For the uninitiated the statement simply means a lodge of the order of the Knights of the Khorassan was instituted and 200 candidates, or tyros, were initiated. It is the first lo ge established in the state and to observe the occasion suitably there was an elaborate celebration, a street parade and an "open tion of the ritual, with settings and paraphernalla said to be the most gorgeous and complete in the annals of the order. It will be unique also in that, in imitation of the three ancient grand masters, there will be deposited on the snow-capped summit of Pike's Peak treasures sacred to the craft and on that spot a triangular tablet will be erected to proclaim to future ages that the mystic trowel has been wielded there in the service of the order. The name of each craftsman and candidate will be included in the deposit.

providing an artistic and comfortable gown for large figures, is that of a gingham house gown shown on this page. The front of the gown fits smoothly over the shoulders and has shaped under-arm gores and one shallow dart. The long boxpleats that begin under the revers are attached at the skirt about four inches below the waist line and stitched to a depth of twelve inches, after which the pleat falls free and its fullness mingles with that of the skirt, an obvious advantage for stout figures. The back of the gown has a pretty curving yoke, into which are fitted two wide box-pleats that exactly meet under the center point. Under the yoke the gown is fitted easily to the figure by center and side back seams, from which springs the fullness that is carried into the back pleats. As these pleats proceed down the skirt their width increases, until they are half as wide again at the foot of the skirt as they are at the top. A ribbon beit is attached at the center seam at the back and is brought forward under the pleat and fastened in a bow at the center of the front. The sleeves are of the prevailing shape and extend (in one place) over the hand, where they are slashed to a sufficient depth to give it freedom of movement.

To make this garment in any material between twenty-seven and thirty inches wide will require fourteen yards.
