Workmen Escape with Their Lives -People Thought It Was a Cyelone Not Down on the Schedule ... Broke Through Hospe's Roof.

Last Saturday it will be remembered that a big wind and rain storm passed over this city-but a little previous to that an inoffensive looking stove pipe did more damage to one man in Omaha than all the street wash-oute and cave-ins have occasioned this Workmen were busy putting up the mammoth steel smoke stack that connects with the furnaces of the Paxton building at Sixteenth and Farnam, and the Merchanis hotel. The boilers are in the rear, just across the alley from Hospe's music store. At the moment when the great pipe was all but plumb the monster hock and chain which held it in place snapped off chort and down she came with such an unearthly noise, as to dresses that Weinberg intended to seel at Workmen were busy putting up the mam she came with such an unearthly noise, as to dresses that Wel cause everybody to desert the postoffice $5.00, go at $1.75.

The workmen escaped with their lives; one poor fellow having a leg so badly lacerated that he may lose it. He was dragged to the very edge of the root, where he managed to hang until assistance came.

The workmen escaped with their lives; of patterns, regular $7.00 and $8.00 goods, for $2.00.

Dotted Swiss, trimmed in lace and ribbona, beautiful creations, that Weinberg intended to sell for $15,00 and $18.00, our price,

The smoke stack itself is over four feet acrose and is moulded of heavy steel, weighing many tons. It fell almost its full length ing many toos it tell amounts art store, and crashed in the building like so much kindling wood. Just imagine the state of affairs in Hospe's store. There was a panic—but fortunately no one was burt.

panic—but fortunately no one was hurt, though the piano and organ room being immediately under the fallen roof, did not get off so easily. Pictures on the wall came down as easily as a broom could sweep cobwebs off a ceiling. The crash was terrific. But it's all over now; the carpenters and plasterers and painters will have the building all in good order by Menday, and all the damaged goods will be brought up from Hospe's leard street factory, where they have received a thorough overhauling.

The contractors who were erecting this

The contractors who were erecting this huge smoke stack have allowed Hospe a most liberal amount as damages, and the goods will go on sale Monday morning. Those who have heretofore thought they could not afford a piano and would not have any unless it was new, will find this their opportunity. Because of the lowness of the opportunity. Because of the lowness of the prices, however, Mr. Hospe declines to honor previous trade contracts or pay any com-
