UNLUCKY BALDWIN NOW.

Speculation and Horse Racing Dissipate a Fortune. There was a day in the roaring '70s that Mr. Baldwin, commonly known as "Lucky" Balwin, was worth his twenty millions, says the San Francisco Examiner. That was when the Comstock boomed and thundered. Today careless people say he cannot pay his debts if his property were sold. Of course, that is nonsense, but when a man is carry-ing a mortgage of $1,250,000 and incidentals. the figures look too big for ordinary comprehension, and when the butcher and the baker and the candlestick maker, or their equivalents in the way of small tradespeople, come looking for money and find it scarce, then the greedy gossip is out for blood. Baldwin added another little plaster of $28,000 to the $1,250,000 that he owes the Hibernia bank the other day, and he was made within the past year defendant in a shoal of little suits on small accounts. But the Hibernia knows what it is about and stands between the old man and trouble. Mr. Baldwin is 70 years of age. In his time he has played many parts, canal boatman, groceryman, hotel keeper, brickmaker, liveryman, theatrical manager, racing man, mining operator, farmer, and always a speculator. He fought Indians on the plains in 1855, when he was bringing an emigrant *11:05 am *4:20 pm train across, and the story of his headlong • 4:20 pm flight in a wagon with a young woman from a band of whooping hostiles has been often told.
