The pearl is the one gem that comes to us perfect from the hand of nature, and to this its great antiquity as a gem is and brilliance depend on polishing and cutting would naturally be discovered and utilized later. The discovery of the diamond for instance, probably dates within historic times. Though known earlier, it was not generally included among the gem treasures royalty even as late as the seventh century. The modern cutting of diamonds in regular facets was invented as recently as 1456. Indeed, it is quite probable that the pearl was the first gem known and treasured by prehistoric man-since the search must have been the first occupa tion of the earliest of the race, and the shining pearl would thus have been discov ered in river mussels if not in marine oys Certain it is that the old testamen and the ancient written histories allude to pearls, and that remoter evidence is found the tombs and excavated cities of still earlier eras. The Egyptians, Babylonians and Assyrians held the pearl in an esteem verging on reverence. "Wives" are now being discussed by the Oklahoma courts. The law of that territory is very severe on polygamy and Indians or reservations are not exempt from the practice. The Kickapoos have an average of five squaws each and the Cheyennes, Arapa-Kiowas, Apaches, Comanches and Wichitas are all polygamists.

The young duchess of Mariborough has made, it is understood, an extremely agreeable impression in England. It is mentioned there that she is rapidly gaining the affections of her English relatives and connections, and the people about Blenheim are delighted with her. One enthusiast

"Were we asked what was the most striking of the sights we saw at this great palace, with its glad and grand surroundings, we should answer a large painting, a portrait in the first room we entered. canvas was that of the present duchess of Marlborough. The beauteous eyes are almost black, and so expressive. In spite of all the other beauties of Blenheim, they seemed the fairest sight; sweetly they linger in memory, inspire the soul, and are a moving influence for good. Because this young duchess has come as a bride, crossed the blue Atlantic, some think she is a stranger to our land, but this is a mistake. When a tiny child of 3 sbe came to England and has voyaged the ocean so often since that the flying Hollander. with his phantom vessel and his phantom crew, is not more familiar with the perils of the sea. It is pleasant to notice at Blenheim how every one loves her grace Marlborough did not conquer his enemies as she has conquered the hearts of her people.

Another English observer in commenting on the successful dinner parties lately given by the duke and duchess at their London house, says concerning the young lady that she "is quiet, natural and very sweet in disposition. She is not exactly pretty, disposition. She is not exactly pretty, but she has a sweet and charming face, a clear, rather pale complexion, and dark hair, and deep clear blue eyes, which often look quite dark. She is very tall and slight and carries herself erect and gracefully. Her voice is pretty, and altogether her grace is really a great social acquisi-

Miss Ella Hepworth Dixon declares that cigarette smoking is enormously on the in-crease among well-bred women in England.

An authority on mankind has given his lews on the sort of men that make the est husbands. Among the really nice ones he classes the man who is fond of fishing, the lawyer and the all-round journalist. He does not enthuse over the popular doctor as a husband, and a musical genius or a man of etters gives him cold chills and shudders. The author, he says, is so fond of his fine sentences that he is disagreeable when the baby cries, and makes himself generally officus about his food, the noise of the children and any domestic infelicities that may come along. The musician cares for little except his art, and the wife is often secondary to the children of the conduction of the cond ondary to the claims of the prima donna, or the sympathetic creature whose soul is as full of melody as his own.

All in all, the good journalist seems to have the most strong points. He is a bit of a philosopher, is likely to be practical. makes the best of what cannot be helped. and is full of alternatives. The lawyer is good to have in the house. He is likely to be alert, a good judge of human nature, a good talker and quite as fond of listening as of hearing the sound of his own voice. He studies human nature at home as well as abroad, and is altogether a good fellow.

The politician is a diplomat, and while netimes leaves all of his diplomacy outside of his front door, this is not always the case. The bachelor comes in for a lively scoring, especially the one who claims that little walf in New York City will heace-forth be known. She is said to be very beautiful, but the 15 years of her life have been spent in the most abject poverty in the poorest of New York tenements. A rich and highly respected ex-sea captain named John Cross advertised the other morning in a large daily paper as follows:

"American girl, 14 to 15, Protestant, country home, with elderly courie; must be strictly honest, truthful and understand use of needle; fortune at 21 awaits her; will dothe, board and educate; guardian must apply between 9 and 12 today. Captain, 121 Fifth Avenue."

In response hundreds of little girls applied. Elsie was selected and will receive $6,000 when she becomes of age and an immense fortune when the old gentleman and his wife die. Two beautiful daughters of Captain and Mrs. Cross died some time ago and this accounts for their adopting a child. The kitchen of Buckingham Palace is at most inconvenient distance. The dishes have to be carried a quarter of a mile to the queen's private apartments, on the north side of the palace. Charcoal hot closets outside of her majesty's dining room are a necessity for heating the victuals.

An old custom was recently revived by the Nez Perce Indians and their visitors, says the Lewiston (Idsho) Teller. The na-tives of the local tribe are very wealthy people, and there are designing mothers among the aborigines as well as in the dif-ferent classes of civilized society. The young bucks of the Nez Perce tribe are regarded somewhat like the scions of royalty in matrimonial circles. The matters from all visiting tribes were brought to Lapwat to fird husbands. The customs of the tribes which were revived for the occasion were more effective than the white Cupid gen-erally is. The marriageable maidens were by common accord quartered in a selected spot in the valley of the Lapwal. At an appointed hour the young men who wanted wives to share their annuities, their homesteads, and the affections of their hearts, appeared in procession on the hallowed camp ground. The hour was midnight, and the scene was in a grove of trees, made fragrant by the wild flowers, and every heart danced to the music of the rippling waters. The young men marched forth and none but candidates for matrimony joined the march. They were dressed in their brightest colors of customary toggery Original and Saty Capital and Saty Capital State and Saty Capital State and Saty Capital State State and Saty Capital State St and each carried a white willow cane. But the coy maidens came fort from the tents, each to chose a husband There were more men than maidens. The former kept up the march and the music without a sign of the tumult of their hearts. The maidens counter-marched on the line of the same circle, each selecting a husband from the line. The chosen ones bastened to follow their brides, while unfortunate suitors were life to despair.

The gen-tleman with him, not caring for nautical sport, agreed to watch his clothes. As scon as the swimmer was out of earshot an officious policeman appeared upon the scene and took the gentleman, and, as he assumed, the stolen clothes to the depot. When M. returned and could neither find ais friend nor his clothes he sneaked along from tree to tree until he discovered a cab in waiting and the cocher fast asleep. With a desterity that would have been a credit to M. Lecocq himself he dived into the cab and ordered the cocher "home." But they disagreed about the location of home, and a policeman was called upon to the cab and ordered the cocher make M. pay his fare. One of the queerest of the old-time superstitions was the one that is responsible for the notion that pearls and diamonds "breed" as animals do. Rues says: "As or what I know concerning the reputed story that precious stones are divided into sexes, male and female, just as are plants and animals, and that they breed as the latter do, I relate the following, which came under my knowledge: A certain princess of Luxembourg had two diamonds, the colors of which betokened that they were male and female. The princess laughed at the notion until one day she was startled by finding a tiny speck of a diamond in her canket She put the two large diamonds and the little one away together, and they had a whole family in a reasonable course of time." A similar tale is told by Boethius.

It is expected that the Baroness Bodisco of Russia may visit Washington within a few months, as she is coming to America at an early day. Olga Hodisco, the beau-tiful daughter of the baroness, was among the maids of honor to the czarina at the recent coronation, and in a few hours after ward her father, Baron Bodisco, died. Ever-one is familiar with the romantic histor, of Misa Williams of Georgetown, who man years ago, when but a school girl, wa wedded to the Russian minister, Coun Bodisco. The late Baron Bodisco was th son of that marriage, and, like his father fell in love with a Georgetown girl-a Mis Barton. The estate of the late baron wa largely in real estate in this country, bein no doubt inherited from his mother, and is thought that the present Baroness Bodis co's trip to this country wil be to settle u the family matters. Olga Bodisco is re garded as a great beauty, a trait which she came by naturally if she is anything like her grandmother, the lovely Miss Williams

It is curious to think what a short time it is since the emeprors of Russia treater their womankind in the same way as they are now treated in Turkey. It is true that in those days the czar chose his wife from among his subjects, and she was never considered his equal. On a certain day the nobles brought their young daughters to be looked at, and she who took the poten-tate's fancy was forthwith chosen. The princesses were kept with the same strictness as eastern princesses, and marriage only changed their place of residence, but gave them no more freedom. They were allowed occasionally to be present when guests were received, to whom they would hand a cup of wine, and then retire to their apartments, there being a suite of rooms at the north side of the palace re served especially for them. The first exar-ing who emancipated herself from this state of slavery, and so instituted a new and hap-pier era for Russian women, was the beautiful Nathalic Naryschki, the second wife of Alexis Michaelovitch, and the mother of Peter the Great, and her first triumph was when she obtained her husband's consent to drive with him in an open carriage to the monastery of Troitsky, a proceeding which at that time occasioned a great scandal. Naturally, when the Russian princes began to intermarry with other European royal families, they were obliged to treat their wives differently, but it was a long time before the court of Russia became as civil-ized as the rest of Europe.

One of the features of the method of work of the National Council of Jewish Women is most commendable, and if it could be carried out on a large scale the could be carried out on a large scale the charity problem would be practically set-tled. This is the pledge taken by familica to keep each one other family from poverty. Eimple giving to satisfy material needs is not all that is imposed in the pledge, sympathy, interest, plans for permanent betterment of the proteges' condition being also included. The pledge taken, there is no further red tape about the matter except te report of work accomplished. This sim plicity is a good augury of success. The Necdlework Guild is a shining example of what can be accomplished by individual effort if that be sufficiently widespread. Hundreds of thousands of garments are made and bestowed each year by this organization without red tape, salaries, or

There was some amusing anecdotal gosulp the other night at Mrs. Fitzrey Stephenson's scirce musicale anent the life and adven-tures of eminent German composers. It is singular that their logic was always of a very similar character. As a sample of it, a story was told of how Beethoven dis-missed bis cook, and, when asked by a friend for the reason, he said: "Well, she told a lie. It is true it was in my interest, but then whoever tells a lie is not pure, and a cook who is not pure cannot make a pure soup." Poor old Beet!
