DURING TWO WEEKS OF LENT

But Little Found for Society People to Do.

GAYETY CLOTHED IN ITS MOST QUIET GARB | poleon, O.

Social Gatherings of an Unimportant Nature Enjoyed by These Who Do Not Recognize the Season of Fasting.

Society people have had but little to entertain them the past week, for, with the exception of a few informal gatherings, a musical or two, nothing unusually interesting has happened.

Now that Lent has come, it is the proper caper to imagine society realms duil, dreary, but there are those who, if they would, could tell many a tale of gay diversions pursued sub rosa between the going out of Shrove Tuesday and the incoming of Eastertide-such as little suppers, luncheons, dances, card parties, informal of course.

A very amusing story reached us not long ago concerning one of the recent brides, who, not knowing what to give her bridesmaids, took the whole family into consultather brain, but to no avail.

However, one day her little 10-year-old brother came rushing up the stairs, two or three steps at a time, his radiant face bearing one great smile. When he reached the top of the stairs he shouted, breathlessly. "Oh, sister, I have just thought what to give your brillesmaids." He then told her "Oh, sister, i day give your bridesmalds." He then told ner that there were some of the degrest, cutest that there were some out in the barn and little black puppies out in the why not give them each one of them. However appropriate this seemed to the boy, the brilliant suggestion was not taken,

A Day of Jubilee. Lenten quiet put restrictions on those who would have wished to give publicity to the silver Jubilee of Rt. Rev. Bishop Scannell last Wednesday. But the pupils of the Sacred Heart academy, Park Place, contrived offer their congratulations in a form which, without eliminating the spirit of the penitential season, held the audience spell-bound for more than two hours. About twenty of the clergy of the diocess were

The reception rooms were perfect in all their appointment. Vases of cut flowers and potted plants were arranged with good taste and the laambrequins and portieres of siland the laambrequins and portieres of silver cloth gave to the whole a gorgeous appearance in keeping with the event celebrated.

Misses Reynolds and Furay opened the program by the "Sleigh Ride." Miss Ella MacAdam of Chicago then delivered the congratulatory address. She acquitted berself admirably of the task committed to her of her companions, thanking the bishop at the same time for the many marks of favor and Mrs. W. W. Connoran, Mr. and Mrs of which they had been the recipients. The Theo Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bould important feature of the program was the drama, composed in honor of the occasion—

The green marble palace of the emperor, the empress' white marble reception room, the dreary prison scene and the pleasant gardens of the noble Catherine stood out in bold perspective, praising e the conception of the artist and its realization. The costumes could not have been more tasteful or more graceful and were an important factor in the exquisite harmony which characterized the evening's entertainment.

The Emperor Maximin found a very flat tering representative in Miss Mullen. The character of the empress gave Miss Theresa Smith, a charming young woman of Rock Island, ample scope for displaying her cio-cutionary talents. Miss MacAdam played the part of Hipolitus, the pagan philosopher. perfectly. Her bungling sophisms, her dis-comfiture at being confounded by a Christian maiden gave spice to the scene in which she appeared. Celsus, a companion philosopher, was cleverly personated by Miss Furay. Miss Irene Maple, as Placidia, the friend of Catherine, was graceful, self-pos-sessed and dignified. Misses Batrett and Bartley identified themselves perfectly the characters they represented. Wyman and Test were most successful as "living pictures." Miss Emille Schmidt's acting was so true to life that more than once the audience was visibly moved by the useful lesson in pleasing form might havbeen derived from the scance and the pupils themselves gave evidence of the practical knowledge that "atrength of mind is ex-

The women were called together early and for a time they tolled over their fancy work, after which they threw dull care to the winds and proceeded to make merry. Several vo-cal selections were rendered by Mesdames Ross and Lees, after which Mrs. Merrow and Miss Bowie presided at the piano in a duct. Miss Leard recited one of her choice selections, which was enthusiastically received.

During the afternoon a large server was passed about the room. On the dish there were as many articles as there were persons present and each individual was given an guess the names of icles. Mrs. Kratz. Mrs. Bryce Crawford and Mrs. Lees proved to be the most accom-plished and artistic guessers and hit upon the orrest names. As there was but one prize. these three women guesced off and Mrs. Kratz won the prize, a hand-painted dollie There was still another surprise for the guests when they were ushered into the dining room, where the delicious lunch was served. Each woman was told that she would find her card at the place that she would occupy. Around the table the women went, but none of them could find names that in the least resembles their own. At last the mystery was solved by some perso discovering that all of the names had spelled backward. For instance, when Mrs Gordon was hunting for a card bearing her name, she found one that read, Mrs. Nod-rog, and so with all of the others. This insed any amount of amusement.

 DOMINANT SEVENTHS

It was one of those afternoons which seem to have been sent by some evil influence to torture the souls of men and make them fifor punishment. The gracious sunshine had hidden behind cloudy frown-mantles, and the winds, Valkyrie like, shricked their uncarthly shricks, and flung the irritated dust into the eyes of men as they walked, with the mocking words, "Dust thou art, to dust thou shalt return."

Mingling with the dust came the vecifor ous cry of the little newsboy, "Evening Bee. And again, mingling with the dust, came the touching cry of a little fellow who told the passerby that he had not eaten one bite all day.

"Mister, won't you give me a dime to get -2" ne passed. "Say, mister, won't you, please mister?" he too passed.

"I haven't had a bite to -" and a third Meanwhile the newsboy was counting his papers. Quietly he came over to the "weaker brother" and said: "Say, kid, come wid me." He took him to a restaurant and put down his money for a meal for the hungry one, and came out quickly with the

The dust whirled on with the wind. The winds shricked, but methought their theme was different, and it sounded like "I was a-hungered and ye fed me greeting, "Evening Bee, here!"

And the newsboy's sermon had no sur rounding glories, fine vestments, rich music multi-colored windows, no "Gloria Patri" was sung at the close, no-except by the winds and the hungry one's heart, and-io the sun was shining The following is the musical program to be rendered at the Park Avenue United Presbyterian church next Friday evening:
