SWIFTWATER BILL'S REVENGE How He Punished His Louthsome

Al-Ki, says the San Francisco Chronicle, Piel sat in the San Francisco shoe store on of a certain country.

The Japanese government has contracted footgear, and told the story so nicely that > "Have you ever heard the true story of how 'Swiftwater Bill' bought up all the eggs in Dawson?" asked Piel. "I will tell you about it. Swiftwater had been sweet on a girl at Dawson, one of the prettiest in town. But she shook him for another fellow, and Swiftwater went on the warpath. One night he sat in a restaurant, and, to his dismay, his sweetheart came in with her new fellow and sat down at another table. Swiftwater listened and heard the young woman order 'eggs.' Then Swiftwater shot for the kitchen like a bullet out of a gun. " How many eggs have you got?' he said

"'I'll take 'em all; every one.'
"'But somebody has just ordered eggs.'
"'Go and tell 'em you ain't got any.'
"'And thus the deal was closed by which Swiftwater got every egg in the house.

"Another time his particular enemy came him order duck. Swiftwater shot for the
