the globe, whose differences to the arbitrament of arms, cannot assume these responsibilities; I dare not vote for the pending resolution without first submitting to the deliberate judgment of mankind and the dispassionate criticism of posterity some of the reasons which seem to make my path of duty plain."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Senator Thurston delivered his speech on the Davis resolution today and the senate listened to him with the closest attention throughout. Senator Thurston said in part: "The adoption of the resolution reported by the committee on foreign affairs will present a grand international issue which may hold much menace to the world's peace; an issue which I sincerely hope and profoundly believe will be resolved to the advantage of peace and honor and permanency of this republic, but which it is useless to deny, may precipitate upon our beloved country all the disasters and horrors and sacrifices which would inevitably follow should the two great English speaking nations of the globe, whose differences to the arbitrament of arms, cannot assume these responsibilities; I dare not vote for the pending resolution without first submitting to the deliberate judgment of mankind and the dispassionate criticism of posterity some of the reasons which seem to make my path of duty plain."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Senator Thurston delivered his speech on the Davis resolution today and the senate listened to him with the closest attention throughout. Senator Thurston said in part: "The adoption of the resolution reported by the committee on foreign affairs will present a grand international issue which may hold much menace to the world's peace; an issue which I sincerely hope and profoundly believe will be resolved to the advantage of peace and honor and permanency of this republic, but which it is useless to deny, may precipitate upon our beloved country all the disasters and horrors and sacrifices which would inevitably follow should the two great English speaking nations of the globe, whose differences to the arbitrament of arms, cannot assume these responsibilities; I dare not vote for the pending resolution without first submitting to the deliberate judgment of mankind and the dispassionate criticism of posterity some of the reasons which seem to make my path of duty plain."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Senator Thurston delivered his speech on the Davis resolution today and the senate listened to him with the closest attention throughout. Senator Thurston said in part: "The adoption of the resolution reported by the committee on foreign affairs will present a grand international issue which may hold much menace to the world's peace; an issue which I sincerely hope and profoundly believe will be resolved to the advantage of peace and honor and permanency of this republic, but which it is useless to deny, may precipitate upon our beloved country all the disasters and horrors and sacrifices which would inevitably follow should the two great English speaking nations of the globe, whose differences to the arbitrament of arms, cannot assume these responsibilities; I dare not vote for the pending resolution without first submitting to the deliberate judgment of mankind and the dispassionate criticism of posterity some of the reasons which seem to make my path of duty plain."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Senator Thurston delivered his speech on the Davis resolution today and the senate listened to him with the closest attention throughout. Senator Thurston said in part: "The adoption of the resolution reported by the committee on foreign affairs will present a grand international issue which may hold much menace to the world's peace; an issue which I sincerely hope and profoundly believe will be resolved to the advantage of peace and honor and permanency of this republic, but which it is useless to deny, may precipitate upon our beloved country all the disasters and horrors and sacrifices which would inevitably follow should the two great English speaking nations of the globe, whose differences to the arbitrament of arms, cannot assume these responsibilities; I dare not vote for the pending resolution without first submitting to the deliberate judgment of mankind and the dispassionate criticism of posterity some of the reasons which seem to make my path of duty plain."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Senator Thurston delivered his speech on the Davis resolution today and the senate listened to him with the closest attention throughout. Senator Thurston said in part: "The adoption of the resolution reported by the committee on foreign affairs will present a grand international issue which may hold much menace to the world's peace; an issue which I sincerely hope and profoundly believe will be resolved to the advantage of peace and honor and permanency of this republic, but which it is useless to deny, may precipitate upon our beloved country all the disasters and horrors and sacrifices which would inevitably follow should the two great English speaking nations of the globe, whose differences to the arbitrament of arms, cannot assume these responsibilities; I dare not vote for the pending resolution without first submitting to the deliberate judgment of mankind and the dispassionate criticism of posterity some of the reasons which seem to make my path of duty plain."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Senator Thurston delivered his speech on the Davis resolution today and the senate listened to him with the closest attention throughout. Senator Thurston said in part: "The adoption of the resolution reported by the committee on foreign affairs will present a grand international issue which may hold much menace to the world's peace; an issue which I sincerely hope and profoundly believe will be resolved to the advantage of peace and honor and permanency of this republic, but which it is useless to deny, may precipitate upon our beloved country all the disasters and horrors and sacrifices which would inevitably follow should the two great English speaking nations of the globe, whose differences to the arbitrament of arms, cannot assume these responsibilities; I dare not vote for the pending resolution without first submitting to the deliberate judgment of mankind and the dispassionate criticism of posterity some of the reasons which seem to make my path of duty plain."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Senator Thurston delivered his speech on the Davis resolution today and the senate listened to him with the closest attention throughout. Senator Thurston said in part: "The adoption of the resolution reported by the committee on foreign affairs will present a grand international issue which may hold much menace to the world's peace; an issue which I sincerely hope and profoundly believe will be resolved to the advantage of peace and honor and permanency of this republic, but which it is useless to deny, may precipitate upon our beloved country all the disasters and horrors and sacrifices which would inevitably follow should the two great English speaking nations of the globe, whose differences to the arbitrament of arms, cannot assume these responsibilities; I dare not vote for the pending resolution without first submitting to the deliberate judgment of mankind and the dispassionate criticism of posterity some of the reasons which seem to make my path of duty plain."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Senator Thurston delivered his speech on the Davis resolution today and the senate listened to him with the closest attention throughout. Senator Thurston said in part: "The adoption of the resolution reported by the committee on foreign affairs will present a grand international issue which may hold much menace to the world's peace; an issue which I sincerely hope and profoundly believe will be resolved to the advantage of peace and honor and permanency of this republic, but which it is useless to deny, may precipitate upon our beloved country all the disasters and horrors and sacrifices which would inevitably follow should the two great English speaking nations of the globe, whose differences to the arbitrament of arms, cannot assume these responsibilities; I dare not vote for the pending resolution without first submitting to the deliberate judgment of mankind and the dispassionate criticism of posterity some of the reasons which seem to make my path of duty plain."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Senator Thurston delivered his speech on the Davis resolution today and the senate listened to him with the closest attention throughout. Senator Thurston said in part: "The adoption of the resolution reported by the committee on foreign affairs will present a grand international issue which may hold much menace to the world's peace; an issue which I sincerely hope and profoundly believe will be resolved to the advantage of peace and honor and permanency of this republic, but which it is useless to deny, may precipitate upon our beloved country all the disasters and horrors and sacrifices which would inevitably follow should the two great English speaking nations of the globe, whose differences to the arbitrament of arms, cannot assume these responsibilities; I dare not vote for the pending resolution without first submitting to the deliberate judgment of mankind and the dispassionate criticism of posterity some of the reasons which seem to make my path of duty plain."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Senator Thurston delivered his speech on the Davis resolution today and the senate listened to him with the closest attention throughout. Senator Thurston said in part: "The adoption of the resolution reported by the committee on foreign affairs will present a grand international issue which may hold much menace to the world's peace; an issue which I sincerely hope and profoundly believe will be resolved to the advantage of peace and honor and permanency of this republic, but which it is useless to deny, may precipitate upon our beloved country all the disasters and horrors and sacrifices which would inevitably follow should the two great English speaking nations of the globe, whose differences to the arbitrament of arms, cannot assume these responsibilities; I dare not vote for the pending resolution without first submitting to the deliberate judgment of mankind and the dispassionate criticism of posterity some of the reasons which seem to make my path of duty plain."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Senator Thurston delivered his speech on the Davis resolution today and the senate listened to him with the closest attention throughout. Senator Thurston said in part: "The adoption of the resolution reported by the committee on foreign affairs will present a grand international issue which may hold much menace to the world's peace; an issue which I sincerely hope and profoundly believe will be resolved to the advantage of peace and honor and permanency of this republic, but which it is useless to deny, may precipitate upon our beloved country all the disasters and horrors and sacrifices which would inevitably follow should the two great English speaking nations of the globe, whose differences to the arbitrament of arms, cannot assume these responsibilities; I dare not vote for the pending resolution without first submitting to the deliberate judgment of mankind and the dispassionate criticism of posterity some of the reasons which seem to make my path of duty plain."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Senator Thurston delivered his speech on the Davis resolution today and the senate listened to him with the closest attention throughout. Senator Thurston said in part: "The adoption of the resolution reported by the committee on foreign affairs will present a grand international issue which may hold much menace to the world's peace; an issue which I sincerely hope and profoundly believe will be resolved to the advantage of peace and honor and permanency of this republic, but which it is useless to deny, may precipitate upon our beloved country all the disasters and horrors and sacrifices which would inevitably follow should the two great English speaking nations of the globe, whose differences to the arbitrament of arms, cannot assume these responsibilities; I dare not vote for the pending resolution without first submitting to the deliberate judgment of mankind and the dispassionate criticism of posterity some of the reasons which seem to make my path of duty plain."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Senator Thurston delivered his speech on the Davis resolution today and the senate listened to him with the closest attention throughout. Senator Thurston said in part: "The adoption of the resolution reported by the committee on foreign affairs will present a grand international issue which may hold much menace to the world's peace; an issue which I sincerely hope and profoundly believe will be resolved to the advantage of peace and honor and permanency of this republic, but which it is useless to deny, may precipitate upon our beloved country all the disasters and horrors and sacrifices which would inevitably follow should the two great English speaking nations of the globe, whose differences to the arbitrament of arms, cannot assume these responsibilities; I dare not vote for the pending resolution without first submitting to the deliberate judgment of mankind and the dispassionate criticism of posterity some of the reasons which seem to make my path of duty plain."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Senator Thurston delivered his speech on the Davis resolution today and the senate listened to him with the closest attention throughout. Senator Thurston said in part: "The adoption of the resolution reported by the committee on foreign affairs will present a grand international issue which may hold much menace to the world's peace; an issue which I sincerely hope and profoundly believe will be resolved to the advantage of peace and honor and permanency of this republic, but which it is useless to deny, may precipitate upon our beloved country all the disasters and horrors and sacrifices which would inevitably follow should the two great English speaking nations of the globe, whose differences to the arbitrament of arms, cannot assume these responsibilities; I dare not vote for the pending resolution without first submitting to the deliberate judgment of mankind and the dispassionate criticism of posterity some of the reasons which seem to make my path of duty plain."

CUSH DAVIS' DEFINITION.

Washington Post: The report of the committee of the senate on foreign relations will be looked for with intense interest. We predict that it will be positive and direct, with no British attachment. St. Paul Pioneer Press: Nevertheless, Senator Davis has done a great service to the country in clearly enunciating the doctrine of American international law, as understood by the American people and as supported by the course of historical precedent.

Washington Post: The report of the committee of the senate on foreign relations will be looked for with intense interest. We predict that it will be positive and direct, with no British attachment. St. Paul Pioneer Press: Nevertheless, Senator Davis has done a great service to the country in clearly enunciating the doctrine of American international law, as understood by the American people and as supported by the course of historical precedent.

Washington Post: The report of the committee of the senate on foreign relations will be looked for with intense interest. We predict that it will be positive and direct, with no British attachment. St. Paul Pioneer Press: Nevertheless, Senator Davis has done a great service to the country in clearly enunciating the doctrine of American international law, as understood by the American people and as supported by the course of historical precedent.

Washington Post: The report of the committee of the senate on foreign relations will be looked for with intense interest. We predict that it will be positive and direct, with no British attachment. St. Paul Pioneer Press: Nevertheless, Senator Davis has done a great service to the country in clearly enunciating the doctrine of American international law, as understood by the American people and as supported by the course of historical precedent.

Washington Post: The report of the committee of the senate on foreign relations will be looked for with intense interest. We predict that it will be positive and direct, with no British attachment. St. Paul Pioneer Press: Nevertheless, Senator Davis has done a great service to the country in clearly enunciating the doctrine of American international law, as understood by the American people and as supported by the course of historical precedent.

Washington Post: The report of the committee of the senate on foreign relations will be looked for with intense interest. We predict that it will be positive and direct, with no British attachment. St. Paul Pioneer Press: Nevertheless, Senator Davis has done a great service to the country in clearly enunciating the doctrine of American international law, as understood by the American people and as supported by the course of historical precedent.

Washington Post: The report of the committee of the senate on foreign relations will be looked for with intense interest. We predict that it will be positive and direct, with no British attachment. St. Paul Pioneer Press: Nevertheless, Senator Davis has done a great service to the country in clearly enunciating the doctrine of American international law, as understood by the American people and as supported by the course of historical precedent.

Washington Post: The report of the committee of the senate on foreign relations will be looked for with intense interest. We predict that it will be positive and direct, with no British attachment. St. Paul Pioneer Press: Nevertheless, Senator Davis has done a great service to the country in clearly enunciating the doctrine of American international law, as understood by the American people and as supported by the course of historical precedent.

Washington Post: The report of the committee of the senate on foreign relations will be looked for with intense interest. We predict that it will be positive and direct, with no British attachment. St. Paul Pioneer Press: Nevertheless, Senator Davis has done a great service to the country in clearly enunciating the doctrine of American international law, as understood by the American people and as supported by the course of historical precedent.

Washington Post: The report of the committee of the senate on foreign relations will be looked for with intense interest. We predict that it will be positive and direct, with no British attachment. St. Paul Pioneer Press: Nevertheless, Senator Davis has done a great service to the country in clearly enunciating the doctrine of American international law, as understood by the American people and as supported by the course of historical precedent.

Washington Post: The report of the committee of the senate on foreign relations will be looked for with intense interest. We predict that it will be positive and direct, with no British attachment. St. Paul Pioneer Press: Nevertheless, Senator Davis has done a great service to the country in clearly enunciating the doctrine of American international law, as understood by the American people and as supported by the course of historical precedent.

Washington Post: The report of the committee of the senate on foreign relations will be looked for with intense interest. We predict that it will be positive and direct, with no British attachment. St. Paul Pioneer Press: Nevertheless, Senator Davis has done a great service to the country in clearly enunciating the doctrine of American international law, as understood by the American people and as supported by the course of historical precedent.

Washington Post: The report of the committee of the senate on foreign relations will be looked for with intense interest. We predict that it will be positive and direct, with no British attachment. St. Paul Pioneer Press: Nevertheless, Senator Davis has done a great service to the country in clearly enunciating the doctrine of American international law, as understood by the American people and as supported by the course of historical precedent.

Washington Post: The report of the committee of the senate on foreign relations will be looked for with intense interest. We predict that it will be positive and direct, with no British attachment. St. Paul Pioneer Press: Nevertheless, Senator Davis has done a great service to the country in clearly enunciating the doctrine of American international law, as understood by the American people and as supported by the course of historical precedent.

Washington Post: The report of the committee of the senate on foreign relations will be looked for with intense interest. We predict that it will be positive and direct, with no British attachment. St. Paul Pioneer Press: Nevertheless, Senator Davis has done a great service to the country in clearly enunciating the doctrine of American international law, as understood by the American people and as supported by the course of historical precedent.

Washington Post: The report of the committee of the senate on foreign relations will be looked for with intense interest. We predict that it will be positive and direct, with no British attachment. St. Paul Pioneer Press: Nevertheless, Senator Davis has done a great service to the country in clearly enunciating the doctrine of American international law, as understood by the American people and as supported by the course of historical precedent.