Reconstructed Fisher Family on Its Own Diamond Once More.

NEW FACES TO BE SEEN IN THE FIELD

Omaha Represented by What Looks Like a Sure Enough Ball Team-Reasons for Some of the . Changes.

Fans in the city will feel perfectly satisfied that we broke even with Columbus even if we have lost the last two games. That is good enough for a tailender against one of the leaders. But it is dollars to doughnuts that we will not be tailenders by any means in a month from now. The Babies are being transformed gradually into winning aggregation. Several more additions have been made-Germany Smith and Twirler Wadsworth-and it looks very likely that Henry Clarke will be added too. The management will be getting a popular man in the latter. With these accretions the infield will be changed about a bit. Roat, whose throwing from short has not been of the best at all times, will in all probability be moved to second and at this shorter throwing distance he ought to do better than he has. It looks as if Holly would be employed as a utility man and should be a good one at that because he has demonstrated that he can play about anything in both the out and infield and at a pinch can be used at the McCauley catcher Twineham Fisher or Daub ...pitcher Thomas Other Western league games today are: Milwaukee at Minneapolis, Indianapolis at St. Paul. Columbus at Kansas City.

One inning did the work in Wednesday's game. Daub's wildness and several bad fumbles were a combination sufficient to net the Senators enough scores to win any game. Holly made two of the miscues, which brings the total number of errors he has made on the trip abroad to three.

Hagerman's release was the result of the lack of form he has shown on the trip east. While here he did nicely at times, but in only one game away did he demonstrate much pitching ability. That was in the game with Indianapolis, when only six hits were made off of him. In Milwaukee, however, he was touched up eleven times for a total of seventeen bases; in Detroit he was found seventeen times for a total of twenty-one bases and in Columbus fifteen hits were made off of him for a total of eighteen bags. He has been averaging about an error a game during the last two weeks. His batting was his redeeming feature, as he has averaged about a hit a

The team will be back in the city today and will open a series with Detroit. They will doubtless receive a good reception, as the fan seem to be of the opinion that the aggregation is greatly strengthened and will play good ball. The opening day will be ladies' day.

The struggle between the two leaders has resulted to the advantage of the Cincinnati farm, for yesterday the Hoosiers made it three out of four by whitewashing the Saints in what was a pretty even, though a lopsided contest. This leaves Indianapolis with a substantial lead, but the Saints managed to keep shead of everybody else, although by no very big margin. The Blues made it an easy three out of four with Detroit, while the Brewers were unable to do better than break even with the Millers.

The home run made by Pickering Wednesday was the second garnered by an Infant this year. The other was slammed out by Burnett in this city.

John Fifield, who was Detroit's winning pitcher two years ago, has not made much of a hit in the big league and the story is now going the rounds that he will be re turned to the Wolverines.

The Nebraskan, Barnes, is demonstrating his versatility in Milwaukee. In the early part of the season he held down a position in the infield in good shape. Recently be was tried in the outfield and he proved to be of great value on account of his judgment the best of them in the box, too.

The Columbus hitters, says the Columbus Dispatch, feel very sore over their failure Daub and Fisher in the games and before the seaover they may be counted upon to take revenge by making both twirlers take to the woods. Oh, I don't know.

Columbus Dispatch: "If Manager Fisher gets his just deserts the fans of Omaha will have to give a reception in his honor on his return to that city. It was his single which laid the foundation for winning the morning game and in the afternoon he pitched one of the best games which has been seen on the local field this year. For nine long innings he served up a choice selection of benders and allowed the Senatorial swatters to secure but six safe drives during that time. In addition he was as steady as a clock and did not give a single base on balls during the afternoon. Of course he was assisted by gilt-edged support, as the men behind him were full of ginger as a result of their morning victory and played like a lot of colts and could not see anything too hard for them to get.'

Wiley Davis, the squirrel hunter, was recently released by the Indianapolis club and has been signed by Manager Loftus.

It is reported that Schmelz has released Rice, but this seems hardly possible, as the little man has been playing a brilliant game

HOW A WAR IS POUGHT.

The Changes in the Mode of Warfard Illustrated by Pictures.

If you wish to properly understand the war news, if you wish to have a definite knowledge of naval affairs and the events that are occurring in the East and West Indies you can secure no better, no more reliable source of information than the official photographs of the United States navy, just issued by the Omaha Bee. The price is only 25 cents, and more valuable and timely information was never offered for the money. It is on sale at The Omaha Bee counting-rooms, or will be sent to any

Bee counting-rooms, or will be sent to any address on receipt of price.

The book consists of nearly 200 pages of views made by E. H. Hart, naval photographer, and the list of subjects embraces everything of interest pertaining to our navy, of which every American is justly proud. First within the covers of this interesting work comes a man stytem times and the covers of the co esting work comes a map sixteen times as large as the book itself, showing on one side the Spanish possessions, and all ad-jacent territory, while on the other side the East Indian possessions are similarly treated. Steamship lines, with the dis-tances intervening between different points. are shown, and a close study of these maps will give one a thorough understanding of this territory, in regard to which the interest of the American public is now at fever heat. Then follow more than 200 rare pictures of the navy, its officers and equipment. The views are all authentic, and are the latest official photographs of our torpede boats, torpede boat destroyers, cruisers, battle-ships, gunboats, monitors, rams, dynamite cruisers, dispatch vessels, and other war cruisers, dispatch vessers, and other war-craft, the whole embodying an authentic portrayal of the American navy as it exists today. A complete description of the con-struction, displacement, size, speed, bat-teries, armor, crew and cost of each boat will enable the reader to form an accurate estimate of our fighting strength. Included with these are photographs of the leading with these are photographs of the leading Spanish men-of-war, also fully described. By far the most interesting portions of the book are views of the Maine, taken before the disaster in Havana harbor, showing the life and discipline aboard a battleship, together with portraits of the officers and crew, supplemented by photographs taken after the explosion, depicting the divers at work, and other incidents in connection with this sad and memorable event.

The real explanation, But the chief saw that his position was in as I heard it from the old chief, Wounded secure and surrendered. There has never the staff of the governor of South Dakota I was sent to Pine Ridge in 1890 to represent him at the scene of trouble. The United States cavalry, under General Brooke, had just arrived at the agency and I asked his permission to go among the Indians and talk to them. I went to the council of the Indian chiefs and asked Wounded Knee why the Indians were dancing.

Dancing for Christ.

"He told me that some time before an Indian named Porcupine had come down from British Columbia and had said, that in the far north a beautiful and fair spoken man, with blue eyes and a golden beard had one day met him in the forest and said: 'I am the Christ whom the white people crucified, I am now come again, but this time only my friends "shall know me, for fear again the torture. And that I may not mistake those who love me I will abide with the people who have certain signs and a dance.' Porcupine had learned the dance and the signs and 'had brought them to Wounded Knee. The old chief told me in the most simple manner possible that he believed his people should dance for fear the Christ might come that way and pass them by. If they found the dance was no a good thing they would quit. The intention of the Indians you see was perfectly innocent. Had the troops not been called in they would have danged a few months and when no Christ appeared the craze would have died a natural sleath.

"Between 1879 and 1886; while agent on the Pine Ridge reservation, there were many crises when a call for troops would have precipitated an outbreak, but I found diplomacy always effective in averting trouble. I allowed the Indians to govern themselves and whenever there was danger I called a council and told the chiefs that under existing conditions it would scon be necessary to call on the White Father for soldiers and that it lay in themselves Lipke whether such a step should be taken or not than have war, made many sacrifices. Trouble with Red Cloud. "In the early days, in order to facilitate matters, the government dealt with the tribes through a head chief. Red Cloud was the recognized chief of the Sloux and with him were made all treaties and agreements. It became later the policy to attempt to break up the old tribal system and individualize the Indians. Red Cloud realized that this meant the death of his power and he fought me bitterly from the first. Finally, n 1882, he telegraphed to Washington that was attempting to rouse feeling against him as head chief and asked that I be removed. The department sent to me for an explanation and on being informed of the rouble sent an order that Red Cloud be arrested. That was easier said than done. "I called a council of the chiefs, told them of the order I had received and asked what should be done. They said they would send for Red Cloud. A messenger was dispatched, but the oid fellow refused to come. Another messenger was sent and a second time Red Cloud refused. Things began to look serious. The council of chiefs sent a third message, stating this time that Red Cloud would either come voluntarily to the council or he would be brought by force. They assured me of their support. I had about fifty Indian police who were the United States uniform and carried government arms. They had always stood by me before and in anticipation of trouble I had gathered them together from the different tribes. Before calling the council I had lined them up and told them they were about to be called on to arrest their head chief. 'If any one feels that he will not fight for the government,' I said, 'let him step from the ranks. There was a moment's quiet and then one named Six Brothers stepped forward and shaking me by the hand said: 'Red Cloud is my kinsman. I cannot fight against my own blood.' He then went into the guard house, removed his uniform and resumed his blanket. The others stood firm, and I sta-

"Off the council chamber was my office, and I retired there with my interpreter until Red Cloud arrived. He strode into the council hall with his braves at his heels. As an officer of been a doubt in my mind that Red Cloud came to that council intending to kill me, but he realized the force of my remark that he might get rid of me, but could never do away with the agent.

"Another crisis came in 1883, when I stopped the sun dance. It had been the custom for years at the full moon in June to collect the people of all the villages for the sun dance. It was intended as a test of the endurance of young Indians who aspired to be warriors. A pole twenty-five or thirty feet in height was erected and from the top depended long strings, like the streamers of May pole. The hereditary chief of the tribes was Young-Man-Afraidof-His-Horses, and he had always been on my side, because I supported him against the usurping war chief, Red Cloud. The Man-Afraid faction agreed to stand by me in suppressing the dance, and it was owing their aid that I was able to carry out my

> "When Cleveland was elected president in 1884, I was called to Washington to answer charges preferred against me by Red Cloud. It was only a pretext to get rid of a republican agent, and I knew it would result in but one way. Red Cloud accused me of undermining his authority as head chief. I had taken Young-Man-Afraid-of-His-Horses to Washington with me, and when we appeared before Secretary Lamont the chief was asked if I had ever taken any steps to make him a chief. The Indian did not understand the question at first, but on its being repeated drew himself up proudly and chief. I was born a chief.' "Red Cloud was there at the time, dressed in a handsome frock coat and wearing a high silk hat. The contrast between him and the real chief, who was dressed in native costume, was very striking. In 1890, when I went to Pine Ridge, Red Cloud was the first one to greet me as I stepped from the stage. " 'Once I did not understand you, father, and I hated you.
