SEES THE UNPLEASANT SIDE OF CAMP LIFE

Everything Soaked and Supper Hard to Get—Raw Onions, No Beer and Barefoot Recruits the Features at Fort Omaha.

The Third regiment at Fort Omaha had a foretaste yesterday of what camp life holds in store for them. Many of the roofs on the old barracks leaked like sieves and the ground was turned into a lake or a white during the afternoon. All the wood got wet and the cook tents were so flooded that it took the coxing of a squad of men and the patience of Job to prepare the evening repast.

SHERIFF TAKES BALL PARK

Attaches the Grounds and Buildings at the Suit of the Man Who Erected Them.

People who are desirous of obtaining passes to the grounds of the Omaha Baseball club should apply to Sheriff McDonald, as at this time he is the dispenser of all privileges.

Restraints Wears on Them.

The restrictions of camp life are something new to most of the recruits and many devices are planned for escaping from the grounds. Guards patrol the limits and are so close together that it is a hard matter to occasion a rush back without being noticed. On several occasions a rush back was made, but each was charged on the guard and escaped. Once out, the trouble has only begun, as the matter of getting in is more difficult and at night the watch is particularly strict.

FEDERAL BUILDING NOTES.

The custom house has received a carload of wood stoves, which was shipped from Bremen and billed to M. H. Wilkins & Co., who have an exhibit in the building.

Most of the plastering in the upper stories of the new federal building has been completed and the force of men working on the building has been reduced to thirty. The work that remains undone is the sort that requires skilled workmen and will progress slowly.

The sale of the opposition stamps continues very heavy. Orders from other cities are numerous, many letters stating that outside offices do not have a supply on hand. One order for $500 worth of stamps was sent to Chicago yesterday, the man who ordered them writing that the Chicago office sent only a limited supply of the stamp.
