Much comment and criticism on the apointments made by Mayor Jennings Monday evening is heard, but it all comes from democratic sources. People who have no other interest than simple citizenship are inclined to look with much favor upon a number of the new mayor's appointments. Mr. Bixby has shown no undue haste to take all of the responsibilities of the office of chief of police and will not assume charge or several days. In the meantime he is spending all of his time going over the work with the old members of the force. It is his intention to keep a number of the old members of the force for a month or more. No announcements have been made of the disposition of the new torce, but it is said that Denny will be made patrol driver and Bergman night captain. Find the Bonds Defective. City Treasurer Reed and the members of the new city council who voted to have the bond of the newly elected treasurer referred to a special committee for investigation are now glad that such action was taken. Mr. Reed is required to give a bond of $100,000 and he presented to the council two bonds in two different surety companies for $50,000 each. When the bonds were examined yesterday they were discovered to contain clause that practically made them worthless for the purpose desired. They merely guaranteed the honesty of the city treasurer, but specifically stated that the companies would not be liable to the city for any losses that might occur through failure of any of the anks in which the city's funds were deposited by the treasurer. As this was a very necessary portion of the guaranty, both ness, when it adjourned sine die, and Mr. Casper ceased to be a member of the board, where he has served so long and efficiently without pay. The new board organized and elected N. C. Philips as its clerk. His salary was fixed at $50 a year. None of the park policemen or other officers of the board were elected, but it was decided to meet again next Tuesday for this purpose.

The new board decided to make a tour of inspection of the parks and fixed Thursday building. The intention is to carefully inthe improvements most urgently required. In this respect the policy of the old board will be observed, and the chief expenditures will be made in Bayliss park, which will be-come very popular with exposition visitors this summer.

DES MOINES, April 5 .- (Special.)-The death of William Wright at his home in West Liberty, Ia., a few days ago attracted but little attention in Iowa, yet he was one of the famous literary men of the west in his palmy days, and at one time was better known than any other writer on the Pacific coast. Mr. Wright was a native of Ohio, but came to Iowa with his father in 1849 and located a homestead here. He caught the gold fever in the early days of the rush to California and went with the the Comstock pioneers at Virginia City, Nevada, arriving there in 1859. He mined in Gold Canyon and during his sojourn there he furnished mining and other items for Comstock papers. About 1860 he began his journalistic career as a local writer on the Territorial Enterprise, when that paper was owned by the late D. E. McCarthy and J. T. Goodman, and held that position continuously for nearly thirty years. When the pa-per passed into the hands of the Enterprise Publishing company, of which the late William Sharon, H. M. Yerrington, A. J. Rulston and others were directors, he was re-

Wright commenced writing over the pen name of "Dan de Quille," by which name he was known among newspaper men all over the west. During his long service in Virginia City he was associated at various times with writers who subsequently at-tained celebrity, among whom were Mark Twain, P. M. Daggett and C. C. Goodwin. In 1876 he resigned his position for a few months and went to the home of his former associate, Mark Twain, where he revised the material for a volume issued in that year entitled "Big Bonanza," the funds for which were furnished by J. W. Mackay. The book proved a poor investment, as the contents related exclusively to men prom-inent in the history of the Ne-vada, Comstock lode and the state mining in dustry, and was therefore devoid of genera interest. From 1876 until 1888 Mr. wus employed as a local writer on the Virginia City Enterprise, and about the latter date entered the field of romance, writing short stories for popular magazines and syn-dicate letters for the Salt Lake Tribune and other publications. About six months ago he became too feeble to continue literary work and left for his daughter's home in Iowa where his busy life ended.

quaint words made clear the delicious irony of the whoie screed. He wrote winsome stories; he was closely akin to all natural objects, and the sunlight and the mountain pictures were woven unconsciously into his work; he had a droil side, and he delighted to interpret and explain in grotesque imagery the workings of the minds of the Plute chief or the Chinese mandarin. He was a learned historian; he was a gifted geologist, and with as much enthuism as ever Hugh Miller experienced, he pursued his investigations and wrote his "Teetimony of the Rocks." He knew the Comstock lode, with all its peculiarities and habits—it was his study for a generation—ne wrote locals in which all local men were mentioned and described, but no one was ever offended, for the kindheartedness of the man rounded off what would have been sharp edges from any other pen, and so he worked and worked for a full generation, and then, without plaint, with his old sunny nature triumphant to the last, he fell asleep. Men by the thousands will hear of his death with the same feeling that they would have to hear of a brother's death, for he never had an enemy, and thoughful men have realized that in its unpretentiousness his was one of the most useful lives that ever wore itself out for the west. When Mr. Goodman owned the Enterprise R. M. Daggett was associate editor and Mark Twain, and was of vast service to him, for in those days Mark was unseasoned in newspaper work and more power than Twain, and was of vast service to him, for he has continued to grow since, but if the news ever reaches him of Wright's death, we think his tribute to his sterling worth will be good to read. Goodman and Daggett ought to write of him as he was in those early, stormy days, when, while there was friction and excitement on all sides Wright moved unruffled and untouched among it all. We had rather think of him as the old friend fnat was always true, always quaint, always genial; the one who did not know his own power; who was at home when talking with the great Silli > only consideration which affects the United States is their probable chance of success. They will take no heed of anything abroad. "Europeans always fancy that the intervention of Emperor William would have some effect, and that a dispatch from him to the president of the United States would somehow modify Mr. McKkeley's decision. But this is a mistake. The Americans would like to have a dispatch from Emperor William to have the pleasure of refusing what he asks, and thus marking the profound dis dain they profess for the powers of Europe. "How could Europe do anything against the United States? For forty-five years the principle of filibustering has been in vogue throughout Europe, and the whole policy of Europe is based on it. By what right should Europe reproach the United States for doing what it itself has been doing for nearly hal

"I repeat that not on Europe should we count, but on ourselves, on God, and on our right. There is still in Spain plenty of good gold and good blood, and we shall spare neither. We shall send all the soldiers we can to America. If the Americans attempt it they will not vanguish the 250,000 men which is the number we shall shortly have in Cuba.

"We shall deal American trade more rapid and telling blows than America will ever deal us, for if we cannot capture vessels we cans will soon seize other European pos essions.
"I am told that the pope is intervening

The pope remembers the ironical triumph which Prince Bismarck secured for him over the Caroline islands, but this time he will find the Americans madder with pride and scorn of others than all the nations of Europe. They will not heed him more than others, and nothing will make them hesitate but the necessity of paying for pre-meditated conquest by mountains of ruins and torrents of blood."

DEMANDED WITHDRAWAL OF FLEET

Administration Makes a Flat Refusal to Proposition. WASHINGTON, April 5.-The statement was made today by a public man in close touch with the administration that the effort to secure a settlement of the war between Spain and the insurgents through at armistice had come to a definite conclusion and that the failure was due to the refusal of the government of the United States to remove its fleet from Key West. According to this statement Spain made removal a condition precedent to its offering an armistice, with the end in view of granting the sition was brought to the attention of the administration it was met with refusal though not until after it had been seriously considered. The congressional opponents of a war policy admit that the outlook fo peace has grown almost hopeless since thi

Not Bound by Declaration of Paris LONDON, April 5 .- The attorney general Sir Richard Webster, Q. C., replying in the House of Commons today to the question asked yesterday in the house by the rear admiral, Lord Charles Beresford, member for York, whether the United States, not being a signatory of the declaration of Paris, would, in the event of war with Spain, be bound by its provisions, said the rights of neither the United States nor Spain, as belligeredts were affected by the declara-tion of Paris. He added that the right of

Mr. Thomas Gibson Bowles, conservative was asked whether either Spain or the United States had done anything to impair their common law international rights. The attorney general replied, "Yes. There are a number of expressions of opinion upon the part of the United States which I think must seriously impair their rights. In regard to Spain I am not aware of anything of the presperous fruit raiser on the coast. He had engaged a berth in the Pullman, and he asked the conducter where it was.

"Right here, sir," said the conductor as he pointed out the section.

"Dou you sleep in it that way, all curied up on a seat?" he asked, in amazement.

"No, it will be made up when you are ready to retire."

The man did not cracily know what "man's ready to retire."

The man did not exactly know what "made up" meant, but he asked no more questions. He sat in the drawing room and smoked, and finally he said to the conductor:

"Well, guess I'll turn in."

"All right, sir; your berth is made up."

The man walked into the main part of the car. Then he went back to the drawing room.

"They all look alike," he said; "you will have to show me mine."

The conductor showed him to his berth and left him. The man looked at it; then he went back to the rear platform of the car and closed the door. In a few minutes he stuck his head in the car and shouted:
"Look out; I'm coming," and he made a rum for his ber'th with his clothes, or most of them under him arm. In the morning he stuck his head out between the curtains and called the conductor.
"How in thunder am I going to get out on the platform to dress with all these people looking?"

The conductor explained to him that he would have to dress in the berth. He did so, but it took him two hours,
