Fiction as Usual Takes the Lead in Matter of Quantity.

SOMETHING FOR THE ADMIRERS OF ART

University of Iowa Publishes a Valuable Book of Explorations in the Far North—What Publishers Have in Mind for Next Year.

The American Art Annual, which was announced as in course of preparation a short time ago, is at hand. Florence N. Levy is the editor. It is planned to meet the demand for a full, authentic and carefully compiled record of the progress of art and of the more important exhibitions, directly connected with art in America. It contains a complete record of painters, their works for 1908, the reports of art museums, art schools, galleries, societies and foreign exhibitions. It contains upward of ninety-three half-tone reproductions of features of the year, portraits, etc. Other features of interest in the Annual are directories of artist-artisans and art dealers, together with a list of art books and magazines of the year. It is an attractive book in appearance as well as in contents and one who is at all interested in art can find to appreciate it. The Macmillan company, New York.

"The American Colonial Handbook," by T. Campbell-Copeland, is a little book that is a model of compactness. Mr. Campbell-Copeland, who is favorably known as an editor, writer and compiler in connection with special works on the standard dictionary, Appleton's Annual, Harper's Weekly and other publications, also as a federal statistician, has succeeded in placing within the limits of 190 pages a vast amount of desirable information, interestingly presented, about Cuba, Porto Rico, the Philippines, Hawaii and Guam. Under thirty-three or more general headings is given a practically complete statement, systematically and logically arranged, of the important facts concerning the several islands and archipelagos and their resources. It is divided into five parts—one for each new possession—and these five parts are again divided, on an original plan, so that, in their proper order, appear pertinent facts and figures regarding the history, geography, population, agriculture, vegetable and mineral products, animals, financial condition, commerce, shipping, inland transportation, exports, imports and every other topic of value to citizens who are to get the intelligent view of the situation. Funk & Wagnalls Company, New York. Flexibible cloth, 50c.

The University of Iowa at Iowa City has published an illustrated volume of 236 pages entitled "Explorations in the Far North," by Frank Russell. The work is one of great interest and value and speaks well for the enterprise of the University of Iowa. Paper covers, $1.

Works of Fiction.

"The Span of Life," by William McLenahan and J. M. Morrill is at hand. A very interesting point in the history of this romance of the French and Indian war is that it is written in collaboration by a man and a woman and yet it is quite impossible to distinguish the work of Miss McLenahan from that of the author, "John." No period of new world history is so dramatic, so suggestive, for the writers of historical romance as the period of which "The Span of Life" treats. It is the story of the fortunes and misfortunes of the Chevalier Maxwell, an adherent of the ill-starred Prince Charles. Before the rebellion Maxwell had married a tradesman's daughter, but the marriage had been kept a close secret because of the disgrace which would have been cast on his lot with Prince Charles he had left his young wife at home and when her child was born and the mother had no evidence to show that she had been married, she believed that she was with child and took lodgings and supported herself and child by sewing. After the disastrous battle of Culloden the hero is forced to live in hiding in the forests of the mountains, but as the agents of the House of Hanover learn of his place of concealment, his friends conduct him to the home of his little seamstress in Wyck street—who is his wife. She believes, however, that he has willfully deserted her, under no circumstances will she consent to a reconciliation. As for the chevalier, he loses hope of winning again her favor and when he is offered a commission in the French army he accepts it gladly. He is sent at once to Canada to the garrison at Louisbourg. Before leaving London, however, his cousin, knowing nothing of his marriage, has fallen in love with him, and when his letters from the new world cease to come she prepares to follow him. By some freak of fortune she secures as her maid the chevalier's wife—the little seamstress of Wyck street—and they come to Canada together. The rest of the story makes one of the most exciting narratives that modern romantic fiction affords. The wanderings of the two women through the wilds of Canada, the scenes attending the fall of Quebec, all lead up to a denouement that must be known to be appreciated. Harper & Bros., New York.

"The Procession of Life," a novel by Horace Anselme Vachell, forms No. 259 of Appleton's Town and Country Library. The author has already published several books that have met with considerable favor. It will doubtless be something of a surprise to many of his readers to know that he is an Englishman, who has in a number of years made his home in America. Mr. Vachell was educated at the English Military school of Sandhurst and served some years in the English army. Attracted by stories of American life, he resigned and, coming to this country, settled in California. His earlier novels were published in England. D. Appleton & Co., New York. Cloth, 81c.

The latest work by George W. Cable is entitled "Strong Hearts." In these stories Mr. Cable returns to the field which gave him his best fame and his readers their greatest pleasure—New Orleans and its tangled past. "The Entomologist" has for its heroine one of those women who are especially Cable's creation—one who belongs with the heroines of "The Grandissimes" and "Madame Delphine." These stories are all the charm of "Old Creole Days" while showing Mr. Cable's strength in a completely new direction. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. Cloth, 81c.

"A Tent of Grass" is a new novel by Aelina C. Kent. It is a very quiet out of the common course and distinctly above the ordinary novel in power and interest. The scene is laid in Germany and the time is about the middle of this century. The motif of the story is the deep gulf of racial distinctions, the impassable gulf between the Christian and the Jew. The heroine is a beautiful Jewess, rescued when a child from a mob of children and attaining a noble womanhood under the fostering care of the pastor of the German village and his wife. She is loved by Christian and Jew and the struggle in her mind between the commanding force of her religious tradition and the intense force of her affection is depicted with perfect understanding and remarkable power. Without telling more of the story, it is safe to say that few novels possess elements of stronger interest, few are written with a keener sense of the tragic possibilities involved and few leave the reader more impressed with "all that human hearts endure." Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston. Cloth, 81c.

"The Conjure Woman" is a new volume by Charles W. Chesnut. Mr. Chesnut who is perfectly acquainted with negro superstitions and dialect, here groups several stories of peculiar interest. He has caught the indescribable Ethiopian, mystic quality of the negro mind and embodied it in stories which are weird and strikingly dramatic. The story-teller is Uncle Julius, who has much of the genius of Uncle Remus. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston. Cloth, 81c.

"That Duel at the Chateau Marseilles" is an attractive little book by Walter Feltzer. Two rivals for the hand of a fair German beauty, who looked with equal favor upon both, agree to decide which one of them shall win by fighting a duel, not with swords or pistols, but with a game of chess. The story deals with the circumstances which lead up to this arrangement, the complications in which it becomes involved and the startling denouement with which the contest concludes. The book is tastefully printed on deckle-edge paper, illustrated with three full-page half-tones and bound in cloth, with cover decorations by the author. Funk & Wagnalls company, New York. Price, 75c.

Other Than Fiction. Last year much interest was manifested in the alleged discovery by Prof. Schenck of Vienna, Austria, of the law governing the transmission of the dominant allele. It is now shown that this discovery was practically anticipated by an American, Dr. Samuel H. Terry, who died in New York in 1894, and who, in 1888, had published a volume on the subject. This volume is now being reissued by the Terry, J. S. Oyster Publishing Company, New York. Cloth, 81c.

"How to Know the Ferns" is a guide to the names, habits and uses of our common ferns. It is written by the author of "How to Know the Wild Flowers." At first glance the ferns furnish but a barren field from which to pluck rarities. They are so common. They lack the colors and perfume that entice the eye and nose to their charms. But yet upon closer view it will be found that they have an enticement and an interest both unique and characteristic. It was not until 1848 that the development of the fern was first satisfactorily explained. There is, therefore, a comparative freshness of the subject that geology, astronomy and some other branches of science do not possess. The inspiration that entered into and made the "How to Know the Wild Flowers" so deservedly popular has not been lost in "How to Know the Ferns," and if the one who makes two blades of grass to grow where only one formerly grew is worthy of praise, surely the author of a book like this, that adds to the enjoyment and benefit possibilities of life, is worthy of being regarded as a benefactor. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. Cloth, 81c.

"Under Three Flags" is the quaint title chosen by Rev. G. W. Pepper for a story of his eventful life. Dr. Pepper is an Irishman by birth, an American citizen from choice. As a boy he witnessed the horrors of the famine years, 1847-8, and his young mind was so impressed with the injustice, cruelty and inhumanity of alien government in his native land that his devotion to the cause of Irish liberty has not wavered a single day. Dr. Pepper came to the United States in 1854, settled in Ohio and entered the military. When the civil war broke out he raised a company and went to the front as its captain. After the war he returned to the Ohio circuit. In 1890 he was appointed United States consul at Milan, where he remained several years. The story of his eventful career is told in this volume with delightful simplicity. The sketches of war experiences, of foreign lands and peoples, of foreign and American notables and recollections and anecdotes are highly entertaining. There is not a dull page in the whole book. It is more readable and absorbing than a fiction classic. Published by the Author, Cleveland, O. Price 42c.

Literary Notes. "The Philippine Islands and Round About," by Major G. J. Younghouse, author of "Relief of Chitral" and "South Africa of Today," is on the press for immediate publication by the Macmillan company. Read in connection with Prof. Worcester's "Philippine Islands and Their People," this book by an Englishman, who is a sane and keen observer, affords an interesting difference in points of view.

Bird-Love, the Macmillan company, for April contains a letter from Governor Brown, well setting the importance of protecting our birds, which shows the writer to be a genuine bird-lover and thoroughly conversant with his subject.

The Macmillan company has just published "The Student's Life of Paul," by George Holley Gilbert, Ph. D., D.D., professor of New Testament in the University of Chicago Theological Seminary. Author of "The Student's Life of Jesus."

"In Tune With the Infinite," by Ralph Waldo Emerson, contains a new edition of thirty thousand. It has been published a little over a year and the Crowells feel, judging from the steadily increasing demand for it, that it will have eventually a very large and permanent sale.

"The Making of Hawaii" is the title of a book by William Fremont Blackman, professor of Hawaiian History in the University of Hawaii, which will be published immediately by the Macmillan company. Hardly a problem in the compact community of Hawaii has been absent in the compact community of Hawaii. The whole story of Samoa, which is now so much talked about among our diplomats, and the difficulties between the German and the American and British representatives there, may be found in "Hester Stanley at St. Mark's" by Mrs. Spofford, a book recently brought out in a new edition by Little, Brown & Co.

Dodd, Mead & Co. promise for the near future a new edition of their "Ballads of the Sea," which will be particularly handsomely printed and bound. These "Ballads of the Sea" were collected and published ten or twelve years ago by a man who has since come out of obscurity. The book has long been out of print.

The recent announcement by the Macmillan company that they are to be translated with Mr. Hamlin Garland to bring out a revised edition of "The Rose of Dutchess County," the "Maine Yankee" and "The Trail of the Gold Seekers," perhaps may be taken as an indication that he is to be reckoned with as a permanent force in literature.

The Doubleday & McClure company will publish immediately, under the title of "From Sea to Sea," an authorized edition of the collected works of travel which Mr. Rudyard Kipling has written at different times between 1890 and 1898. The book will include hitherto unpublished matter as well as an accurate text for the time of the "American Notes," with "Letters of Mark," "The City of Dreadful Night," etc.

A Conan Doyle's new novel, "A Dust With an Occasional Bell," is a story in which the author has felt a peculiar interest. The scene is laid in London and the story is of a daughter of the deceased physician, in proof that her father discovered, applied and published a theory which, more than ten years later, Prof. Schenck gave to the world as his own. The title of the work is "The Secret of St. Peter's." The author, Dr. Samuel H. Terry, J. S. Oyster Publishing Company, New York. Cloth, 81c.

PLANS FOR SEASON'S WORK. Burlington to Expend Large Sums in Improving Its System. According to an announcement from the engineering department of the Burlington road at Chicago the plans for the improvement of the Burlington road in this city this year have been completed. The plan entails a heavy outlay of money. The elevation of tracks between Western avenue to the city limits of Chicago has already been completed and will be completed within sixty days.

All of the Chicago roads are elevating their tracks into the city as the result of an ordinance requiring it to be done. Some heavy grades in Illinois are to be reduced, and the Chicago road is to be straightened in the main line. Thirty-five miles of double track will also be laid in Iowa. A new line will be built from Grant City to Albany, Mo., and two new towns will be established on the line. A new bridge across the Des Moines river is in the plans for the year. This is all outside the work planned for Nebraska, which includes extension of the line already mentioned.

PICTURES FOR THE SCHOOLS. Scenes of Places and Portraits of Persons Famous in Literature and History. Teachers and pupils of the public schools are availing themselves of the use of pictures as an aid to the regular courses of study. The pictures are issued by a publishing house for 1 cent apiece, and in small compass represent scenes of places and portraits of men and women famous in literature and history. They have been very successful in impressing upon the minds of children the lessons that are taught in the public school courses, and for that reason hundreds of them are being ordered. School children are given an opportunity to secure them if they wish. The pictures are about 8 1/2 inches in size. Teachers are paying for the pictures in advance. The pictures are in the schools out of their own pockets.

People who have once taken DeWitt's Little Early Risers will never have anything else. They are the famous little granular torpid liver and all irregularities of the system. Try them and you will always use them.

Advertising the Nebraska Farms. Nebraska generous advertising in the April issue of the Corn Belt. Many of the pictures in this number are of winter scenes in the state. The frontispiece is a farm in a different county, showing substantial barns and live stock, with a covering of snow on the ground. A sod house and its sequel, a dirt frame house, are given as an example of Nebraska county prosperity. A residence in Aurora and a street scene in Hastings are also given. An example of artificial irrigation in southeastern Nebraska is shown in a good picture, with two or three pretty irrigation canals in the foreground. A dirt frame depot station at Western, Saline county, is piled up with freight just received, also finds a place in the paper. Many of the prize contributors to Nebraska people, giving reasons why one should locate in the state, are published in this number of the Corn Belt.

Military Transportation. Captain John Baxter, acting quartermaster of the Department of the Missouri, has awarded the contracts for hauling two battalions of the Sixteenth Infantry to San Francisco. The Battalion of the Corn Belt, from Fort Crook, it being understood that the Rock Island is to have one train and the Missouri Pacific and Santa Fe will each have one. The Battalion of the Corn Belt at Jefferson barracks will have its transportation arranged for by the depot quartermaster at St. Louis. Nothing is known when the regiment will be ordered away.

NEW HIGH SCHOOL FEATURES

Extensive Scientific Laboratories and Manual Training Department.

SOME IDEAS OF SUPERINTENDENT PEARSE

Rooms Can Be Provided for Proposed New Departments, Which with Equipment, Will Cost Not Over $30,000.

Extensive and well equipped scientific laboratories and a manual training department may be made features of the new high school building, the construction of which is now being planned by Superintendent of Schools Pearse. It is stated that these departments shall receive considerable attention and a number of the members of the Board of Education are with him.

This furnishes one of the problems that the school officials must next solve. A beginning has already been made on the solution, the committee on High school being instructed to determine the amount that shall be set aside out of the building fund for the use of the department mentioned. The amount will be kept as low as possible, for whatever it is means that so much less shall be expended upon the High school proper, for the school officials seem to be quite unanimous that this expense for special departments must come out of the bond.

Superintendent Pearse has studied the matter, and has some well defined ideas upon it. For example, he thinks that seven rooms should be set aside in the new building as scientific laboratories. Three of these are to form the physical laboratory, two the biological laboratory and two the chemical laboratory. Then he believes that one of the main rooms in the new building, the use of the manual training department, in his opinion the west forty feet of the 200 feet length of the building, the entire width of 100 feet and all three stories within this space should be turned over to the department.

As to the cost of these features of the building, he can only estimate it from what other cities have expended for similar departments. He would not say that other cities of Omaha's size spent $5,000 and $10,000 for the equipment of the laboratories. He would say that the cost of other cities of Omaha's size spent $5,000 and $10,000 for the equipment of the laboratories. He would say that the cost of other cities of Omaha's size spent $5,000 and $10,000 for the equipment of the laboratories.

WITNESS MAKES HIS ESCAPE. Lets Himself from a Jail Window by Means of Sheets Tied Together. Assisted by sheets knotted together, John Fitzpatrick made his escape from the rooms adjoining the matron's department in the city jail sometime Monday night. His escape was not discovered until morning.

Fitzpatrick was being held as a witness against John Achatz, a saloon keeper, whom he accused of assault and battery. Fitzpatrick informed the police that he had some trouble with Achatz, who struck him and knocked him down. In falling his head struck the iron railing at the base of the bar.

for his appearance. He was sent upstairs, where witnesses are usually kept. He sat around the room of the matron all day Monday and did not appear uneasy or anxious to get out. When night came he retired to his bunk off the main room. Not anticipating any desire on his part to escape, no watch was placed over him. During the night he climbed out of his room, tied a couple of sheets together and tore open the window, through which he lowered himself to the ground.

WORTHINGTON'S COADJUTOR

Several Prominent Clergymen Are Mentioned for the Important Position.

Interest in the selection of a coadjutor to Bishop Worthington in the diocese of Nebraska is growing, and the session of the council to be held in this city May 19 promises to be replete with friendly rivalry. The clergymen in the diocese have their individual ideas of the kind of man who ought to be selected, and are already in some instances trying to impress their views upon others who may have a voice in making the selection.

Among those mentioned in connection with the position of coadjutor are Dean Campbell Fair of Trinity cathedral, Rev. George E. Wark, formerly rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd in this city, but now located at Council Bluffs, Rev. J. P. Dwyer, also formerly attached to the Church of the Good Shepherd, but now in Washington; Rev. Clay Garrett of Portland, Ore., Father Huntington of New York and several others from outside the state. The delegation from Trinity cathedral parish has been instructed to vote for Dean Fair, and it is understood some of the other parishes out in the state will support him. There will be between twenty and twenty-five clergymen in the council and between thirty and fifty lay delegates. It will require a majority to elect provided two-thirds of the membership of the council is present, and if less than that number is in attendance a two-thirds vote will be necessary.

HUPES FOR COMMUTATION

Henry Bolin is in Excellent Health, but Worries About His Family.

Henry Bolin, the defaulting city treasurer of Omaha now serving a nineteen-year term in the penitentiary at Lincoln, is in excellent health and looks decidedly better than he did when he was first imprisoned. County Commissioner Hofeld, a warm friend of the ex-treasurer, called on him at the penitentiary the other day, and he says that but for his mental anxiety his physical condition is excellent. Bolin told him that he was feeling exceptionally well, but he was continually worrying on account of his family. He seems to think that he is doing well, but he is continually worrying on account of his family. He seems to think that he is doing well, but he is continually worrying on account of his family.

HAVE A TALK WITH CUDAHY

Willing to Assist in Straightening Out Bank Clearings Muddle.

THINKS SOUTH OMAHA NATIONAL CORRECT

Committee of Five Is to Be Appointed from the Commercial Club to Interview the Various Bankers.

At the weekly meeting of the executive committee of the Commercial club the question of bank clearings was again discussed. Chairman Martin reported that he and several other members of the club had visited Mr. Cudahy and had a long talk with him. He stated that Mr. Cudahy expressed his willingness to do all in his power toward remedying the present condition. Mr. Cudahy believed, however, that the position of the South Omaha National bank was correct, and that an alteration would be made only at a cost to it of something like $15,000 per year. He would meet the directors of the bank, however, and see what he could do toward securing a solution of the difficulty. Mr. Benson of the Omaha Real Estate exchange was present and reported at some length on the investigation made by him and H. T. Clarke. He said he believed the matter could be arranged satisfactorily because, as near as he could learn, the old system involved no change of funds, the balances being made by check. The question was finally disposed of by authorizing Chairman Martin to appoint a committee of five members of the club to visit the banks and see what could be done toward settling the difficulty.

L. C. Harding, secretary of the Omaha Board of Trade, filed an objection to the large bulletin board used in the Commercial club rooms. He said it was filled with celluloid cards, which would ignite instantly if a match were struck near it. The matter was referred to the secretary, a committee consisting of J. P. Carpenter, C. M. Wilhelm and J. H. Dumont was appointed to make arrangements for the reception of the Baptists who will pass through the city May 17 on their way to their national meeting in San Francisco. The Baptists of Omaha intend to give them a banquet at the Millard, as they will be in the city four hours, and the Commercial club will endeavor to arrange for a carriage ride. The secretary was authorized to learn what he could concerning the erection of a Catholic hospital which is being talked of and make a formal report to the club as it could lend any assistance in its power.
