In the meantime Pennsylvania and Cornell were having as pretty a fight for second place as has ever been seen on the course. Time and time again the Cornell crew put a little more back in the stroke and sent the mose of its boat even with that of the Quakers. But it was quite apparent that there was little chance of it being held there. Ward's men were rowing in magnificent form, while Cornell was not yet rowing with the Cornell reserve force. Its work was being done spasmodically, and the men were seemingly making a desperate effort to get to the front and stay there long enough to dishearten their opponents. When the Wisconsin crew had reached the mile and a quarter point it eased off a triffe in the stroke rowing for two or three minutes at 31. At the same time Cornell picked up the stroke and shoved its bow's nose slightly ahead of Pennsylvania and overlapping the stern of the Wieconsin shell, "Cornell, I vell." came from thousands of throats on the observation train and the hope arose that the Cornell crew was going to the front The control of the co Pennsylvania's boat, which had been lagging a half length behind Cornell, shot up level with the Cornell boat while Columbia, making a desperate effort, placed the nose of its shell near Pennsylvania's stern. At this point it was one of the most beau tiful races imaginable, the four crews rowing with great regularity and all of them with a clean, neat stroke. Again, as they neared the mile and a half point, Cornell's boat came up even with the Pennsylvania shell, but was unable to catch Wisconsin, which now had a lead over the two crews of three-quarters of a length and was still going. started. class, trotting: L. Then the see-sawing began again, Cornell and Pennsylvania alternately forging the nose of their boats ahead of each other in a desperate effort to maintain the second place, while the wonderful western crew, with the inescribable stroke, with the much-criticised form, kept its shell a boat length in the van. Poor Columbia struggled three boat length behind, rowing with all the power that there was in the boat, what they must have known was the losing race.

Badgers formed a group about Captain Cornell Only Lasts for Two Miles and Sutherland and shook his hand and then they fairly hugged each other. Their enthusiasm was unbounded, although they were very much disappointed at not finishing first. The eight were unanimous, however, in relieving their coxswain from all blame for steering them out of their course. The little steersman himself, J. G. Dillon was not so easy. On a perfectly even keel, by name, felt very much depressed about with the bodies going well back together the matter though he made a good defense and the heads seeming as if they would for his action.

Steersman Defends His Course.

"Just as we were passing under the big bridge," he said, "I noticed a large berry crate floating right ahead of us hard on our port bow. In a few seconds we would have struck it and in order to avert a disastrous collision I veered sharply toward the shore, going so far out of our course that I realized that if I were to attempt to get back again the movement would probably cost us the half length that we were then in the lead of Pennsylvania and looking down among the small boats inside of the course and seeing what appeared to be a chance to pass through them and reach the finish I resolved to keep the shell as it was then headed and take the chance. Of course the maneuver cost us the race, but I am sure that I did the best that was to be done under the circumstauces." After Coxswain Dillon had said this the rest of the crew crowded around him and patted the little fellow on the back.

'You did all right, old man, and we'll stand by you," they exclaimed in a chorus. "We feel that we have a right to be elated over the showing that we made today," said Captain Sutherland. "To use a race track phrase, we were 'rank outsiders,' as the betting showed. We came down here from the west for the purpose of winning this race, and we went into the contest confident of victory. If we were destined to be beaten, we are glad it was by a crew that had already proved its right to be called champions. At the same time I feel that we would have finished first had not our coxswain been obliged to steer out of his course. It was a fair, square race, and we are satisfied in every particular." Summary of the Race.

 Second Brush with Defender Shows Up the New Boat Well.
 NEWPORT, R. I., June 27.—In a good, whol'sale breeze the new cup defender, Columbia, and Defender, champion of 1895, had a second and more thorough test of their relative speed than in the light air of Sunday and again the new boat proved that in windward work it could both out-point and outfoot the older craft, Both boats carried mainsail, forestay sail, jib and working topsails and for an equal length of time the two used small jib top-sails. The steady southwest breeze was just strong enough to heel the boats pret-tilly. The racers beat to windward in a general southwesterly direction for almost two hours and traveled fully ten miles to-ward Block Island from Brenton's reef, and when sheets were eased off for the run boats to Newport Columbia was between two and three minutes in the lead.
 At 12:30 Defender jibbed the boom over to starboard. The wind began to die down about this time and at 1 o'clock the helm was put amidship and Columbia's great white spinnaker was sent aloft. When everything was ready a pull on the tackle broke out a couple of stops and, the wind catching in the cravas. Spread the enor-mous sail for the first time. Despite the fact that the breeze had fallen off consid-erably, Columbia took a jump and traveled along at ten knots an hour under the great spread of canvas. The pinnaker was used but a few minutes, when orders were given to take it in and it was down and the boom for the time the order was giver.
 Defender did not run back to Newport with Columbia, but remained outside cruis-ing up and down.

CRIMSON WINS IN FIRST INNING

Third Game Will Be Necessary to De eide the Championship.

cide the Championship. NEW HAVEN. June 27.—The Harvard base ball nine this afternoon defeated the Yale nine. The game was won in the first inning, when Harvard scored three played on the whole, better ball than Har-vard, though the team work of the visit-fors was decidedly better and Yale was iamentably weak at bat. Said to Be an Alloy of Aluminum and Nicket. LONDON, June 27.-It is said in authoritative circles that the alloy of which the Shamrock is constructed above the water line is composed of three-parts aluminum and one part nickel. Its deck is also said to be constructed of sheets of the same metal, three-sitteenths of an inch thick, thus effecting a saving of about two-tenths in the weight of the deck alone and stiffening the yacht's hull more effectively than could be accomplished with wood. It is considered that yesterday's accident proved the strength of the deck alone and stiffening the yacht's hull more effectively than could be accomplished with wood. It is considered that yesterday's accident proved the strength of the mital, for while the force of the impact was enough to swing the yacht around about four points, the only damage done to it by the vessel which collided with the Shamrock was a dent about half an inch deep, with no sign of cracking on the surface of the metal. The Shamrock's mast was stepped today and the fitting of its spars and standing and running gear is proceeding rapidly. The ength of its lower mast is given as 106 feet. The topmast is said to measure sev-enty feet and it is reported its boom is 110 feet long. The up challenger will start for South-ampton today. Numbers of people visited the West India docks for the purpose of seeing the Shamrock, but only those in pos-session of permits were allowed close in-spection of the yacht. Among those who visited the cup challenger today was Lord Durraven. The officers and crew, number-ing in all about forty men, now have com-plete charge of the vessel. Youthful Cricketer is Tireless. E. Ballou and Vice. lot 6, Archer Place.). D. Fisher to J. H.
