

HOUSE

The events of the last week have abundantly demonstrated the popularity of the stock company at the Creighton, which has drawn packed houses nightly, in marked contrast to the equally desiring entertainment afforded by Mr. Tim Murphy at Boyd's, which has been attracting only the most meager of audiences.

It is not believed, however, that the affairs have a show of color to the assertion sometimes heard that the stock idea, as put into operation in Omaha, is ruining the business of so-called "legitimate" theatrical attractions here, and confirming the alleged evil reputation of this as a "show town."

Nothing in the foregoing should be construed derogatory to the meritorious Mr. Murphy, whose efforts to please have met with a most discouraging response during the week just passed. He deserves success, and is bound to achieve it, because he is an intelligent and conscientious actor, and one of the best recent character comedians at present on the American stage.

The death, last week, of Thomas W. Keene, removes from the stage almost the last exemplar of the old school of heavy tragedy. While he lived, the Omaha public was justly proud of the name his father gave him, as every man should be; but no one not initiated would expect the possessor of that name to attain genuine artistic eminence by a performance of the star part in a dramatization of "Les Fettes Bleues."

The Creighton theater this week will offer an elaborate revival of "Jim, the Penman," commencing with two performances today. This play has not been seen in Omaha for a number of years and an opportunity will be now afforded to compare the present excellent company with the remarkable cast which formerly presented it.

difficult to say or tell where one's attention should be directed. The Marine band was never in better trim and absolutely seems to hypnotize the crowd. Director of Music Kimball has wisely decided that during these intensely hot days, the band shall not play in its artistic home on the bluff tract, but shall be comfortably located and play in front of the government building, which is comfortable for both players and the audience alike.

Both Director Kimball and Chorus Director Kelley are surely earning their living by the "sweat of their brow," for the hundred-and-one little aggravations constantly coming up, not settlement are causing the trying things these first days of the exposition.

A visitor to the exposition that has created considerable enthusiasm among those who have heard her is Zelia Page Lincoln. She comes as the musical representative from the Institute of Music, which is located at Jefferson City, Mo., and it certainly has a very interesting exhibit in the Liberal Arts. Professor Dammel, teacher of science in this school, is in charge of this exhibit, and at his invitation Miss Lincoln gave two or three recitals during the week.
